BOMB KILLS SIX PARADERS

ALLIES' SHELLS RAKE GERMANS; NEW DRIVE NEAR

Lull in Infantry Attacks Forerunner of Finish Battle in Somme.

KAISER'S ARMY READY.

EUROPEAN WAR SUMMARY

Russians drive Teutons back further in battle for Lemberg and Kovel, capturing 12,000; Germans repel Slavs on Riga front.

London reports air raid on Suez as British cavalry engages Moslems thirty miles from the canal.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, July 22.—While the censorship has again drawn a blanket over the allies' activities on the western front and the official bulletins record nothing beyond scattered and minor engagements and a heavy artillery fire from [illegible], the paucity of news deceives no one here.

All recognize that the British are now massing their forces for the assault on the third and strongest German line before Bapaume.

The presence, reported from Berlin, of British cavalry on the lines indicates what may shortly happen. The present temporary quiet may represent the lull before the most important events of the allied offensive. Cavalry can only be of use when trench fighting is over and the enemy has been driven into the open.

AT LAST GERMAN DEFENSES.

The line of trenches which the British now face is understood to be the last of the German "permanent defense," those tremendous works of cement and iron which represent months of labor, millions of dollars in money, and the most highly developed skill of military engineering science. Beyond lies open country [illegible] for cavalry.

The report of the intense bombardment which is bathing the trenches on both sides along the British front in a flood of steel and gas, may mean either or both of two things—a preparation by the British to renew their offensive and a preparation by the Germans to launch another desperate counter attack in a final effort to keep their front from being pierced.

GERMANS PLAN ATTACK.

It is taken for granted here that the British are planning fresh efforts. Gen. Haig's report that the Germans are using [illegible] of explosives and tear producing [illegible], and both British and French repulsed German attacks, which, while not [illegible], may have been in the nature of [illegible], creates the belief that the Germans, too, contemplate an attack.

Which will be launched first and how great a force the Germans have been able to gather can only be guessed. The British are confident of holding their gains, confident, too, that the German charge will break down as the last one did, and that the British will again sweep forward, and soon, for the first time since the [illegible] have their enemy in the open except for such defenses as can be thrown up during the battle.

WILL BE FINISH FIGHT.

There is no tendency to underestimate the strength which such a German effort will show. It is realized that the general staff is desperate, that unless it can check the offensive on either the east or west fronts, so that it can swing its reserves back and forth [illegible] to the threatened points, it knows that it faces a series of defeats, each greater than the last. It is expected, therefore, that it will throw into its counter attacks every ounce of strength it can muster, and that they will be carried through with even more than usual bravery and desperation.

These counter thrusts, the strategists here feel, will give the final test to the [illegible] as to the weakening of German resources. They are expected to [illegible] exactly the force that the enemy can muster. They are expected

J. Whitcomb Riley, the 'Hoosier Poet,' Dies Suddenly

AUTHOR OF POE HOAX

O mystery of song!
—Riley.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 22.—James Whitcomb Riley, the Indiana poet, died this evening.

Mr. Riley suffered from the extreme heat all today, but was thought to be resting easy tonight. He asked his nurse for a drink of water at 11 o'clock. When she returned with it he was dead. Death was due to a stroke of paralysis.

October of last year Riley day was celebrated and it was made a holiday in Indiana. Despite the fact that celebrations in his honor had been numerous, the poet was as much interested in it as if it was his first experience of the sort.

Gets an Enormous Mail.

Like the little boy who can't wait until Christmas morning to open his presents, Mr. Riley couldn't wait to open the piles and piles of letters that were bundled up on a table in his little office on the top floor of the Bobbs Merrill building—letters from every state in the Union, letters addressed to him in all sorts of handwritings, one with no address except "James Whitcomb Riley, United States"; post cards from every member of a class in a little school, and all of them brimming over with the love for their poet; telegrams from old friends; felicitations from Brand Whitlock and Henry Van Dyke from Belgium.

In his address of welcome at the celebration Gov. Ralston said:

"We call him our own, and yet the sweep of his spirit is such that we cannot alone claim or contain him. He belongs to all the people and to the ages, for he is, in the broadest and finest sense, a poet of humanity. I speak for all the people of Indiana when I bid you welcome."

The poet made a fitting reply.

CAREER OF RILEY.

James Whitcomb Riley, born of the middle west, sang the joys, sorrows, fancies and humors of its folk, largely in its own dialect. The world was so touched by his inspiration and the realism of his homely symbols that he was one of the few that, devoting their lives to poetry, gained a fortune.

Mr. Riley was peculiarly sensitive as to the advance of age and evaded inquiries as to the date of his birth, but the most accurate information available indicates that he was born in 1853.

"Should you ask his age," one of his friends said, "he would answer, 'This side of forty,' and leave you to guess which side."

Sign Painter, No Lawyer.

The poet was the son of Reuben A. Riley, a lawyer and political speaker of Greenfield, Ind. The boy could not be brought to the dull routine of school days, but he was wise in the lore of streams and fields. His mother, who was Elizabeth Marine before her marriage, was a writer of verse and Riley in later life attributed some of his impracticability to her.

Instead of preparing for the practice of law, as his father wished, the son turned itinerant sign painter. For ten years he roved through the Ohio valley, painting signs on fences. He had the trick of the brush and pencil and cleverly drew sketches illustrating the virtues of merchandise.

He was naturally musical and shone as a fiddler in the villages at which his party stopped at night. He played for dances and at concerts in country hotels. He wrote rhymes, which sometimes found their way into country newspapers.

Perpetrates Poe Hoax.

He led this cheerful, free and easy life late in the '70s, then he took employment as a reporter on a newspaper at Anderson, Ind. In 1877, for the purpose, as he said, of proving that he could write poetry of value, he perpetrated the Poe hoax which for years was a literary sensation. He wrote a poem in the style of Edgar Allen Poe to which he gave the characteristic title of "Leonanie," and it was offered to the public as a hitherto unpublished product of the genius of Poe. One of the stanzas was:

"Leonanie—angels named her,
And they took the light
Of the laughing stars and framed her
In a smile of white.
And they made her hair of gloomy
Midnight, and her eyes of bloomy
Moonshine, and they brought her to me
In the solemn night."

In some quarters the poem was accepted as genuine; in others it was denounced as

NYMPH OF DUNES MYSTERY SOLVED

Woman's Revolt Against Man-Ruled World Makes Mrs. A. M. Gray a Hermit.

Revolt against a man ruled world is nographer in the University of Chicago. of the Sand Dunes.

"I am Mrs. A. M. Gray. I was a stenographer in the University of Chicago. I found out that men stenographers are paid more than women. I quit and decided to go back to nature."

This was the simple explanation of the comely, dark haired woman of the dreary Indiana wastes. Yesterday her fame went broadcast as the Mystery Woman of the Hut in the sands.

Lake Plunges Draw Attention.

Fishermen had seen her white figure flashing in the waves as, twice a day, she took her plunge in the waters of Lake Michigan, were they chill with the winds of Canada or tempered by the breezes of the south.

Probably her privacy would never have been menaced had not women of the fisher folk objected to her nymphlike plunges twice a day in the lake. But they did object and yesterday a sturdy fisherman paid a visit to the hut of Mrs. Gray, feminist hermit.

Then the fisherman asked a few questions, hoping to get the woman's story, but she produced a revolver and bade him leave.

Fisherman's Wife Tells Story.

Mrs. Mathilda Burton, a fisherman's wife, who lives nearest to the shack, gave all the information she has concerning the mysterious woman.

"This Mrs. Gray, and we hardly believe that is her right name," she said, "has been a mystery around here for a long time. She has lived near here several years. Not until last winter did she make an abode in anything that resembles a human habitation. For years she lived in a wigwam beneath two great trees.

"She must have had a terrible time, with only the little shelter afforded by the wigwam, and it is wonderful that she has lived through the awful cold. It must have got so bad that she had to seek shelter, and when the fisherman who used to live in the shack up there left she went into his deserted hut.

She Keeps No Mirror.

"She wears her hair bobbed. She has no mirror and knows when her hair is growing too long only by the length of the shadow it casts on the ground. When she thinks it needs bobbing she cuts it by the shadow. Her winter dress consists of a short, coarse skirt, big boots, a ragged waist, and a little cap. In the summer she wears just and old light dress and the ragged waist. She never wears shoes or stockings.

"She cooks outside her hut. She has a few boxes which she keeps scrupulously clean and uses for chairs and a table. She has a sort of fireplace, and her only utensils are on old coffee pot and a cup which she found on the railroad tracks.

"She must have quite a bit of money. At different times she has presented to the store a $5 and a $10 bill and several checks. She makes the money by picking berries and selling wild animals.

Her University Life.

"She says that when she was at the University of Chicago she grew discontented with the way things were run. She was always crazy about the lake and people would not let her go down in the night and swim.

"'It is hard to make her talk at all. Generally she will not listen, but chases people away with a revolver if they even come near. She will not take assistance and shuns discourse of any kind with all. She is still crazy about the water and walks only at the lake shore in the sand."

Mrs. Burton said she told Mrs. Gray that she must not bathe in public. She also showed her how to make a dress like the one she wore.

In the hut the mystery woman has two boxes of bottles. The neighbors think she makes wine from the berries she picks and sells it. People mock her and call her "Nellie Gray." She swims daily between 9 and 11 in the forenoon and 5 and 6 in the afternoon.

Austin Law, a Negro boy, 17 years old, of Little Rock, Ark., with a bank roll of $2.50, invested the same in bright futures in the fortune telling parlor of Lena Bimbo, 12 West Van Buren street, last night, before he realized that fortune had slipped him by. A flat purse bethought him that fortune must be conserved, and he called the police. Lena is under arrest.

RUSSIANS PRESS TEUTON RETREAT

Slavs Go Forward in Kovel-Lemberg Campaign—Czar's Minister Resigns.

BULLETIN.

PETROGRAD, via London, July 23, 5:05 a. m.—Sergius Sazonoff, minister of foreign affairs, has resigned. He is succeeded by Boris Vladimirovitch Sturmer, the premier, who has taken over the office.

M. Sturmer retains the premiership, Alexi Khvostoff, the former minister of the interior, has been reappointed to that office, while M. Makaroff has been appointed minister of justice.

M. Sazonoff retired from the foreign ministry at his own request.

PETROGRAD, July 22.—The Russians have driven the Teutonic forces resisting them south of the River Lipa, in Volhynia near the Galician border, beyond the town of Berestechk to the west. More than 12,000 prisoners were captured by the Russians on Thursday and Friday, making a total of 26,000 captured since July 16.

Fierce engagements have taken place south of Riga, and Russian troops have penetrated the German first line at several points. The official statement by the war office tonight follows:

On the left wing of the Riga positions there have been several fierce engagements with the enemy. Our troops penetrated the enemy's first line works at several points. The artillery on both sides is engaged heavily.

Pursue Teutons Beyond River.

South of the Lipa our troops are still driving the enemy. They have passed Berestchk and have advanced further to the west.

Gen. Sakharoff on Thursday and Friday took prisoner 300 officers, including a general and a colonel, and 12,000 men, making the captures of Austro-German troops in the operations since July 16 total 26,000. . . . .

In the region of the villages of Werben and Pliasohovo, on the right bank of the Styr south of its confluence with the Lipa, we surrounded the Thirteenth Austrian landwehr regiment, which surrendered in its entirety.

In the region of Vorokhta, on the road from Delatyn to Maramos Sziget, we conquered the heights yesterday, taking prisoners and three machine guns.

On both sides of Ekau Brandenburg regiments withstood strong Russian mass attacks, which were resumed in the afternoon and continued into the night hours. All attacks broke down with the heaviest enemy losses.

Nearly Frapped by "Zero" Sleep in Sizzling July

Ice Firm Worker Seeks Relief from Heat and Gets It.

It was hot on Friday night and Michael Skiza, a workman for the Consumers' company at Wolf Lake, felt the need of a little relief.

He found a cool place in a shady corner with some hay to lie upon and fell into slumber, soothed by the twining zephyrs.

Awakes with a Chill.

Presently he half awoke with a shudder of chilly discomfort. He made a gesture as if to draw his fur coat about him more snugly and underwent some chagrin when he realized it was midsummer and he was clad in light and feathery garb. He tossed off to sleep again, but he soon was conscious with an arctic climate settling about him.

He struggled to escape the freezing grip of the Icelandic blast, but he found himself hemmed in by floes of congealing temperature. He capered about to thaw out his chilled marrow, he leaped and howled and swung his arms like a B. & O. brakeman on a string of flat cars in 40 below.

Birds Singing Outside.

In the mellow of the morn the birds were singing about him and he could almost hear the corn growing in the torrid crackle of the July heat, and yet he shivered like a nymph on a nut sundae.

He shouted some more. And Michael Zenick, early to work, unlocked the door and let him out of the icehouse in which he had been locked like a frapped Rip Van Winkle for twelve hours. He was nearly frozen to death while Chicago's 2,499,999 other inhabitants were sweltering.

Fred Lahn and his wife, 1521 Cleveland avenue, both about 65 years old, were run down and killed by a switch engine on the Grand Trunk near Ninety-fifth street and Kedzie avenue yesterday at the close of a picnic held in Evergreen park. Mr. and Mrs. Lahn were members of the picnic party made up of employés of the Hirsch-Wickwire company. They were walking on the tracks toward the depot when the engine backed down upon them.

SAN FRANCISCO BLAST IS LAID TO ANARCHISTS

MORE THAN 40 HURT.

San Francisco, Cal., July 22.—[Special.]—A bomb, exploded presumably by anarchists in protest against the preparedness parade, in which more than 50,000 participated today, killed at least six persons this afternoon at Steuart and Market streets and injured more than forty, besides inflicting lesser injuries upon many others.

The capacity of downtown hospitals was taxed to care for victims but the parade went on.

Frank Josephson, a Finnish sailor, aged 46, was arrested in connection with the outrage after he, within a few feet of the bodies of the victims, had made a stump speech lauding anarchy and saying, "This is nothing."

BOMB A DEADLY AFFAIR.

The bomb, one of the deadliest infernal machines ever put together, was left in a suitcase at the corner and exploded just as the First California regiment was passing, the line of the parade getting into full swing.

The bomb consisted of a suit case packed with explosives and crammed with nails, cartridges, slugs, and other missiles, making it more deadly than the shrapnel of European battlefields. Pieces hurled a block felled their victims.

PILE UP IN HEAPS.

Hundreds of persons were gathered at the corner beside the serried ranks of the marchers, and the missiles plowed through them. The building against which the suitcase had been left was wrecked and stores across the street partly demolished. Persons cut, half blinded, the blood streaming from their faces and bodies, ran madly through the crowd, and others, panic stricken, stumbled over the bodies of the dead and injured, piling up in heaps on the street.

WARNING FAILS TO AID.

Warning that a bomb would be hurled had been received yesterday by newspapers and others. The close watch for any move of this kind was foiled in part by the fact that the bomb was left in the suitcase instead of being thrown.

With the subsidence of the panic marchers and spectators surged back as rescuers. Bodies of men, of women, of children lay scattered about the street. The entire police resources of the district were immediately drawn on.

AMBULANCE NEAR BY.

The harbor emergency hospital ambulance was standing almost across the street from where the explosion occurred at the moment of the explosion. It had been called to carry a G. A. R. veteran, the flag bearer, who had fainted while standing in line and was then in an unconscious condition at the oil station of the Shell Oil company.

It was quickly pressed into the emergency service and other ambulances, in response to a general call, began removing the injured to hospitals and the dead to the morgues, at which places the task of identifying the victims proceeded.

The latest procurable list gives the dead as follows:

THE DEAD.

FOX, ADAM.
KNAPP, MRS. H. E., Alameda, Cal.
LAMBORN, O. H., Alameda, Cal.
LAWLER, GEORGE, Mill Valley, Cal.
PAINTER, DR. GEORGE, Berkeley, Cal.
NELSON, ARTHUR, 19, Larkspur, Cal.

PARADERS IN LINE.

In Steuart street when the blast occurred were lined up the G. A. R., the Daughters of the American Revolution, and the Nationals, waiting for their place in the parade.

The explosion tore a hole through the cement sidewalk and out of this hole were picked pieces of a leather suitcase, glass, brass nosed bullets, iron scrap, and pieces of a six inch gas pipe. The bomb, the police believe, was incased in this piece of gas pipe. The windows of many buildings were shattered.

KNOCKED OFF HIS HORSE.

Traffic Officer F. D. Gaddy was sitting on his horse near the explosion with a woman standing at his side. Gaddy was knocked off the horse and the woman hurled against the animal. People 75 feet distant were knocked down and injured. The man in charge of the Shell Oil station said the street looked as though it was filled with dead a moment after the explosion, so many people had been knocked down.

The force of the bomb was astonishing. Handfuls of empty revolver and rifle shells, blown through the crowd by the explosion, were picked up in the gutters by souvenir hunters.

PIPE BLOWN TWO BLOCKS.

A piece of lead pipe was blown two blocks into the Northwestern Pacific railroad waiting room in the Ferry building. A woman's gold watch, presumably belonging to one of the victims, was blown through the air and landed in a fruit stand a block and a half away.

Through this violence the parade wended without a break. The veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic, waiting in Stuart street to fall into line, escaped death by a hair and proceeded with the march.

"It looked as if the sidewalk went straight up into the air," said Col. Thomas F. O'Neill, former sheriff of San Francisco, who was in the line of marchers. "There was a loud noise, lots of smoke and dust and cries of wounded and shouts."

MISS GOLDMAN IN DENIAL.

Miss Emma Goldman, international woman anarchist leader, who has been lecturing in San Francisco for a week, denied that the anarchists—at least as an organization—could have been responsible for the fatal parade bomb planting.

She refused to discuss the occurrence, however.

Several theories were put forward tonight by the police. One was that the owner of the suitcase had intended to set it out along the line of the parade, but was delayed and, knowing the bomb was timed, left it standing by the side of the saloon.

One of the marchers in the parade,

NOTE TO THE PRESS WARNED OF TRAGEDY AT SAN FRANCISCO

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 22.—All the newspaper offices in San Francisco yesterday received a communication written in Roman script with an indelible pencil, many of the words being heavily underscored. The communication was signed: "The Determined Exiles from Militaristic Government. Italy, Germany, U. S., Italy, Russia, Russia." In several instances the writer repeated himself. The communication read:

"Editor: Our protests have been in vain in regards to this preparedness propaganda, so we are going to use a little direct action on the 22d, which will echo around the earth and show that Frisco really knows how and that militarism cannot be forced on us and our children without a violent protest.

"Things are going to happen to show that we will go to any extreme, the same as the controlling class, to preserve what little democracy we still have. Don't take this as a joke, or you will be rudely awakened. Awaken (sic), WE HAVE SWORN TO DO OUR DUTY TO THE MASSES AND ONLY SEND WARNINGS TO THOSE WHO ARE WISE BUT WHO ARE FORCED TO MARCH TO HOLD THEIR JOBS, AS WE WANT TO GIVE ONLY THE HYPOCRITICAL (sic), patriots who shout for war, but never go, a real taste of war.

"Kindly ask the chamber of commerce to march in a solid body, IF THEY WANT TO PROVE THEY ARE NO COWARDS. A copy has been sent to all the papers. Our duty has been done so far."

who was near the bomb when it exploded, but escaped, said:

"I was standing in a crowd right near the point where the explosion occurred. I whirled with the sound. It was like trying to dive through a tidal wave to get through the mass of men, women, and children that surged towards me."

When the parade dispersed the division of California Spanish war veterans, the division nearest the explosion, marched in a body to the city hall and threats were made in an indignation meeting that a meeting of anarchistic speakers against reparedness scheduled for tonight would be broken up.

District Attorney's View.

District Attorney Charles M. Fickert said he thought the bomb had been placed by a fanatic who had been incited to the act by listening to the speeches and arguments of those opposed to the preparedness parade. He said every effort would be made to apprehend the culprit.

Josephson, the suspect, after his arrest said that he was not an anarchist and denied having any knowledge of the bomb explosion. The handle of the suitcase which contained the explosives, together with part of the lock and pieces of clockwork, were picked up near the scene.

Mayor Lends a Hand.

Mayor Rolph, who hurried from the reviewing stand to Stewart and Market streets as soon as news of the explosion reached him, instructed every department under him to lend all assistance possible to the police and district attorney. A dragnet has been thrown out and all suspicious characters will be arrested.

The police are also investigating the recent receipt of threatening letters by certain newspapers. Postal officials declare that for the last few days post cards have been sent through the mail addressed to a number of San Francisco firms threatening them with reprisals if they permitted their employés to march in the parade.

All of these post cards were held up and were forwarded to the postmaster general in Washington before today's explosion occurred. The police believe the senders of these post cards were behind the dynamiting plot.

Two Die by Mere Chance.

The deaths of two of the bomb victims were due to a chance meeting. Howard Knapp and his wife met G. C. Lawler, a lumber salesman of their acquaintance, at the corner a few minutes before the explosion. It was their first meeting in several weeks, and they paused to chat. Lawler and Mrs. Knapp were killed outright.

The official count of the parade indicated that 51,319 persons were in line. Other counts made with the aid of mechanical devices did not run above 25,000. One of these counts was based on an average of sixteen men per line across Market street. Some lines ran twenty and some ran under sixteen.

HEIR TO ITALIAN THRONE, AGED 12, HAS SEEN A LOT

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ITALIAN ARMY, July 10.—[Correspondence.]—The most envied boy in all Italy is Humbert Nicholas Thomas Jean Marie—envied not because he is heir apparent to the Italian throne but because he is the youngest boy who has been officially permitted to see the Italian front.

This only son of King Victor Emmanuel, who is known as the Prince of Piedmont, is but 12 years old and has had some remarkable adventures. He is head of the Young Explorers of Italy, a body that corresponds to the boy scouts in America. He has gone up in aeroplanes, down in submarines, steered warships, sailed boats, shot at wild boars, and ridden cavalry horses.

Proud of Visits to Front.

But the things he is proudest of are his visits to the front, for he has been here not once but many times. His father, who has been at the front since the war began, as a matter of duty, felt it was risky business letting his only son get within reach of Austrian shells and bullets, aside rom the usual hazards of rough army life.

Once at the front, young Humbert displayed the same fearlessness that has characterized his father during his stay there. Indeed, he liked the front so much that he has since got permission to visit it again and again, until now his happy smile and his sailor uniform of blue serge have become known to the soldiers all along the front.

Inclines to Mischief Too.

The young prince is not averse to some of the mischief characteristic of the American boy. It is related that when Lloyd Griscom was American ambassador at Rome and was received at the palace of the Quirinal in an informal way by the king, young Humbert on one occasion offered to show the ambassador some of the queer nooks in the ancient gardent of the quirinal, nooks built there during the time when it was the summer residence of the popes. As the ambassador was observing the quaintness of the gardens, in going through a narrow path he was surprised to find himself sprayed with water leaping right up out of the path. His boy guide had lead the ambassador purposely into the path, where a hidden fountain was made to work by the simple process of stepping upon the stones.

"Just one of his tricks," the king apologized. "The little rascal pulls the buttons off my uniform coat sometimes when he comes up to kiss me."

BORDEN OFF TO THE ARCTIC TO BRING BACK STEFANSSON.

Chicagoan Sails in New Ship from Seattle, Wash., This Week—Plans to Meet Explorer.

Seattle, Wash., July 22.—[Special.]—John Borden, millionaire Chicago sportsman, will sail for the arctic on Tuesday to the relief of the Stefansson expedition. Borden's new schooner, Great Bear, has been completed for the voyage, which will be from Puget sound to Banks land, far east of Herschel island. Here the party expects to meet Stefansson and escort him beyond the artic region.

Borden has Louis L. Lane as a partner in his venture, and he also will be accompanied by Norris Bokum of Chicago. It is probable the schooner will not be able to get out before the ice sets in, and the party is prepared to spend the winter north of the continent. In this contingency Bokum and Borden, however, will travel over the snow 1,600 miles, from Herschel island to Fairbanks and the Yukon river, as Borden wants to be in Chicago by Christmas.

The Great Bear will be used in whaling and trading in the north. This year stations will be established along the northern Canadian coast, with a number of aeroplane hangars and supplies.

Active coöperation of employers was shown in the application of more than 25,000 employers for 107,000 workers. More than 184,000 persons applied for work.

ALLIES' SHELLS RAKE GERMANS

Lull in Infantry Attacks Forerunner of New Drive in the Somme Region.

to prove murderous and horribly costly to stop. But for all that there is no doubt that they will be held, and that when they fall back the British will still have force to follow and to carry through the great offensive they have planned.

ONLY LULL IN OFFENSIVE.

The German claim made today, that the offensive had been stopped, is laughed at here. It is pointed out that there have been two such claims made before since the offensive started, and that both have speedily been proved false.

Most of the news from the front today comes from the German report. Besides the statement that the British "were unable to resume their large, uniform thrust," Berlin tells of clearing out a nest of British in the Foureaux woods and capturing "some dozens," and says that offensives by British or French have failed at Massiges and near Fleury, in the Verdun sector.

The French, on the other hand, report a successful attack at Fleury and tell of German bombardment of that place and near the Furin wood, also near Verdun. They have repulsed German thrusts near St. Die in the Vosges, where a strong attack was made, and at Moulin-Sous-Toutvent and south of Damloup.

The first sign of activity for over a year near Belfort comes in a report of the bombing of the town by German aeroplanes.

BRITISH WAR REPORT.

The British official report on the day's operations says:

The artillery on both sides has been more active during the past twelve hours and British front line supporting trenches have in several places been heavily bombarded with gas and tear shells.

Nothing of importance has occurred.

German War Report.

BERLIN, July 22.—The German army headquarters staff in the official statement issued today claims that the great uniform Anglo-French attack on the Somme sector in France has been abandoned. The text of the German official statement follows:

In the Somme sector the enemy has been unable to resume his large, uniform thrust after his defeat of the previous day. Separate attacks were repulsed without effort or stopped at their outset.

While cleaning out a British nest in Foureaux wood several dozen prisoners were taken and nine machine guns were captured. Lively artillery duels continue without interruption.

Early in the morning a French attack on several fronts north of Massiges failed.

On both sides of the Meuse the artillery bombardment has temporarily increased to a higher tensity.

Fleury Attacks Fail.

Yesterday morning and last night enemy attacks in the Fleury sector failed.

German patrols captured fourteen men in a French position northwest of St. Die. On both sides there was lively activity night and day.

Several of the enemy's air attacks caused only small military damage, but losses among civilians. At Laon three children were killed and one woman severely wounded.

The enemy lost seven aeroplanes, four of them south of Bapaume, one east of Arras, one west of Combes, and one near Roye. Lieut. Wintgens disabled his tenth and Lieut. Hoehndorff his eleventh aeroplane. The emperor bestowed the Pour le Merite on First Lieut. von Althaus, who conquered a biplane near Roye. British cavalry was employed in the offensive thrust along the Somme front on Thursday, according to yesterday's German army headquarters' bulletin. Its use was futile, however, according to the statement, which said:

Fight Six Months at Verdun.

PARIS, July 22.—Six months ago tonight the German crown prince began his battering of Verdun. Almost continuously since Jan. 22 that assault has continued, but Verdun is still under the French tricolor.

The Germans began their offensive at a point about seven miles distant from the city. In six months they have advanced to within about three miles.

There the French have stood them off in a series of combats of almost unbelievable ferocity.

French Night War Report.

The official statement issued by the war office tonight reads:

On the right bank of the Meuse we made some progress in the region of Fleury and captured seventy prisoners. There was no event of importance on the rest of the front.

Contrary to the statement made in the communication of this morning, all the French aeroplanes which took part in the bombardment of the Metz-Sablons station have returned to our lines.

French Day War Report.

The morning communication says:

Between the Oise and the Aisne we dispersed a strong reconnoitering party of the enemy in the region of Moulin-sous-Toutvent. In the Argonne we exploded a mine with good results at Bolante. A surprise attack of the enemy against a small position at Fille Morte was repulsed.

On the right bank of the Meuse [Verdun front], there was a violent bombardment of the sectors of Fleury and Fumin wood. An attack by the enemy on a trench south of Damloup was beaten back by our fire.

In the Vosges, after a spirited bombardment, the Germans delivered an attack at 11 o'clock last night against our positions northwest of St. Die. It was repulsed with heavy losses.

ENGLISH WOMEN IN HUGE PARADE URGE AID IN WAR

"They Also Serve Who Stay at Home and Work," Pennant Slogans Read.

LONDON, July 22.—"They also serve who stay at home and work," was the slogan borne home to Londoners today by a monster procession of women which paraded Whitehall and nearby thoroughfares appealing for more thorough coöperation by women in the business of war.

There were thousands of women in the parade. It was under the auspices of the Woman's Social and Political union—which organization not so many years ago was harried by police, branded as an enemy of governmental forces and the object of a war of extermination because it included the militant suffragettes in its ranks.

Cheer Women to the Echo.

Today the W. S. P. U. was cheered to the echo as the ten sections of women, many picturesquely attired in men's working clothes, marched down the London streets.

The demonstration was to bring home graphically to London woman's interest in the war and to stage an appeal for more women munitions workers to make the shells. It was to voice a demand for more vigorous protection of British war prisoners, more drastic steps for the internment of enemy aliens, and the cancellation of naturalization papers of pro-Germans in England. Finally, it was the women's cry for no compromise in any peace that might be in the making.

Women Clad in Khaki.

Most popular of all the parade's features to the Londoners was a tableau of banners bearing slogans expressing these sentiments, and a section where women marchers wore the uniform of the allies. In another detachment marched manfully many women munitions workers, clad in men's overalls and preceded by a huge banner with the motto, "They also serve who stay at home and work."

BRITISH SEIZE RAILWAY IN GERMAN EAST AFRICA.

Two Towns Also Captured When Teutons Are Driven Across River—Two Steamers Found Scuttled.

LONDON, July 22, 7:22 p. m.—British troops operating in the northeastern section of German East Africa have occupied Muheza and Amani and have captured the whole of the Usambara railway, according to an official announcement made here today.

The official statement follows:

Lieut. Gen. Smuts states that the enemy, who attempted to interfere with his communications west of Tanga, has been driven over the Pangani river.

The towns of Muheza and Amani have been captured and the whole of the Usambara railway has been taken.

On the southern borders of Lake Victoria Nyanza we are pursuing the enemy who escaped from Muanza. We found the German steamers Muanza and Otto Heinrich scuttled in Stuhlmann sound. Much booty was taken from the vessels, which can be raised easily and utilized.

ITALIANS GAIN ON ALPS FRONT

Rome Reports Capture of Several Positions—Pressure Is Maintained.

ARTILLERY IS ACTIVE.

ROME, July 22.—The following announcement was made today at the war office:

Between the Adige and the Brenta the artillery was active and our infantry maintained pressure over the whole line. We made attacks over rough ground between the Brenta and Piave, in the Dolomite region. In successful encounters at the head of the Cia, Vanoi, and Cismon valleys we took 253 prisoners, including nine officers and some machine guns.

We captured and consolidated the Rolle pass. In the Sexten valley we stormed Elser peak, 2,669 meters, at the junction of the Boden and Bacher torrents, and consolidated our new positions.

In the Upper Piave we occupied another summit, thereby obtaining complete possession of Cima Vallone.

Yesterday hostile batteries shelled Cortina d'Ampezzo. We retaliated by bombarding houses at Toblach and Sillian, in the Drave valley.

On the Isonzo front the artillery of the enemy was more active. Our artillery replied to the bombardment.

ARABIAN REBELS CAPTURE MEDINA; TURKS LOSE 2,500.

Leader Now Bombarding Barracks at Taif, Which Are Expected to Capitulate Shortly.

LONDON, July 22.—Authentic news has been received in Cairo, Egypt says Reuter's correspondent there, that serious engagements took place recently near Medina, Arabia, between Arab revolutionists and the Turkish garrison. The garrison made a sortie against the Arabs, who were besieging the town from the southern side.

In the fighting that followed the Turks are said to have lost 2,500 men, while the losses of the Arab forces under command of the Grand Sherif of Mecca, leader of the rebels, were 500. The Arabs captured a large quantity of arms.

Sherif Abdulah now is bombarding the barracks of Taif, where the Turks are still holding out. The rebels, however, expect that the garrison at Taif will capitulate soon.

(An uprising against the Turks in Arabia was reported in a dispatch from London on June 22. The grand sherif of Mecca, the rebel leader, is the chief magistrate of Mecca. The rebels, according to previous reports from Cairo, have captured Mecca, and Jiddah, and Kinfuda, ports on the Red sea.

ALAN SEEGER, AMERICAN IN FRENCH ARMY, MEETS DEATH

Writer Whose Vivid Stories Have Appeared in Newspapers of U. S. Killed in Action.

PARIS, July 22.—Alan Seeger, the young American member of the French Foreign legion, whose vivid word pictures of the fighting from the Marne to the Somme have appeared from time to time in American newspapers, was killed a few days ago in an attack on the Somme line, according to a letter received here from his corporal, who is an Englishman.

The letter, which was written three or four days ago, states that the Foreign legion faced the Imperial Prussian guards in heavy fighting when Seeger fell. No details are given of his death. Seeger was 28 years old on May 22, 1916.

RUSSIANS IN THE CAUCASUS ADVANCE TOWARD FOL RIVER

Dislodge Turks from Fortified Positions West of Platana on the Black Sea.

PETROGRAD, July 22.—The war office tonight gave out the following report on Caucasus operations:

West of Platana on the Black sea coast we dislodged the Turks from a series of fortified positions and advanced several versts in the direction of the Fol river. Among the prisoners taken here was Zia Bey, commandant and organizer of the tribal irregulars. We also captured the Turkish headquarters flag and hand grenade depots.

In the capture of Gumuskhaneh, in the environs of which are abandoned silver mines, we took a number of prisoners, two guns, and camp tents.

Northeast of Kelkid-Chiftlik we took the offensive and captured seven officers and 120 men. Prisoners are still coming in.

On the previous day in the same region we captured two field hospitals belonging to the Fifth corps of the Turkish army, with their staffs and patients, among the latter being the commander of the Ninety-eighth regiment.

URGES U. S. LET ENGLAND SETTLE CASE OF CASEMENT.

Senator Stone, Opposing Plea for Stay of Execution, Calls Interference International Blunder.

Washington, D. C., July 22.—When Senator Martine today again pressed his resolution to have President Wilson urge a stay of execution for Sir Roger Casement, Chairman Stone of the foreign relations committee told the senate Ambassador Page had informed the state department the British government would resent any such representations.

"For the United States to make official representations would do more harm than good," said Senator Stone. "If Great Britain is disposed to extend clemency to Casement it will do it on its own motion rather than have it said that clemency was shown at the request of a foreign government. To pass this resolution would be an international blunder."

Senator Nelson of Minnesota said he believed Great Britain would commute Casement's sentence to life imprisonment and pardon him after the war. Mrs. Agnes Newman, sister of Sir Roger, sat in the gallery during the discussion.

AIR RAID ON SUEZ AS THE MOSLEMS MOVE ON CANAL

British Cavalry Comes in Contact with Turks; Takes Means to Combat Advance.

LONDON, July 22.—"Enemy aeroplanes bombarded the Suez canal, causing some casualties," the war office announced today.

A new advance of Turkish forces of the Sinai peninsula to within about thirty miles of the Suez canal has been reported to the British authorities, who announced today that British cavalry had come into contact with the Turks and that measures were being taken by the chief command in Egypt to meet the Turkish movement.

The official statement says:

It is reported that Turkish forces have advanced westward from El Arish to some five miles east of Katia [a distance of about sixty miles along the Mediterranean coast, where they are entrenching. Our mounted troops are in contact with the enemy and the commander-in-chief in Egypt has taken measures to deal with the situation.

SWISS FAMILIES' VICTIMS OF SUSSEX WILL BE PAID

Germany Agrees to Indemnity Plan, Report—Experts to Fix the Amount.

LUCERNE, via Paris, July 22.—The Lucerne newspapers say that Germany and Switzerland have reached an agreement regarding the indemnities to be paid the families of Swiss victims of the sinking of the Sussex. Each government has appointed an expert who will consider the cases separately and fix the amount to be paid.

The British steamer Sussex was torpedoed without warning in the English channel on March 24. Fifty lives were lost and among the injured were some Americans. On May 10 Germany admitted responsibility, promised to pay indemnity to the Americans injured and punish the submarine commander.

FIRST OFFICIAL PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE GREAT BRITISH-FRENCH OFFENSIVE IN BATTLE OF THE SOMME

The upper right hand picture shows a group of German prisoners captured in the Picardy battle arriving in Southampton. Even after a week or more of rest the effects of the terrific experiences of battle are still plainly visible on their faces.

Handling the immense amount of ammunition for the thousands of guns engaged in the allied offensive in the battle of the Somme, is a stupendous task. The picture shows a constant stream of bearers taking the mortar ammunition through the communicating trenches to the first line. The men have built a pathway across an old trench, using sand bags and empty packing boxes for the 3 inch rapid fire shells.

Mute witnesses of the ferocity of the battle of the Somme are these battered bodies of German soldiers in the wrecked first line trenches captured by the British north of the Somme. The most terrific bombardments of the war are being poured into the German first line trenches before the infantry advances are attempted.

U-BOAT BREMEN NEAR U. S. COAST?

Norfolk Report Says It Will Pass Capes Tomorrow; Deutschland to Sail?

Norfolk, Va., July 22.—From the same source that Norfolk learned two weeks ago tonight of the approach of the giant German merchantman submarine Deutchland, come a prediction today that the Deutschland's sister ship, the Bremen, would pass in the Virginia capes before Monday.

There was no official authority for the news, but it spread quickly and generally was credited. Soon after nightfall several vessels, some of them carrying newspaper correspondents and photographers, started for Cape Henry through a heavy rainstorm, hoping to welcome the arrival of the undersea craft.

It was believed that if the boat reached the coast during the night it would head in immediately, as the storm made conditions most favorable. It was expected to go directly to Baltimore, stopping only to pick up a Maryland pilot.

Believe Boat Has Cleared.

In spite of the news from Baltimore that the custom house records did not show the clearance of the Deutschland, what are regarded as reliable reports received here say it cleared today.

Marine men point out that for neutrality reasons the record might be withheld from the public until the submarine had been given full opportunity to reach the high seas and elude the allied warships waiting off the capes for its reappearance.

Cruisers Await U-Boat.

There are several cruisers a few miles from the coast and they are in constant touch with developments in Chesapeake bay through British traders leaving the harbor.

One of the warships fired a shot today across the bow of an unidentified merchantman about ten miles out to sea. According to persons who witnessed the incident from Virginia Beach, the merchantman hove to at the warning shot, and, after being spoken by the cruiser was allowed to proceed.

AGREE TO A SETTLEMENT IN N. Y. GARMENT STRIKE.

Workers Will Take Referendum and May Return This Week—Win Demands in Modified Form.

New York, July 22.—Sixty thousand garment workers of this city, locked out or on strike for more than three months, will return to work next week if an agreement reached today by representatives of the employers and the union is ratified by a referendum vote of the workers, which probably will be taken tomorrow.

Announcement to this effect was made by Louis Levy, attorney for the manufacturers. The union, according to Levy, gained its principal demands in modified form. They include a wage increase of 5 per cent, a forty-nine hour week, the preferential employment of union over nonunion workers, and a minimum piece work wage.

Although one of the longest strikes on record, there has been no violence. It is estimated that the money loss to the workers, employers, and the city generally is in excess of $50,000,000.

More than 250,000 persons—the workers and their dependents—were directly affected by the strike. Fear was expressed that its continuation would cause a shortage of women's wear. As the season did not open until July 1, however, the manufacturers believe they can quickly retrieve delay in orders.

BUFFALO HOSTS ENTERTAIN 13 ALDERMEN FROM CHICAGO

Officials and Friends Visit Points of Interest—Begin Homeward Journey by Boat Today.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 22.—Thirteen members of the Chicago board of aldermen and seven friends motored into Buffalo this morning and were met by C. Arthur Spaulding, division manager of the New York Telephone company, who acted as host during the day.

The Chicagoans were taken to the Buffalo Automobile club at Clarence for luncheon and later went through Buffalo's parks and afterward to Niagara Falls.

They will motor to Watkins Glen and Rochester tomorrow, returning tomorrow night. Then they will go by boat to Detroit, thence to Chicago in automobiles.

COFFIN PREDICTS GREAT AIR ARMY

Marvelous Craft Is Being Developed, Says Head of Navy Consulting Board.

New York, July 22.—"I have reason to believe that within the next six months a giant Zeppelin will fly across the sea from Berlin and land in New York City," Howard E. Coffin, chairman of the naval consulting board's committee on industrial preparedness and former president of the American Engineering society, said today.

"Unquestionably it was the arrival of the submarine at Baltimore that scared congress into appropriating millions for army and navy development," he declared. "The quicker the Zeppelin arrives the better, for it will scare us into more preparedness.

Predicts Great Aerial Army.

"The $20,000,000 congress has given for aerial development is a tremendous step forward. With this encouragement we engineers are starting to standardize and develop aerial development in the United States. Our manufacturers are ready to pour millions into the industry.

"Within three years the United States will have an aerial army Europe cannot begin to equal. Within two years great passenger carrying airships will follow air routes all over the country. American industries can be coördinated and standardized. Europe's cannot. Europe's aerial development has been neither healthy nor normal. It has been too feverish. The fact that they are fighting among themselves prevents standardization.

Hints at Marvelous Craft.

"I could take you to a field within a few minutes' ride and show you a fighting aeroplane that outstrips anything the Europeans have dreamed of. It has a secret automatic control, by which it can be started in the waters of Lake Michigan, skim the surface for a given number of miles, automatically rise to a given height, go a prearranged and exact distance in one or several directions, and automatically alight at a given point in Texas or elsewhere. This type of aeroplane will be developed into the self-directing aerial torpedo.

"We will have dirigibles of the Zeppelin type Germany never will have. A fleet of automatically controlled aeroplanes with machine guns mounted on them and timed to begin their charge after going hundreds of miles to find the enemy without the presence of a single pilot is an imminent probability.

"The aerial development may mean the difference between victory and defeat for us. We are getting started."

MRS. THOMAS BARRY WILL DIRECT CAMP SANITATION.

Names of members of another committee, that of construction and sanitation, were given out yesterday by Mrs. Vylla Poe Wilson, colonel of the National Service school to be held at Lake Geneva next month. The committee members are Mrs. Thomas H. Barry, wife of Gen. Barry; Dr. and Mrs. Eugene Cary, Mrs. William O. Stevenson, wife of Col. Stevenson; Col. and Mrs. R. B. Davidson, Miss Mary Biller, Capt. Bryden, William Mather Lewis, and George W. Lambertson.

Mrs. Earl Reynolds has been elected assistant treasurer. Mrs. Philip Doane has agreed to be on the instruction committee, which means that she will assist in selecting instructors. Mrs. Alexander Sharp Sr. has telegraphically announced her willingness to come and assist in running the instruction in sewing, knitting, and signaling, work of which she was in charge at Chevy Chase.

Not until each rookie has been looked over at Lake Geneva will it be determined whether she will be a captainess, a sergeantess, or just a privatess.

THEFT LAID TO CHICAGO BOY.

Holland, Mich., July 22.—[Special.]—Raymond Edquist, a Chicago high school student, was arrested after a chase through the woods at Macatawa. He boarded an interurban car near Holland and was overtaken by an auto. Edquist was suspected of rifling the clothes of George Jones, a bather. Jones recovered the money after Edquist's capture. Edquist was arraigned for larceny and fined $39.75 or sixty days in jail. He wired his parents in Chicago for aid.

CLIO RECORDS ANOTHER HAMILTON CLUB PICNIC.

Muse of History Works Overtime to Get All Facts for Edification of Future Generations.

Six hundred members of the Hamilton club left from the Northwestern station yesterday noon for their annual picnic. Men, women, girls, boys, cats, dogs, and babies all journeyed to the Great Lakes naval training station

Athletic events attracted those who were impervious to the heat. Fleet little Harriet Ellen Kenny captured the race for girls under 12, while Jack Reynolds won the corresponding one for boys. The race for portly gentlemen (over 225 pounds) was won by Dr. H. Kraus, the other contestant having fallen by the way.

A feature of the afternoon was the men's hat trimming contest. About twenty-two victims offered themselves. How they were persuaded to do so was not divulged. Anyway[none of the hats trimmed yesterday will be seen on Michigan boulevard again. A more humane event was the boxing matches between middies.

At supper Baby Bill, 9 months old son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Glenny of 5319 Kenmore avenue, the youngest member of the club, objected to being kept on the milk wagon. A glass of iced tea took his youthful fancy, and for some minutes it looked as if prohibition were not going to win.

W. S. Barbee of the Hamilton club and Commander W. A. Moffet, Lieut. Commander C. W. Cole, and Lieut. Peterson, U. S. N., were in charge of the picnic.

THOUSANDS SEE NEW "TRIBUNE" GERMAN FILMS

Second Series of Weigle War Pictures Keeps Colonial Filled All Day.

BY KITTY KELLY.

Again Edwin F. Weigle has brought his celluloid telescope for Chicagoans to look through across into the war riven regions of Europe. And the Colonial yesterday was filled with throngs who came to see the country where fighting reigns and destruction rules, and the men who are waging war.

THE TRIBUNE's second series of "The German Side of the War" introduces the observer to the vast number of fighting possibilities effected by the Germans to the common experiences of the trench and the march, to the healing of the hospitals, and the peace of the final resting places.

There are cities perforated with shells, fields chopped to pieces, soldiers at the grim work of dealing death, soldiers at carefree play.

Along with the wounded and dying there are the industrious fighters, the triumphant conquerors. Stirring cavalry dashes set the pulses beating faster, and they, too, have a pictorial beauty that has been absent in many war pictures.

Dogs, Children, and Old Ladies.

Two especially interesting glimpses are of aeroplanes with shells bursting around them, and a fighting scene with the shells bursting over the advancing troops.

Along with all the carnage the display of high powered fighting efficiency, the showing of the mechanism that makes of modern war such a cold, unromantic horror, Mr. Weigle has introduced deft bits of human interest stuff, dogs, children, old ladies, things that humanize the stern activities and call for thrills of sympathy from the observers.

Not from "National Archives."

These pictures, which, by the way, are genuine views taken on the ground by THE TRIBUNE's own staff photographer, in contrast to the many which have been shown, that were bought or borrowed from "national archives" or even pieced together from various weeklies, hold the interest from various angles. They give a comprehensive view of what is transpiring on the other side, vitalizing those facts which print can paint only in monotone.

The pictures have, in addition to their reportorial quality, a pictorial literary significance that gives them the same value as the finished work of a war correspondent of letters. They are unusually clear, the composition is artistic, and the incidents are well chosen. Adding to their attractive "binding" are the well phrased subtitles and the charming little drawings which just about out-Ince Mr. Ince.

Show "Deutschland."

Pictures of the super-submarine Deutschland at the end of the last reel bring Germany very close to our shores.

Yesterday Mr. Weigle spent busily between the projection booth, where he personally supervised the unreeling, and the stage, where he spoke briefly at intervals concerning his experiences in acquiring the exposed film.

The Colonial was remarkably cool, setting itself up as a serious rival to the parks and beaches, and a special and sensible costume of comfort was adopted by many brave men, who laid their coats over the back of their chairs and rolled up their shirt sleeves. It looked very sensible. Some went to the almost extreme of discarding their collars, but—well, the Colonial isn't quite a bathing beach.

Y.M.C.A. HOMES FOR BORDER

Gen. Funston Approves Plan to Thirty-four Buildings to Be Used by Soldiers.

San Antonio, Tex., July 22.—Representatives of the National Y. M. C. A. secured from Gen. Funston today approval for the erection of thirty-four buildings to be used by troops at different points on the border. To look after the work 150 secretaries of the organization have been assigned.

Convicted of Keeping "Blind Pig."

Lake county was reported as cleaned of "blind pigs" yesterday, when State's Attorney Ralph Dady of Waukegan secured the conviction of Joe Polanstk on fifteen charges of selling liquor and also had his place declared a nuisance in the Circuit court. Polanstk will be required to give bond to stop operating the nuisance.

EXCURSION BOAT WITH 310 ABOARD RAMMED BY LIGHTER

New York, July 22.—With 310 passengers on board, most of them women and children, the excursion steamer Keyport, returning from New Jersey resorts, was struck amidship a few hundred feet off the battery late today by the steam lighter Santos. The Keyport sank within ten minutes, while the last of the passengers were being helped off.

The ferryboat Bronx was near when the accident occured, and Capt. Joseph Smith quickly ran it alongside, pushing the sinking steamer broadside against the battery sea wall. Many of the women and children became hysterical, and several were with difficulty prevented from jumping overboard. Loungers and sightseers in Battery park assisted in helping the excursionists ashore. No one was injured.

CHIHUAHUA PAPER PRINTS STORY U.S. TROOPS ARE TO GO

El Paso, Tex., July 22.—A two column story purporting to be a dispatch from El Paso announcing the withdrawal from Mexican soil of the American expeditionary forces was printed July 19 in El Democrata of Chihuahua City, copies of which reached here today.

The story said that the action was taken upon orders of "Gen. Baker," American secretary of war, and added that he had announced that the guardsmen sent to the border will now be sent to their respective states.

It also asserts that Gen. Pershing himself requested that the American forces be "withdrawn."

FIRST BRIGADE OFF FOR 30 MILE "HIKE" TOMORROW.

Chicago Soldiers on Leon Springs March in for Severest Test Since They Went to Border.

San Antonio, Tex., July 22.—[Special.]—All activities at Camp Wilson have been subordinated to preparations for the thirty mile hike to Leon Springs, which the First brigade will begin at sun up Monday. This will be the severest test the Illinois men have yet bucked and officers are overlooking no point to assist in relieving discomforts of the long march.

The medical corps is equipped to the minute to care for cases of heat exhaustion, and the men have been reported in excellent shape for movement. Under Gen. Funston's orders the brigade will carry what is known as equipment "B," which includes pup tents, blanket roll, arms, and two days' rations. Monday night camp will be made at Ten Mile hill, midway between San Antonio and Leon Springs.

Six days will be spent on rifle ranges, giving the men work at targets. The Second brigade will go to New Braunfels after the return of the First twelve days hence.

VILLA WHIPPED IN ALL DAY FIGHT; CAPTURE NEAR?

Army Split Up After Running Battle South of Parral, Aid of Carranza Reports.

Chihuahua City, Mexico, July 22.—Details of an all day running engagement near Hacienda el Florido, almost directly south of Parral, on the Chihuahua-Durango border, between the command personally directed by Villa and Carranza troops, were received here today.

Gen. Jacinto Trevino, commanding the army of the northeast, announced that the dispatches showed that the Villista power in Mexico had been effectually broken and that it is only a matter of a few days until Villa himself is captured or killed. The reports said that only the better mounts of the Villistas allowed their leader to escape.

Two Hundred Villa Men Die.

The dispatches, which were sent from Rosario, said that in the engagement which took place last Saturday, approximately 200 Villistas were killed. The Carrancista losses were not given definitely.

They stated that Villa was driven first to seek refuge on the San Isidro ranch and being dislodged there, was pursued more than fifty miles into the state of Durango. It was pointed out that a result of the engagement was to prevent the bandits reaching their objective in the Sierras and in keeping them in the comparatively open country of the lower Nazas river.

Bandit Loses Two Battles.

Government troops engaged in two sharp skirmishes with Villistas today, and were victorious in each, according to dispatches to Gen. Jacinto Trevino. Gen. José Santos reported from Parras that he had defeated with heavy losses a small band under the leader, Torres, at Ponzo del Calvo, half way between Torreon and Saltillo, while Gen. Laveaga telegraphed from Tepehuanes that he had beaten off a small force near that town.

Additional advices to the commandancia said that a Japanese physician who had treated Villa in the town of Torreon de Casa, south of Los Nieves recently, reported that Villa is still badly crippled and requires an operation.

All reports here are that the main Villista band is suffering from lack of food and a shortage of ammunition.

Mexican Quiz Delayed.

Washington, D. C., July 22.—Acting Secretary Polk held his fifth conference today with Eliseo Arredondo, Gen. Carranza's ambassador designate, in an effort to arrive at an agreement regarding the proposed negotiations for settlement of matters in dispute between the two governments.

The fact that no announcement followed today's meeting was construed to mean that a satisfactory reply had not been received from Mexico City to amendments the Washington government has proposed to the commission plan suggested by Gen. Carranza.

It has not been disclosed whether a serious disagreement has arisen, although both conferees said progress was being made, indicating their belief that any misunderstanding that may have arisen as to the scope of the proposed negotiations might be cleared away by further exchange of views.

It was intimated today that continued delay in arriving at an agreement has served to make some officials less hopeful of the ultimate result of the conferences between Mr. Polk and Mr. Arredondo. Earlier in the week it was predicted that an official announcement of the plan decided upon would be possible today at the latest. It is now practically certain that nothing of this character is to be expected until the middle of next week.

SOLDIERS' PAY QUIZ ORDERED

Mayor Believes Report of City Salaries Held Up Untrue—Directs Inquiry.

TELEGRAPHS CLINNIN.

Mayor Thompson yesterday ordered an investigation of charges that the pay of soldiers in the city service is being withheld from their families.

He said his interviews with City Controller Pike and officials in the paymaster's office convinced him the allegations were without foundation, but nevertheless he intended to have the civil service commission make a thorough inquiry. Certain letters were given out at the border charging that employés of the paymaster's office were playing into the hands of loan sharks.

The mayor telegraphed Maj. John V. Clinnin, an assistant corporation counsel, now at San Antonio, in part as follows:

"While I believe, upon investigation, that these charges will be found without foundation, I consider the matter of sufficient importance to request that a copy of the letter be sent to me, together with your correspondent's name, who, I understand is now in Chicago, in order that he may have an opportunity to appear before the civil service commission to substantiate his charges."

MEMORIAL SERVICES FOR COL. KOCH IN CAMP TODAY.

Comrades of Former Commander of First Infantry, Now on Border, Send Condolence to His Widow.

When news of the death of Col. Charles R. E. Koch reached the officers and men of the First Illinois infantry, his former command, stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., resolutions of regret were at once adopted. Col. J. B. Sanborn sent this message to Chicago:

"The First infantry, at a meeting held this evening, adopted the resolution noted below. Please transmit a copy to Mrs. Koch, as we have not her address. A memorial service will be held by the entire regiment Sunday morning. The resolution is as follows:

"'It is with sorrow that the officers and men of the First Illinois infantry have received word of the death of their beloved and honored ex-commander, Col. Koch. His record during the civil war, his devotion to the national guard, and his years of service in this regiment have greatly endeared him to us, and his last official act in leading and directing the committee for the relief of needy families of the First infantry was a fitting climax to a career that shall long be remembered. He was a true gentleman and soldier.'"

Col. Koch enlisted in the First as a private shortly after its organization in 1874. He rose rapidly to the rank of lieutenant colonel. When Col. Knox resigned, in 1887, Col. Koch became colonel, and continued as such for eight years, being succeeded, upon his resignation, by Col. Turner. It was during his command that the armory was built.

Col. Koch's public funeral at Graceland chapel will be conducted jointly by the G. A. R., the Loyal Legion, and the Veteran corps.

GUARDSMEN TRY TO PARADE CITY IN MISFIT UNDERWEAR.

Cheyenne, Wyo., July 22.—[Special.]—Wyoming guardsmen added another underwear riot last night to the list of militia disturbances caused by enlisted men over supplies given them in the mobilization of the guard. Two sizes of underwear, 32 and 44 chest measure, have been distributed. The men claim that a man built to wear either of the sizes would not be built to be admitted to the army under the physical requirements.

To show their disapproval a hundred guardsmen put on the underwear and nothing else and started to invade Cheyenne. They marched to the city limits and were about to enter town when they were halted by a detail of armed guardsmen sent out from the camp.

The commanding officer of the detail was forced to order his men to use bayonets before the lightly clad men gave up their plan.

READS 'TRIBUNE' GUARD DATA INTO SENATE RECORD

Lodge Produces Figures When Chamberlain Asks Cut in Army Appropriation.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 22.—[Special.]—Official admission that the crisis in the relations between the United States and Mexico is over was made for the administration in the senate today by Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, chairman of the senate foreign military affairs committee.

Senator Chamberlain asked the senate to cut many items in the army appropriation bill because the expected war had been averted. The reductions made at his request by the senate during the day amounted to more than $35,000,000.

Starts Heated Debate.

When the senator, however, asked the senate to reduce the appropriation for national guard foreign service pay from $6,000,000 to $1,000,000 he precipitated a debate on the mobilization of the national guard he was not looking for.

Senators Lodge of Massachusetts, Penrose of Pennsylvania, and Brady of Idaho pitched in with demands that the administration inform the senate as to the details of the guard's mobilization—as to how many men were in camps along the border, how many in state camps, and how many had not been called out.

Senator Chamberlain said he had the information, but that he was not privileged to submit it to the senate because it was a military secret. Senator Lodge thereupon said he would furnish it.

Gives "Tribune's" Figures.

Producing a copy of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE of Wednesday, Senator Lodge said:

"I found in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE of Wednesday a very careful table made up from the reports of the different states where the militia is. It appears that there are 100,008 in the mobilization camps on the border, 59,204 in mobilization camps at home, and 14,323 not called out. This table shows what I wanted to know. I put it in as a contribution to the information already furnished in order to have it printed as a part of my remarks."

Senator Chamberlain said the war department records would show THE TRIBUNE's table to be incorrect. Senator Lodge said there might be some variance, but THE TRIBUNE figures would not differ materially from those of the department.

Number of Men by States.

"What I wanted to get at," said Senator Lodge, "was the number of men by states, and that is given in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE table, and I fancy it is not far out of the way, because it is derived from the states themselves."

At this point Senator Lee of Maryland said his information indicated that more than 91,000 guardsmen had been sent to the border.

"The senator's statement," observed Senator Lodge, "indicates that THE TRIBUNE's figures are approximately correct. They were taken from the states and are as near correct as can be obtained now in all likelihood."

South Has "Home Guards."

Senator Penrose here entered the debate.

"I think these figures are most interesting," he said, "for they show that in one section of the country, the solid south, there is quite a percentage of 'home guards.' I think a great deal of light should be thrown on the situation. With the exception of Texas and Virginia none of the southern states have sent any of the national guard to the border, whereas states like Pennsylvania, Illinois, and the New England states, at a very great inconvenience to the members of the guard and great distress to their families, have sent their full quota to the front."

Senator Fletcher of Florida protested that the guard of the south was ready to go, but it lacked the proper equipment.

"Then," said Senator Penrose, "we should know why it lacked the equipment."

Chamberlain Stops It.

Senator Chamberlain ended the debate as soon as he could, but not before the senate had exhibited a desire for more information concerning the guard.

He next asked a reduction in the appropriation for the transportation of the army and its supplies. His amendment this time suggested a lopping off of $13,441,504, indicating that it is not the purpose of the administration to send any more guardsmen to the border.

When the senator was asked if this was not its purpose, he said:

"I am frank to say that when this bill was made we inserted some items in view of the existing situation in Mexico which might now justly be cut out."

Guard to Be Withdrawn?

A reduction of $7,377,000 was made in the item for the subsistence of men on the border, indicating further the intention of the administration to withdraw the guard at an early date, according to the view of senators. Also there was a reduction of approximately $1,000,000 in the item for the pay of beneficiaries of officers and enlisted men who die in service.

As it was reported to the senate the army bill totaled more than $330,000,000—by far the largest amount ever included in an army measure in the history of the country. Between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000 of this is expected to be eliminated before it passes, in view of the administration's belief that conditions in Mexico no longer demand actual preparation for war.

SOLDIER'S STORE FOR SALE.

Capt. R. H. Smith of Company D, First infantry, now at Camp Wilson in Texas, was a plumber, and has written to his wife at 4503 Oakenwald avenue repeatedly asking her how business was progressing.

But much as he values his plumbing business, he desires to see his wife, and so he has instructed her to sell the place and bring the children down to San Antonio.

"Robert and I have been pals for over seventeen years," said Mrs. Smith yesterday, "and we simply cannot live without being near one another. I don't know beans about the plumbing business, anyway. So Robert wrote me to go to THE TRIBUNE and ask what to do. The business is located at 1129 East Forty-third street and has been successfully run for over twenty years."

EIGHT CYLINDER CADILLAC $2080

Cadillac Eight---the Choice of Thinkers

Ask a few of your friends with various cars to tell you why they chose the cars they drive. Press them for a real reason.

Then talk with a few Cadillac owners and find out why they chose the Cadillac. The difference in what they say will amaze you.

Men who drive other cars do not average the same satisfaction as Cadillac owners. You must expect them to "hem" and "haw" a little when they explain their choice.

But pin them down. At least find out why they didn't buy the Cadillac—and that will enlighten you a lot. Many will admit they wish they had bought a Cadillac—will tell you their next car is to be a Cadillac.

The Cadillac owner's conversation is refreshingly different. It makes you happy to hear him. He bought a Cadillac because he "wanted a real car—an up-to-date car."

He "knew the Cadillac reputation for wonderfully satisfying performance." He "had noticed that most of the important business men, whose judgment he respected, drove the Cadillac."

He "couldn't see where any higher priced car offered any more than the Cadillac, and among lower priced cars that pretended to quality there wasn't enough saving to justify the chance."

This is the way Cadillac owners talk and think. They can talk that way because they did their thinking before they bought. And every one of them will end up by saying he is "glad he bought a Cadillac."

Think before you buy. The Cadillac is the choice of straight thinkers because of its known quality, its proved performance and its remarkable value. Can you think of anything more important to you?

BRITISH TRADE OFFICIAL CALLS BLACKLIST FAIR

Says Only Firms Aiding Enemies Are Included—Few Americans.

LONDON, July 22.—In reply to a number of criticisms which the publication of a list of eighty-seven American individuals and firms, with which English firms are forbidden to do business under the trading with the enemy act, has met with in America and here, Laming Worthington Evans, chief of the department of foreign trade of the foreign office, made the following statement today:

"The statutory list has been compiled from one point of view only, namely, to prohibit British citizens from supporting firms which are strengthening our enemies. The test applied before putting a firm domiciled in America on the statutory list is this: Is that firm by its business operations strengthening our enemies? If so, then British firms may not support it.

German Firms Aid Enemies.

"It is one of the principal lessons of the world war that the strength of a belligerent does not consist only in the resources and supplies available in its own territories, but but also on those on which he can draw from neutral countries. As a result of the semi-military organization which the German government has imposed on its commerce every German firm throughout the world is an outpost seeking to do its utmost to assist Germany in her effort to dominate Europe, and the fact that they are established in neutral countries in many cases makes them more formidable and their activities less easy to combat than would otherwise be the case.

"Can it then be said fairly that when the British government is fully aware of these activities it should do nothing to frustrate them? Can it be claimed fairl that, instead of endeavoring to frustrate them, they should be actually assisted by British firms, British cables, British banks, and British shipping lines?

Points to French Embargo.

"It is true that the trade done by British firms with German firms in neutral countries has attained considerable proportions, and to cut off this trade by means of the statutory blacklist meant a certain amount of inevitable loss. But the government considered that the loss to British trade would be much less than the loss caused to the enemy, and besides that, the sacrifice involved is necessary in the interests of the allies.

"It may be pointed out that long before the British statutory blacklist was put in operation, the French government prohibited its nationals from doing any business with any enemy subject. It can hardly be contended that the statutory blacklist is more onerous to trade than the French system, which long since was recognized by international law.

"Moreover, the blacklist system is a piece of purely domestic legislation, which simply prohibits British subjects from dealing with certain persons. The right of any government to impose such prohibitions on its own nationals is hardly open to dispute.

Defends Publishing Blacklist.

"Objection has been taken to the unpleasant publicity given the list, but without such publicity far more damag would be likely to result to trade. Before the adoption of the statutory blacklist there was an unofficial blacklist in existence. Experience has shown that uncertainty on the part of both British and neutral traders as to who is and who is not on the blacklist would be far more injurious to commerce than the publication of the list, which enables every one to know exactly where he is. It is for this reason that steps are being taken to giv the list as much publicity as possible.

"In addition to its official publication in the London Gazette it appears in th Board of Trade Journal and the chambers of commerce and trade associations. Individual firms can keep themselves posted with up to date knowlege by obtaining a list regularly from bookseelers.

Sub Rosa Blacklist More Damaging.

"Complaint is made that the statutory list is unnecessary, as the same result might have been obtained sub rosa. But if so done it would have affected not merely the firms in the United States which now figure in the statutory list but also others—probably all those of German names, whether they deserved it or not because British traders, to whom alone our prohibition is addressed, would not have known the names of the prohibited firms and might, out of caution, have ceased dealing with a much larger number.

"In trade matters nothing interferes with business so much as uncertainty, and it was to avoid this general interference that the policy of prohibition with the firms listed was adopted.

"It has been said that it was a blunder to publish the list when a French loan was under way. Clearly it would have been a blunder to include the friends of our French allies. But is it suggested that this blunder has been committed? Look at the list.

Declares Only Enemies Included.

"It is indeed only those who have shown unmistakably that they are enemies, or acting for enemies, who are included. So we need not fear that the support of our French allies will be prejudiced in those quarters.

"It is suggested that publicity in the London Gazette was insufficient. The press of the United States has given all the publicity needed in the United States and in every other country. We find, in fact, that the local press always reproduces lists, so there need be no fear of hardship arising from want of knowledge of the names included in the list.

"I see it is said in the city that opinion is not unanimous. That may well be so, for the city is put to inconvenience in having to change the course of its business, and, naturally, unless the city knows the facts upon which the dicision including any particular firms in the statutory list is based, it may sometimes see merely the inconvenience and not the justice or necessity.

Few American Firms Affected.

"All the facts were carefully weighed before the decision was arrived at, and I have no doubt that there is not a name on the list which is not there on evidence which fully justified its inclusion."

Mr. Evans denied that a sub rosa blacklist now exists, the only basis for such a charge, he said, being the fact that certain firms are under suspicion, and British traders, therefore, have been warned to be careful in dealing with them.

Mr Evans also pointed out that there are hardly more than thirty entities in the American list, one-tenth of the list being occupied by the Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne company, as, including the directors, they appear eight times. Zimmerman & Forshay appear six times; Muller, Schall & Co. five times; MacLaren & Gentles four times, while other firms appear two or more times.

CALLS BLACKLIST BLUNDER.

LONDON, July 21.—[Delayed.]—A neutral diplomat, exceptionally well informed regarding the details of the economic war which Great Britain is waging on the central powers, declared today to a representative of the Associated Press that he regarded the recent publication by the British government of the blacklist of certain American firms as "the greatest possible tactical blunder at this stage, when a French loan is about to be floated in America and important Russian financial arrangements are under way there."

"It is a blunder," continued the diplomat, "because it is unnecessary, since for months most of the firms on the list have been on a subrosa blacklist. At any rate, they were not on the white list, so the government had complete control over any of their operations which touched British territory.

English Bankers Not Satisfied.

"The financial section of London is by no means unanimous in approval of the measure, even those in its favor being dissatisfied with its scope.

"Its publication at this time is a mystery. One possible theory is that the government's hand was forced by recalcitrant British firms which may have declined to give up trading with firms not on the white list until their position was made legally untenable by the actual promulgation of the list. If the government had desired to warn the British public, wider publicity would have been sought.

"Possibility of legal retaliation against the blacklist is a question for international lawyers, but the possibility of unofficial retaliations is almost unlimited. At least a Pacific coast firm of unimpeachable Americanism might make the position of British traders in a number of fertile fields decidedly uncomfortable."

Great uneasiness exists among American branch housese here whose home firms have any financial or trading connection with Germany, but they refuse to discuss the question for publication. Attention is called in these circles to the appearance on the South American list of several firms declared to be financed by New York banking institutions which invested heavily in the Anglo-French loan.

Discussing these assertions, Lord Robert Cecil, minister of war trade, stated today that it was quite possible the government had not placed certain American firms with close German connections on the list for the reason that they had proven friends of the allies in regard to the Anglo-French loan.

Lord Robert declared that names might be added to the list from time to time, while others might be removed, but that the blacklist as it now stands represents the American total, its entities being less than the published eighty, as names of partners in firms were repeated.

POLK AND ENVOY CONFER.

Washington, D. C., July 22.—Anticipating protests to the state department from the firms and corporations named in the British blacklist, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice had another conference today with Acting Secretary Polk in which the subject was informally discussed.

Probably it will be left to the London foreign office to develop the position of the British government officially, but the informal conferences in Washington are expected to go far toward clarifying the position of each side and serving to shorten any negotiations.

As in the case of the allied blockade precedents established by the United States during the civil war are coming up again to be used for justification. President Lincoln in 1861, issued a proclamation declaring that "all commercial intercourse between the states in insurrection and citizens of other states through the ports of the United States is unlawful and will remain unlawful until such insurrections shall cease."

Neutral Germans Not Affected.

The British point out that the effort has been made to discriminate in favor of any German firm in the United States that has been engaged solely in its usual line of business, if that has been of a general character. Some of the oldest and largest of the German banking firms in New York consequently do not figure in he blacklist.

But where firms are known to be actually under German control; where the profits of their business go to Germany, or where Germanic firms or American firms acting as agents have gone out of their regular lines of business to deal with Germany, British merchants have been prohibited from dealing with them. British authorities here contend no legitimate American firm or corporation will be injured by the blacklist nor German firms in the United States which have confined their operation to their own line of business.

A MONKEY MARTYR

Subject for Infantile Paralysis Test to Be Inoculated by Chicago Health Department.

INFANT PLAGUE TESTS HERE ON HOBSON, MONKEY

Health Bureau to Inject Serum Into Ape to Study Disease Course.

Blinking his beady eyes and clutching a bread crust, Hobson played about the laboratory of the health department at the city hall yesterday, unmindful of the fate that awaits him or of the good that may come to the children of Chicago through the sacrifice of his life.

Hobson is only 3 years old. He is a bright little South American monkey. Some day next week he will be inoculated with infantile paralysis bacilli. From then on he will be subjected to the tests prescribed by Dr. Simon Flexner of the Rockefeller institute. Strict charts will be kept of his temperature, his pulse, and of every slight symptom that may develop for better or worse. He may recover; he may die. But out of the treatment of the case may come some new enlightenment to medical science calculated to end the epidemic which has seized New York in its grip.

Few Scattered Cases.

Only a few scattered cases of the disease have appeared in Chicago so far and there have been few cases in which the doctors have been doubtful regarding diagnosis. It is to make sure of these cases that Dr. John Dill Robertson has added Hobson to the equipment of the department in its preventive campaign.

"When the next doubtful case is called to our attention," said Dr. Robertson, "we shall inoculate the monkey with the virus. Then we shall subject him to the Flexner tests. If the disease is infantile paralysis the monkey will become paralyzed just as the patient would. His lowers limbs may be affected, one side may become paralyzed, or the upper limbs afflicted, just as in the cases of the many, many children we saw in the hospital in New York.

"When this condition arises we shall experiment and hope to obtain a wider working knowledge concerning the disease and its remedy.

Watch All Symptoms.

"Adrenolin chloride will be injected into the spinal column and the symptoms will be carefully observed. Just as much success as we have in curing the monkey, so much could we hope to have in combating an equally serious case in the human.

"One new case of infantile paralysis was reported and confirmed today in the vicinity of Halsted and Twelfth streets. Another case was discharged as cured. This leaves the total of fifteen cases in the city unchanged."

ICEMAN'S DIME GOES LONG WAY

He Couldn't Give Girl Any Ice, but He Had a Kind Heart.

SHE GETS VACATION.

One stocking had fallen down over her small, scuffed shoe, displaying a grimy pipestem of a leg. The other stocking, held up by a piece of knotted white cloth, had a large hole in the knee. The bit of pink ribbon which caught a few strands of black hair was spotted with dirt. The front of her small frock looked as if she had been making mud pies and had used it in lieu of the roller towel. She was panting and hot, and a few white streaks in the soot on her cheeks traced the course of recent tear runnels.

But she smiled as the visiting nurse, attracted by the dirty face, paused in the wavy heat of the street to question her. She noticed that one little fist was closed over something.

What She Had.

"What have you there?" asked the nurse.

"A dime," replied the child, holding it behind her and trying to dig the scuffed toe of her shoe into the cobble stones.

"Where did you get it?"

"He give it to me."

The nurse followed the direction of the small forefinger, but could see no one. An ice wagon was disappearing around the next corner.

"That man on the ice wagon," explained the girl. "He scolded me for hoppin' on th' back of his wagon and then he felt sorry and give it to me."

"What were you doing on the wagon?"

Tryin' to Get Some Ice.

"Tryin' to get some ice for Billy. Billy's a baby and he's sick. The folks what mamma does washin' for is all gone away on vacations, and she ain't makin' much money now and Billy's sick. Mamma said she just had to have ice for 'im, because the doctor said so, and so when the ice man come along I was tryin' to swipe some off'n th' back of th' wagon, but he seen me and told me to get off and then he stopped and come around and scolded me because the ice might fall on me.

"That's what made me cry. He was nasty mean. Then he got sorry and I told 'im about Billy, and he said he couldn't give me no ice because he had to take it to the saloon, but he give me this dime and told me to get some off'n the next wagon."

Now It's Free.

That's how the case came to the attention of the United Charities and how a TRIBUNE ice book found its way into the little home, and how Emily M. came to go to Camp Algonquin for two weeks.

Through an error contributions of $1 from I. C. A. Boyd to the hospital and ice fund were credited last week to Dr. W. A. Evans.

There were 135 new cases.

Yesterday there were only eighty-one new cases and the deaths were only thirty-two.

THE EASTLAND ANNIVERSARY; SOME QUESTIONS

"Why Has the Government Failed in Inquiry?" Asks Writer.

On July 24—One year ago tomorrow morning—the steamer Eastland turned over in the Chicago river at the Clark street docks. The loss of life was greater than in any other calamity in the history of Chicago. The catastrophe occurred on a Saturday, which remains in the city's memory, along with the Iroquois disaster of nearly twelve years earlier, a day of inexpressible horror and mourning.

Miss Edith Wyatt, the well known author, who during the months following the Eastland calamity, made a close study of the matter, has written the subjoined article on the governmental inquiry that followed—an inquiry which she brands as utterly futile and as a breach of faith with the people.

BY EDITH WYATT.

ONE year ago a great multitude of American working people, confident in our country's guarantee of safety, intrusted their lives to a vessel which had been inspected and passed by our government. We failed them in their trust, and over 800 working people were drowned.

What ought our government to have done to right in so far as has lain in her power this grave and needless wrong to her citizens?

No just and merciful person will believe we ought in these circumstances to have pursued the policy we followed after the Slocum disaster. Resolving itself into a mere persecution of the captain of the vessel, the Slocum inquiry utterly failed to discover and to remove the radically wrong state of shipping which created the tragedy.

Warned by her Slocum experience, our government, with malice to none, with charity for all, ought immediately after the wreck of the Eastland to have ascertained, and to have taken steps to change the basic conditions which caused the catastrophe.

This has been her policy concerning the loss of American life by the agency of foreign vessels. This should be her policy concerning the loss of American life by the agency of an American vessels. How far has she pursued this course?

That Wilson Pledge.

Various bodies of inquiry assembled in the late July and early August of 1915. Valuable as their efforts were in some respects, it soon became apparent that only an impartial federal committee of wide powers and a personnel of national standing could carry an adequate investigation through to a practical result in radically altered conditions.

Many demands for such an investigation were made of President Wilson.

On July 28 the president sent to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE the following message:

> Avon, N. J., July 28, 1915.—Dear Sir: The president directs me to acknowledge the receipt of your telegram with reference to the Eastland tragedy and to say that he fully appreciates the importance of the whole incident and will see to it that the investigation is thorough enough to satisfy everybody. He wishes me also to say that he has already seen to this, and that nothing will be omitted to bring forth all of the facts and to fix the responsibility.
>
> Sincerely yours, J. N. TUMULTY.

Later Secretary Redfield made public, in the preface of his report on the Eastland disaster, a letter written on Aug. 10, in which he had offered to the president, as his chief executive chief, the following administrative pledge:

"I have given assurances that as soon as possible in the fall a searching inquiry will be made into the whole administration of the steamboat inspection service, under the supervision of representatives of the navy department and of the public, so that there shall be no question of its impartial character."

Promise Not Made Good.

With very grave regret we must face the fact that our chief executive and his department secretary have not yet made good to the public their administrative promise.

According to the requirement of the United States' statutes, every steamboat accident causing loss of life or property must be investigated by the local board of inspectors.

The hearings of this requisite investigation were held in Chicago prior to Aug. 6 under the conduct of the local board of inspection at Milwaukee, supervised by the department secretary and solicitor.

Mr. Redfield asked five people outside the department to act as unofficial members of this board of inquiry, in order, as he stated in his public letter on the subject to the president, "that the inquiry might be distinguished as far as practicable under the law from a purely departmental proceeding."

This inquiry necessarily remained, however, departmental in its supervision. An investigation superintended by the body which had itself allowed the existence of the conditions in which the wreck ocurred, while serviceable for many purposes, could not seem satisfactory as the sole agent of ascertainment of the cause of the disaster.

Public Confidence Lost.

Further, the tone of the inquiry was such as to estrange public confidence. On July 31st the federal court ordered that no witnesses subpoenaed to appear before the federal grand jury be examined in any other proceedings relating to the Eastland disaster. As interviews with some of these witnesses were necessary before the board's investigation could be completed, the federal court's act nullified to a considerable degree the possible usefulness of the board's operations. It adjourned until after the federal grand jury had submitted its report.

On Aug. 5 it sent to Mr. Redfield the following statement:

"Not having completed our investigation, we are not prepared at this time to express an opinion as to who is to blame, nor what agencies contributed to the capsizing of the steamer Eastland."

This board of inquiry has not since then held another meeting.

In the same statement of Aug. 5 it made for the future safeguarding of marine travel certain recommendations for congressional changes in existing laws, the most important of these recommendations being an increased equipment for the steamboat inspection department, and the creation of a board of naval architects, whose duty it shall be to pass upon the plan of steam merchant vessels prior to their construction, and to pass for service steam merchant vessels of over 100 tons burden. These legislative changes have not yet been made by congress.

Silent on Disaster Cause.

Immediately after the Eastland disaster Secretary Redfield appointed a special committee of supervising inspectors "to determine what, if anything, was needed to improve the steamboat inspection service upon the great lakes." This committee made its preliminary report on Dec. 3. But the report has nothing to say about the cause of the Eastland disaster: and this committee's work was not conducted by officers of the navy and representatives of the public, but entirely by department men.

Thus, in so far as may be learned, the president has not instituted such governmental action in regard to the Eastland disaster that "nothing has been omitted to bring forth all the facts and to fix the responsibility."

The only federal board of inquiry which has presented a public report has itself stated that it has not exhausted all its means of research and has not done everything possible to fix the responsibility.

No Impartial Inquiry.

In so far as may be learned, Secretary Redfield did not in the fall of 1915 "cause" a searching inquiry to be made into the administration of steamboat inspection service under the supervision of representatives of the navy and of the public so that there should be no question of its impartial character." The only inquiry into the steamboat inspection service which his public statements tell us he made in the fall was conducted entirely by officers of the steamboat inspection department.

Within six months after the Iroquois fire and the Cherry mine disaster, investigations of conditions surrounding these tragedies had been completed, and remedial legislation with provision for all its necessary equipment for administration and enforcement had been placed upon our statute books.

Now, a year after the Eastland disaster, no public federal inquiry of the impartial and satisfactory character promised is known to be even under way. While the seamen's bill, which was enacted before the tragedy and went into effect early in the succeeding November, incidentally decreases overcrowding on vessels to a considerable extent by requiring more deck space for life saving equipment, still the Eastland disaster has not obtained for us any of the improved congressional legislation which the tragedy has seemed to make imperative.

Serious Failure Cited.

The complete breakdown or the delay of other governmental efforts to right the situation makes the failure of the department of commerce and of the president doubly serious.

To the citizen who has followed the account of the punitive and compensatory phases of the Eastland cases it would appear that (first) either both our state and our federal laws are at present incompetently framed for securing the maintenance of justice in marine disaster on inland waterways or (second) either our state or our federal officers are dilatory or disinclined to act in securing justice for passengers under these laws.

The failure of the department of commerce and of the president to proceed effectively in the Eastland situation is made more serious not only by the breakdown or delay of other governmental agencies but by the extraordinary character of the disaster itself.

"Discreditable to the U. S."

Far more discreditable to us than the loss of American life on the Lusitania or the Arabic or the Gulflight or the Falaba, discreditable and tragic as these losses are, is the loss of American life on the Eastland.

Our loss is more discreditable both from its nature, its negligent betrayal of a trust on our own part, and from its great extent.

For the Eastland wreck destroyed more than seven times as many American lives as all the foreign sea attacks together have taken since August, 1914, the beginning of the present European war.

Blame Traced to President.

If the breakdown of other governmental agencies, and the nature of the disaster, both in its betrayal of the trust of citizens, and its enormous extent, so little realized nationally, make the administration's inaction grave, the conditions of the tragedy make that inaction singularly inexplicable.

For the conditions of the Eastland tragedy were not obscure nor hidden nor difficult for a determined and public spirited executive to change.

Occurring in the open river, between two of the most frequented bridges of the city, at the "rush" hour of downtown traffic, and on Saturday, the day of the week when the adjacent neighborhood of South Water street is most crowded with its market world, the calamity that befell the packed and jammed masses on the Eastland decks happened in the glare of day in the sight of a whole city.

"The cause of the Eastland disaster can be told in three words," said Victor Olander of the seamen's union. "She was overloaded."

Wrecks On the Great Lakes.

Dramatic in the extreme were the circumstances of the wreck upon the city river, preceded as these had been, by the loss in the last ten years on the great lakes of thirty-one vessels that had perished mutely with every soul on board in unfathomable obscurity.

One of these vessels, the Benjamin Noble, was known to be so heavily laden with steel rails that its decks were awash at the dock of departure; and our federal inspectors who allowed it to leave port on its last voyage in this state made their inspection in rubber boots. None of the Benjamin Noble's crew ever returned to tell the story. No human creature returned from the wreck of the Olive Jeannette or the Tasmania or the Iosco or the Kaliyuga or from the Pere Marquette or the Marquette and Bessemer—from a great still array of sunken ships.

Warnings Go Unheeded.

But from a hundred other ships wrecked or damaged on the great lakes since 1906 seamen have returned to utter serious remonstrances on the state of American shipping—warning and prophecy of disaster. To the discredit of the United States steamboat inspection department these remonstrances were unheeded and suppressed.

Then suddenly, against the silent history and the suppressed history of great lakes catastrophes, by a chance unheard of, a wreck at the dock in the middle of the country in the very heart of a crowded city told a story that could not be kept silent, nor suppressed, nor annihilated from the consciousness of the nation even if it never again enters the consciousness of the president. The truth of the Eastland tragedy was written on the wall as though by the hand of God for the whole world to read.

In this last year another vessel has dropped to pieces on the great lakes. Our last ship lost was the Kirby, an ore boat. Struck by a gale on Lake Superior on May 8, it drowned twenty of our seamen. One of the firemen who clung to a piece of wreckage, and the second mate, an exceptionally strong swimmer, survived. According to report the Kirby broke in two in the middle and foundered.

What Might Have Been.

What do the facts mean which have revealed themselves to the public as it has watched the wake of the great city river catastrophe in the last year?

In the attempt to answer that question for ourselves we may well consider what might have happened if President Wilson and Secretary Redfield had acted in prompt and resolute good faith on their pledge of Aug. 10.

Obviously they would at once have secured the appointment of a commission of five men able to command public esteem and capable of proceeding without fear or favor. These would have been men absolutely without affiliation with the steamboat owning interests, without affiliation with steamboat inspection department, and without affiliation with any of the many, many families of those lost in great lake wrecks.

Clearly the chair of the commission would be held by a United States naval officer of standing and executive force, and the remainder of his committee would have comprised two other representatives of the navy, one of these to be a naval constructor, one representative of the department of commerce, to be appointed from the bureau of standards, and one representative of the public, to be appointed from some citizens' organization of unquestioned disinterestedness in public affairs.

Biggest Task Overlooked.

If the pledge were sincerely meant in a radically right intent to safeguard life on the waterways of the United States the commission would have been empowered to inquire into the history of marine disaster on the waters within United States boundaries in the last twenty years, the condition of the vessels lost and the record of the steamboat inspection service concerning them. It would have been empowered to make recommendations concerning the responsible safeguarding of human life in our water traffic and to offer a constructive program for such legislative amendment as will enable our department of justice and our courts to maintain an effective support of the enforcement of our civil and our criminal law over our whole inland waterway system.

The reason why the Panama canal administration discovered the chief enemy of the canal in yellow fever and conquered that obscure and apparently unconquerable foe was because the Panama canal administration had determined to do these things.

The reason why President Wilson has not sought out and conquered the enemies of safety and of law on the great lakes seems to have been his lack of determination or even of interest in performing this act.

New National Issue.

The Eastland disaster and the United States waterway history past and present which it has brought to light have revealed for many people a tremendous new national issue. The lake shipping is prodigious in extent. More vessels sail in one year through Sault Sainte Marie than pass through the Suez canal. The United States has the most traveled and the most beautiful fresh water system of the whole globe.

How are we to govern this splendid and increasingly appreciated endowment responsibly for the wider trade and recreation of the United States?

In view of the Eastland wreck and the conditions that wreck has made known to us we can only conclude that at present our inland waterways are a No-Man's land within the nation. Without competent state law, or city law, without efficient federal law or creditable federal protection for the passengers, the sailors, the youth of the country, our fresh waterways, far from being a splendid resource, well ruled for a great nation, are for us a limbo of divided and cowardly government.

The Eastland disaster with its flagrant attendant and succeeding circumstances was not an accident—it was a result of these governmental conditions.

A Question and an Answer.

"But," the apologists for the administration will say, "distracted as he has been by the Mexican and the German destruction of American life, how can the president be expected to have realized or to have done anything to reduce to order this overwhelming muddle in the waterways of the United States?"

To this the answer must be made which has already been given. The Eastland catastrophe—in which through their implicit belief in the conscientiousness of our own government seven times as many American lives were destroyed as in all our foreign sea losses of our citizens since the outbreak of the European war—has been both in actual physical loss and in spiritual significance a more deeply damaging experience for the nation than anything which has occurred in her foreign relations. For it has touched the question not of her fortunes, nor of what happens to her from without—but of her own quality, and whether she is capable of conniving at a continuing miserable betrayal of her own citizens.

Why has the administration not kept its word in dealing with the Eastland tragedy?

The president owes the country a sincere reply to that question. Unless he desires to answer it fully before the expiration of his term of office he must stand condemned of gravely unworthy conduct to the interests of the people of the United States.

45 NEW EASTLAND SUITS

Forty-five new damage suits were filed in the United States District court yesterday in connection with the sinking of the Eastland by Attorney Harry W. Standidge.

Three new defendants were named. They are M. H. McGovern, as agent for the Chicago Railways company in the construction of the tunnel under the river; Ferdinand W. Peck, and the Western Electric company.

"Personally, I don't think the Western Electric company can be held," Attorney Standidge said, "but I can't decide that question for all the libellants. That is something the court will have to determine."

Eight Eastland suits were filed in the state courts yesterday, the total in that jurisdiction being 400. There have been 360 suits filed in the federal courts.

BUREAU TO MAKE WIDE INQUIRY ON U.S. GOVERNMENT

Research Institute Backed by Rockefeller Interests—Senators Oppose the Step.

New York, July 22.—[Special.]—A searching investigation into every department of the United States government is to be made by the Institute for Government Research.

It was revealed today that this new bureau for federal inquiry was formed and is backed by the Rockefeller interests. The director and members of the board of trustees are men prominently identified with Rockefeller philanthropies.

The Institute for Government Research was organized last March. The scope and extent of its work in the planned federal government investigation have not until now been revealed. Already the proposed probe of every branch of the government has caused a furore in Washington.

William Franklin Willoughby, professor of jurisprudence and politics at Princeton university, is director of the institute. He will be in charge of the investigation. Prof. Willoughby recently visited the bureau of municipal research, New York, after which the new institute is modeled, and asked for investigators from that staff "best suited for governmental inquiries."

Trustees from Rockefeller Activities

The board of trustees of the institute is composed of the following men, all of whom are prominently identified with Rockefeller activities. Frank J. Goodnow, president of Johns Hopkins university, chairman; Edwin A. Alderman, secretary; Frederick Strauss, treasurer; Robert S. Brookings of St. Louis, Charles W. Eliot, former president of Harvard university, and Raymond B. Fosdick.

With the above named board the following men have been asked to coöperate: James F. Curtis of the federal reserve bank, New York City; R. Fulton Cutting, who ranks next to Rockefeller in supporting the bureau of municipal research; Felix Frankfurter of Harvard; Arthur T. Hadley, president of Yale; Mrs. E. H. Harriman, who has contributed largely to the bureau of municipal research; C. Lombardi of Dallas, Tex.; A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard; Samuel Mather, an ironmaster of Cleveland, O.; Charles P. Neill, Washington; Martin A. Ryerson of Chicago university, a Rockefeller institution; Theodore N. Vail, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, and Charles R. Van Hise, president of the University of Wisconsin.

Will Examine Inside Business.

The institute intends to examine into the inside business of all federal departments and bureaus, just as the bureau of municipal research has been digging into New York City's government.

The close relation between the Washington and New York City institutions does not surprise Wall street. It was pointed out today by one prominent financier that Rockefeller is one of the largest contributors to the New York City bureau.

The last report of the bureau of municipal research shows that up to Dec. 31, 1914, J. D. Rockefeller led all other contributors with a total of $125,000. Next came R. Fulton Cutting, with $116,785.

A pamphlet obtained at the offices of the Rockefeller foundation spoke of the institute for governmental research as "an association of citizens for coöperating with public officials in the scientific study of business methods with a view to promoting efficiency in government and advancing the science of administration.

Government Is Business.

"No question before the people of the United States is of more urgent practical importance than this—

"How can the citizens exercise intelligent and effective control over their joint public business? For, in one aspect, government is a business.

"Whatever the government does at all it should do well. The more it does, the more important it is that it should be well done. The greater the necessary expense, the more important that unnecessary expense and waste be avoided.

"What is needed is a thorough analytic study of the ways in which savings can be effected and the standard of work improved without injury to the efficiency or morale of the government service."

Senators Oppose Proposal.

Washington, D. C., July 22.—[Special.]—The proposal to have the Institute for Government Research investigate the efficiency of government departments is violently opposed by prominent members of the senate. These senators declare the principle of permitting a private institution to probe government matters is unheard of and inimical to public interest.

COL. BUTLER DIED 'IN LINE OF DUTY'; NAME IS CLEARED

Army Officer's Ruling Gives Widow of Slain Man Pension; Mrs. Spannell Buried.

Washington, D. C., July 22.—Lieut. Col. M. C. Butler, victim with Mrs. Harry J. Spannell in the double shooting tragedy at Alpine, Tex., died "in the line of duty" —and his wife will get a pension.

This was the result of a report tonight by Col. J. H. Gaston, sent by the war department to investigate the shooting of Butler and Mrs. Spannell by the woman's husband.

Entitles Widow to Pension.

Gaston was ordered from the southern army department to investigate the shooting. Army rules are that the widow of an officer killed "while conducting himself as a gentleman" is entitled to a pension.

The official account bore out the informal accounts of the affair which reached the department this morning.

All agree Spannell killed his wife and Lieut. Col. Butler because of jealousy, for which there was no basis.

Bury Wife of Spannell.

Alpine, Tex., July 22.—Practically the entire population of Alpine attended funeral services here today for Mrs. Crystal Holland Spannell, who, with Lieut. Col. M. C. Butler, was killed by her husband last Thursday night. Friends of Spannell said today that he apparently shot in a fit of insane jealousy.

As she boarded a train last night for Washington, where she is taking her husband's body for burial, Mrs. Butler said to friends on the station platform:

"Neither my husband nor Mrs. Spannell was in the least to blame."

Slayer Under Heavy Guard.

El Paso, Tex., July 22.—Harry J. Spannell, who Thursday night shot and killed his wife and Lieut. Col. M. C. Butler at Alpine, Tex., was held in the county jail here today under heavy guard.

On the way to the jail the party was intercepted by a newspaper man, who asked Spannell why he killed the couple.

Apparently on the verge of a collapse, Spannell replied:

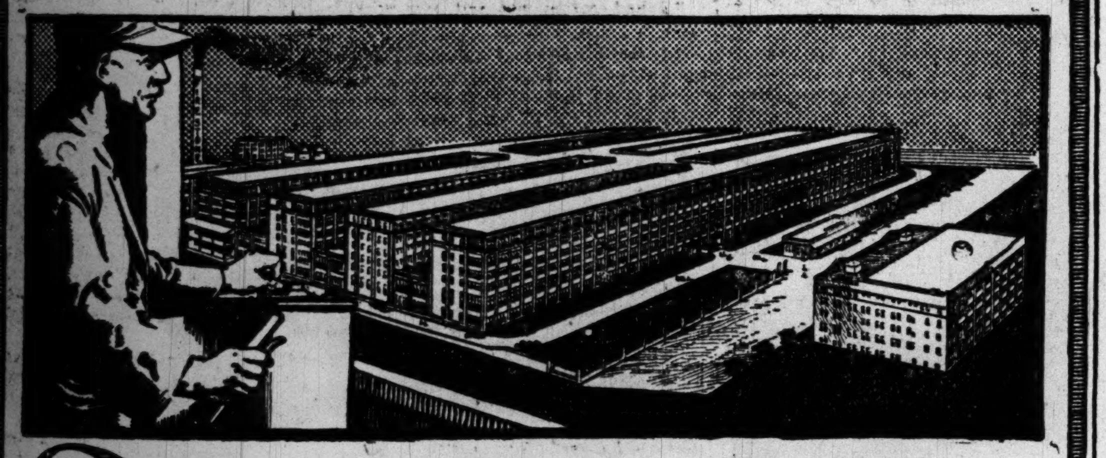
PHONES TO MISS YOUKER.

Orpet, Registered at Milwaukee Hotel, Talks to Supposed Fiancee.

Will Orpet and Celestia Youker are not so badly at outs as has been intimated, according to reports from Milwaukee, where it is said Orpet has been spending his time since Friday.

The young man recently acquitted of the murder of Marion Lambert is said to have eluded watch and gone to Milwaukee, where he registered under an assumed name at the Wisconsin hotel. He remained closely in his room, but was said to have held a telephone conversation with Celestia Youker.

The hotel management has refused to permit newspaper men to see Orpet.



A 12,000 Horse Power Man

You ask, "What has this to do with me as a buyer of tires?" Just this—by such savings at the Firestone factory we cut down the cost of tire mileage for you.

Instead of paying 30 cents or more per ton for feeding coal, we install equipment that feeds for 4 cents a ton. One man feeds hundreds of tons a day that develop 12,000 horsepower.

Firestone Tires

It is equipment and efficiency of this kind throughout the Firestone factory and branches that give you exclusive quality at ordinary price in Firestone Tires. One 12,000 horsepower turbine instead of a battery of small ones; buying from plantation and shipping direct; equipment for calendering and cutting 84-inch fabric instead of the narrower widths; scientific distribution through branches by carload and trainload. These are some of the ways Firestone takes the cost out of overhead and puts the quality in the Tire. You profit through more quality—more mileage for less money.

RILEY, HOOSIER POET, EXPIRES; FRIEND OF KIDS

Indiana Writer, Sign Painter, and Rover Earned Fortune; Author of Poe Hoax.

In the early '80s he began writing verses in "Hoosier" dialect for the old Indianapolis Journal. He sent some of his poems to Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and they received his praise. A volume was published and "the Hoosier poet" began to win a public. He was an excellent reader of his own dialect verses and for the following fifteen years, or until 1898, he made tours of the country, appearing in public with great success, both alone and in association with the humorist, Bill Nye, who was his intimate friend.

Publication of books of poems year after year brought Riley a fortune and wide recognition of his literary genius. Many of his poems are of imaginative fantasy or gently philosophic.

Receives College Degrees.

In 1902 he received the degree of master of arts from Yale university and in 1904 the University of Pennsylvania conferred upon him the degree of doctor of letters. Indiana university conferred the honorary degree of LL.D. on him in 1907.

In July, 1911, the poet presented to the city of Indianapolis property valued at $75,000 for a site for a public library and school administration building.

Mr. Riley never married, but he was a lover of children, whose spirit he divined so intimately, and of family life. Many of the last years of his life he spent quietly at his home in a secluded section of Indianapolis.

BABIES LOST ON NEW PIER.

Superintendent Finds Two Little Ones Listening to Band Concert.

Last night at the Municipal pier two little kiddies slipped away from their parents and began to explore.

When Ina Prince, 4 years old, of 941 South Hoyne avenue had squandered the nickel she had grasped very tightly in her hand for some two hours, she and her brother, Walton, visited the band concert.

Maybe the names and address are wrong, but that's the way Ina talked them.

While they were clapping their hands in time with the strains of "Pretty Baby" Ina looked around for her mother, and not being able to see her, started to weep. About this time E. W. Gregg, the assistant superintendent of the pier, appeared, gathered up the two wanderers, and placed them in the nursery. Both were given some more pop corn and ice cream cones, and told to wait until their mother was called. When the mother could not be found the superintendent returned and put the kiddies to bed.

ARREST 2 INVESTIGATORS AT HAWTHORNE TRACK.

When They Told Sheriffs to Take Men Accused as Bookmakers, Sheriffs Took Them, Too.

Two investigators under the direction of Arthur Burrage Farwell, president of the Englewood Law and Order league, proved there was gambling at Hawthorne race track yesterday because they were arrested for it and that made it almost a cinch.

Fourteen other alleged betters were arrested by deputy sheriffs under Sheriff Traeger, in addition to Samuel Burns of 4947 Calumet avenue and Archie Coldin of 7055 East Ravenswood park, the investigators.

Gambling was freely carried on by the "nod and beckon" system, and women were said to be eager patrons of the bookmakers who were industrious in and about the grandstands.

When the two investigators had made and lost four bets and won a fifth they called for the arrest of Jack Hart, 4111 Prairie avenue and M. Hunter, 422 East Forty-fourth street. The two were taken and the deputies also took the investigators.

VAN VLISSINGEN TO LEAVE JOLIET PRISON ON TUESDAY.

Former Chicago Mortgage Banker Will Seek Position as Foreign Correspondent.

Joliet, Ill., July 22.—[Special.]—Peter Van Vlissingen, Chicago mortgage banker, convicted of forgery nearly eight years ago, leaves the penitentiary Tuesday. He will seek a position as a foreign correspondent for an American magazine or newspaper. Van Vlissingen became interested in journalism while in the penitentiary and was editor of the Joliet Prison Post for several years.

He will not attempt to regain his position in the financial world. His ambition is to write the history of the European war as a correspondent.

SOME OF RILEY'S POEMS

WHEN THE FROST IS ON THE PUNKIN.

When the frost is on the punkin and the fodders' in the shock,
And you hear the kyouck and gobble of the struttin' turkey cock,
And the clackin' of the guineys, and the cluckin' of the hens,
And the rooster's hallylooyer as he tiptoes on the fence;
O, it's then's the times a feller is a-feelin' at his best,
With the risin' sun to greet him from a night of peaceful rest,
As he leaves the house, bare headed, and goes out to feed the stock,
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock.

They's something kindo' hearty-like about the atmosphere
When the heat of summer's over and the coolin' fall is here—
Of course we miss the flowers and the blossoms on the trees,
And the mumble of the hummin' birds and buzzin' of the bees;
But the air's so appetizin', and the landscape through the haze
Of a crisp and sunny morning of the early autumn days
Is a pictur' that no painter has the colorin' to mock—
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock.

The husky, rusty bustle of the tossels of the corn,
And the raspin' of the tangled leaves, as golden as the morn;
The stubble in the furries—kindo' lonesome like, but still
A-preachin' sermons to us of the barns they growed to fill;
The strawstack in the medder, and the reaper in the shed;
The hosses in theyr stalls below—the clover overhead!—
O, it sets my heart a-clickin' like the tickin' of a clock,
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock.

EDWARD HINES IS CHOSEN.

Detroit, Mich., July 22.—[Special.]—Following the closing of the last session of the World's Salesmanship congress, General Sales Manager Hawkins of the Ford Motor company was elected president of the World's Salesmanship congress for the coming year, and Edward Hines, president of the Hines Lumber company of Chicago, was elected to a place on the executive committee.

Street Car Kills Negro.

Edward Jannett, a Negro, 3561 Cottage Grove avenue, was struck and instantly killed last night by a State street car at Thirty-eighth and South State streets.

THE OLD HOME ON A SUMMER DAY.

Blent with all outer sounds, the sounds within—
In mild remoteness falls the household din
Of porch and kitchen; the dull jar and thump
Of churning; and the "glung-glung" of the pump,
With sudden pad and skurry of bare feet
Of little outlaws, in from field or street;
The clang of kettle—rasp of damperring ring
And bang of cookstove door—and everything
That jingles in a busy kitchen lifts
Its individual wrangling voice and drifts
In sweetest tinny, coppery, pewtery tone
Of music hungry ear has ever known
In wildest famished yearning and conceit
Of youth, to just cut loose and eat and eat!

. . . .

The swooning-sweet aroma haunting all
The house—upstairs and down—porch, parlor, hall
And sitting room—invading even where
The Hired Man sniffs in the orchard air,
And pauses in his pruning of the trees
To note the sun minutely and to—sneeze.

MOTHER.

Shrined in her sanctity of home and love,
And love's fond service and reward thereof,
Restore her thus. O blessed Memory!—
Throned in her rocking-chair, and on her knee
Her sewing—her workbasket on the floor
Beside her—Springtime through the open door
Balmily stealing in and all about
The room; the bees' dim hum, and the far shout
And laughter of the children at their play,
And neighbor-children from across the way
Calling in gleeful challenge—save alone
One boy whose voice sends back no answering tone—
The boy, prone on the floor, above a book
Of pictures, with a rapt, ecstatic look—
Even as the mother's, by the selfsame spell,
Is lifted, with a light ineffable—
As though her senses caught no mortal cry,
But heard, instead, some poem going by.

HUSBAND HUNTS SINGER.

Police have been asked to look for Mrs. Violet Daniels Furno of 2402 Wentworth avenue, who formerly sang with the Chicago Grand Opera company, and who is believed by her husband, John Furno, to be traveling in vaudeville with an organization known as the Orpheum Trio.

LAUNCH COAST SURVEY

Miss Elizabeth Brent Jones Christens Vessel Surveyor as It Takes Water.

One of the largest vessels to be used by the government coast survey was launched in the yards of the Manitowoc Shipbuilding company yesterday and christened Surveyor by Miss Elizabeth Brent Jones, daughter of Brent Jones, superintendent of the United States coast and geodetic survey.

The vessel is 186 feet long. In keeping with the usage of the shipbuilding company, it was launched sidewise. The vessel careened heavily, but righted immediately.

Before the close of navigation the Surveyor will begin its voyage through the lakes and the St. Lawrence river to the Atlantic and thence through the Panama canal on its way to Alaska.

CLASHES DUE AT CONFERENCE ON HALF-WITS

Scully, Olson, Hoffman, Mrs. Monroe Hold Divergent Views on Remedies.

Several sharp clashes of opinion are scheduled to be aired when County Judge Scully's forty experts meet tomorrow in conference on the subject of mental defectives.

Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal court, Coroner Peter M. Hoffman, and Mrs. William S. Monroe of the Illinois Society for Mental Hygiene, have each formulated programs for handling the half-wit conditions which they hope to induce the conference to accept. On their essential points the views of these three are radically different from the opinions of Judge Scully and his county psychopathic staff.

Hoffman Poor Listener.

Coroner Hoffman yesterday morning found an invitation to attend the conference on his desk, although his name had not been on the list given out at Judge Scully's chambers the previous evening.

"I must have overlooked it," the coroner said.

"I am going to the conference and I am not going with the intention of being a mere listener," the coroner continued. "I have a definite practical plan for immediate action and I want to see it adopted.

"Immediate action is necessary; the city is full of these half-wits—why, my own son and my own daughter have been insulted and threatened and pursued by vicious 'nuts' within the last two weeks. These vicious half-wits are the ones to look after right now. It doesn't require any long drawn out highbrow tactics to do it."

Wants Immediate Arrest.

These vicious ones who disturb their neighborhoods and make threats, who are affected and are made more dangerous by the hot weather, are known to the police. The McIntyre inquest has shown this.

"I will suggest as an immediate and temporary relief that the county judge order the police to bring in all known vicious half wits and have them submit to mental examination. No new laws are needed for this."

Olson Combats Theories.

Judge Olson is prepared to combat the theories of the county medical staff that each psychopathic case requires prolonged observation. He anticipated the coming conference by issuing the annual report of the city's psychopathic laboratory several weeks in advance of its regular time. This report was prepared by Dr. William J. Hickson, who is now on the border with the militia.

"That report," said Judge Olson, "will open the eyes of a lot of people who think they are up on the subject of mental defectives. It shows for one thing that a man who is properly qualified—and there are mighty few of them in this country—can pass on a case and arrive at accurate results in a short time."

The method of arriving at results in the city's psychopathic laboratory, as shown by the report, are the Benet test, a drawing test, and a test on the association of ideas.

Different Treatment Necessary.

"The city of Chicago and the state of Illinois are lacking in proper facilities for handling the mentally deficient," said the chief justice. "The city should by all means have a psychopathic clinic. Then the state should have proper institutions for handling cases found through the clinic. There should be farm colonies and camps for the care of the feeble minnded because these people, under such conditions, are docile and class as about 40 per cent efficient as workers.

"There is a third class composed of dementia præcox and feeble minded combined. Each class requires a different kind of treatment and never should be mixed together."

It developed during the day that the Russell Sage foundation has made a survey of the mentally defective in Springfield, Ill., and its report will be available for the Chicago conference.

SHADES TO KEEP SUN GLARE OFF EVANSTON COPS

Mrs. Eugene Barnhart to Provide Crossing Men with Heat Protection.

Sing, ho, for the Evanston traffic coppers three!

Who shall we thank for this grand little idea? None but Mr. Eugene Morse Barnhart, who was Miss Lillian Johnson, who feels that even a crossing copper gets het up now and again.

Mrs. Morse drives her own car and has observed with growing concern that the traffic policemen on the three business corners of Evanston are compelled to stand in a lot of heat from day to day. So she went to the chief of police.

"Will a sunshade for each of the three traffic policemen be acceptable?" she asked.

"They will," answered the chief.

So now they will be shady coppers for fair.

WACO KID COMING BACK; LOSES FIGHT IN COLORADO.

Gov. Carlson Admits Claim of Illinois to Prisoner After Two Hour Hearing.

Denver, Colo., July 22.—[Special.]—At the close of a hearing lasting two hours, Gov. Carlson announced this evening that he would honor the requisition of the state of Illinois for the return to Chicago of William Powell, alias the Waco Kid, indicted for having swindled Theodore Russell, an Iowa farmer, out of $5,000 in 1913. Assistant District Attorney Irwin Walker and Deputy J. G. Murphy left with Powell at 9:30 tonight for Chicago.

Since his arrest here two weeks ago, Powell has made a bitter fight against extradition, asserting it was a frame-up to railroad him to the penitentiary for his alleged connection with the notorious police graft cases in Chicago.

In announcing his decision, Gov. Carlson said he thought Powell's identification complete and he could not impugn the motives of the Chicago authorities. Among the Kid's witnesses were his wife, his aged parents and the former district attorney of Waco.

BILL SULZER WILSON RIVAL.

$350 and a FORD makes a guaranteed One Ton Truck

Cuts Overhead Out of Selling Price

Furniture dealers all over the country are finding the Smith Form-a-Truck such an economical form of delivery that they can mark down the retail prices on the goods they sell through effecting a saving in their delivery costs.

It is the first completely guaranteed one ton truck on which the cost of operation can be safely set at four cents a ton mile or less. And the original investment is only $350 and the price of any Ford chassis—less than half the original cost of any other guaranteed one ton truck.

Competition in the furniture business is severe. Every possible saving must be made in order that the retail price may be one which will enable you to successfully meet all forms of competition.

The average delivery department shows greater possibilities of reducing overhead than any other department in the business.

The reason is many furniture dealers have put up with expensive horse drawn service rather than take the risk of buying heavy over sized trucks too large and too expensive for economical service.

The Smith Form-a-Truck relieves all this difficulty, and it costs less than a good pair of horses and a wagon—does its work four times as fast—and four times as well—increases the radius of delivery from thirty to sixty per cent—and is large enough to carry the biggest loads you will ever deliver.

The Smith Form-a-Truck is a rear end attachment which fits over the frame of any Ford car. The frame of the Smith Form-a-Truck attachment is channel steel section four inches deep. It gives a 125 inch wheelbase and a nine foot loading space back of the driver's seat.

The drive system is double side chain type with rear axle of the Ford as jackshaft. Tires are solid Firestone truck type 32x3½. Any two men can install a Smith Form-a-Truck attachment on a Ford chassis in a few hours.

Special Lubrication Feature

To guarantee trouble-proof, efficient lubrication for Ford motors used in connection with the Smith Form-a-Truck, we are furnishing as regular equipment with every Smith Form-a-Truck sold, a Strong Sight Feed Oiler. This is a force feed system with guage on the dash and a system that insures a positive, even flow of oil to all the working parts on the motor. It reduces the amount of oil consumed—prevents burned out connecting rod and crankshaft bearings and cylinder troubles, increases the life and efficiency of motor.

ADVERTISING MEN PLAN CAMPAIGN TO HELP HUGHES

Organization Headed by Chicagoans to Give Publicity to Principles.

New York, July 22.—[Special.]—Another organization of business men which promises to be nation-wide in its scope and which will devote its efforts to the election of Charles E. Hughes, was born today. It is an organization of advertising men. It will have headquarters in New York and branches throughout the country.

"The truth in politics" will be the slogan of the latest Hughes organization, and it will advocate the widest and fullest advertising propaganda of Republican principles that can be carried on.

The plan has the fullest support of Chairman William R. Wilcox and the other members of the Republican campaign committee.

Chicago Men Head Move.

Arnold Jaerns, who will be president, and R. Robert Virtue, secretary of the advertising organization, called on Chairman Willcox today in company with Frederick W. Upham, western treasurer of the Republican campaign committee. Both Mr. Jaerns and Mr. Virtue are Chicago men.

They outlined to Chairman Willcox a plan for the coöperation of the advertising experts of the country in promoting the Hughes campaign. The free use of newspapers, magazines, and billboards will be resorted to in much the same way that a large mercantile house would announce the sale of a new or unknown product.

Former Envoy Criticizes Wilson.

Other callers at Republican headquarters today were Alvah H. Martin of Virginia, national committeeman and member of the campaign committee, and Henry Lane Wilson, former ambassador to Mexico.

"We are treating the Mexican situation from the surface and not from the roots. Intervention is bound to come eventually," said Mr. Wilson, referring to the Mexican policy of the present national administration.

Hughes Writing Acceptance Speech.

Bridgehampton, N. Y., July 22.—Charles E. Hughes, the Republican presidential nominee, worked all day, with only few interruptions, preparing the speech of acceptance, which he will make at New York on the night of July 31. Rain deprived him of an anticipated game of golf, but did not prevent his motoring to Southampton beach to see the wreck of the four-masted Norwegian ship Clan Galbraith which went aground in a fog.

TEXAS SENATOR RACE CLOSE.

Dallas, Tex., July 22.—A close race between O. B. Colquitt and T. M. Campbell, former governors, seeking the Democratic nomination for United States senator, was indicated tonight in incomplete returns from today's state-wide primary, which is equivalent to election.

Gov. James E. Ferguson apparently has been renomianted by a substantial majority over two opponents. The vote on the question of submitting a constitutional amendment for prohibition was close.

ANTI-SULLIVAN SLATE DELAYED

Roger's Foes Hold Up Naming of Ticket Until Harrison Gets Home.

The anti-Sullivan Democratic slate for county offices only will be made next Wednesday afternoon. This was determined yesterday at a session of the temporary organization in charge of the movement held at the Briggs house. Determination of candidates who will be pitted against Sullivan regulars at the Sept. 13 primaries awaits the coming of former Mayor Harrison.

Philip J. McKenna, chairman of the anti-Sullivan organization, said Gov. Dunne and State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne were not consulted in preliminaries leading up to yesterday's session.

Rebel Against One Man Rule.

"This movement is a result of a spontaneous rebellion against one man domination of the Democratic party," Mr. McKenna said. "It is not a factional objection and is not a Harrison movement or a Dunne movement, or a Harrison-Dunne movement. It is an anti-Sullivan movement.

"In it are many regularly elected ward committeemen who have been classed as Sullivan men, but who found, after spending time and money in getting elected as ward committeemen, that the real business of the party is being handled by a so-called 'executive committee' dominated by George Brennan. We had a meeting today that hasn't been exceeded for enthusiasm in years. We have twenty-five candidates for the sanitary district board and as many for the board of assessors. We will have a full county ticket that will be named next Wednesday afternoon."

No State Slate Planned.

Mr. McKenna was asked if a state ticket would be indorsed.

"We have been going along on the theory that Gov. Dunne would have no opposition in the primaries. We have not discussed a state ticket and probably will confine this movement to the county ticket. Gov. Dunne and State's Attorney Hoyne were not consulted in making the arrangements. Undoubtedly Gov. Dunne will hold himself away from factional disturbance."

Albert J. Flynn has filed as a candidate for state auditor in the Democratic primaries. He was a candidate for Supreme court clerk two years ago.

MORE JOIN PRIMARY RACE.

Petitions by Candidates for Lieutenant Governorship Down Filed at Springfield.

Springfield, Ill., July 22.—[Special.]—Primary petitions filed today with Secretary of State Stevenson were as follows:

Representative in general assembly, Second Senatorial district—Jeremiah E. Hally, Democrat, 1452 Plum street, Chicago; Jacob H. Marks, Republican, 918 South Paulina street, Chicago. Ninth Senatorial district—Frank W. Leins, Democrat, 2131 West Twenty-third place, Chicago.

Lieutenant governor—William J. Butler, Republican, 602 South Fourth street, Springfield.

ICKES AND MAYOR TO DIVIDE WORK OF THE CAMPAIGN

Hughes and Willcox Pound Harmony Into Illinois Chieftains, Who Reach Home.

Charles E. Hughes and National Chairman William R. Willcox pounded enough harmony into Illinois Republicans to establish an apparent peace that may last until after the Hughes meeting at the Coliseum Aug. 8.

Exactly what Mr. Hughes said to Senator Sherman, Mayor Thompson, Fred W. Upham, and Harold L. Ickes is not disclosed by unofficial reports. The mayor, Mr. Upham, and Mr. Ickes got back to Chicago from New York yesterday and this appears to be the situation:

Harold L. Ickes, who is chairman of the Progressive state committee, is to be recognized as the midwestern member of the Hughes campaign committee. This committee will be in general charge of the campaign, map the itinerary of Mr. Hughes and boss the job generally.

Mayor's Part Settled.

Mayor Thompson, as the Republican national committeeman from Illinois, will enjoy all rights and privileges that go along with this job, and as such will be recognized as head of the party machinery in all matters that have to do with the presidential campaign in Illinois. One prerogative will be to have immediate charge of arrangements for Candidate Hughes from the time he crosses the Indiana line until he is out of Illinois on his way westward.

Fred W. Upham, as assistant treasurer of the Republican national committee, will have headquarters in Chicago and is to be considered by national headquarters chiefs in New York as the responsible authority when quick decisions are necessary.

Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman may be the chairman of the Coliseum meeting, although this hasn't been determined.

General Peace Reports Circulated.

When the Chicago men reached home the report was in circulation that a general peace had been established.

Mayor Thompson and Mr. Ickes, in statements made after their arrival, agreed that the New York conference had resolved all differences that might have arisen or were possible. Mr. Ickes maintained he had not been a party to any of the gossip that had precipitated the trouble originally.

FLOOD OF MESSAGES URGE HENRY FORD FOR GOVERNOR.

Port Huron, Mich., July 22.—Letters and telegrams flooded the offices of Democratic State Chairman A. E. Stevenson here today, urging the candidacy of Henry Ford for the Democratic nomination for governor.

WOMAN LEADS RAID IN THE LOOP

"Ad Man" Accused of Luring Models to Life of Vice.

In a spectacular raid by detectives of State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne's office, led by a woman operative of the Committee of Fifteen, Alexander Louis, who says he lives at 1055 North Central avenue, Austin, was arrested in his office in the Steinway building, 64 East Van Buren street, on charges of attempted pandering and disorderly conduct. He denied all the charges, and declared he is the victim of persecution. He was released on bond.

The detectives forced their way into the room after Louis is alleged to have tried to take liberties with the woman operative who went to the office to investigate. The arrest was made Friday evening, but was not made public until Saturday. He says he is an advertising man.

Hoyne Questions Louis.

Assistant State's Attorney Alexander E. Arken accompanied the operative and Detectives Kane, Oakey, and Sullivan of the state's attorney's office to the downtown building.

Louis was questioned in Mr. Hoyne's office later. He denied any wrongdoing. According to Mr. Arken, the prisoner tried to induce a certain married woman, whose name is being closely guarded, and also the woman operative of the Committee of Fifteen to enter a life of shame, and told them of a "rich woman living in the Auditorium hotel who would give them money to start with."

Samuel P. Thrasher, head of the Committee of Fifteen, brought about the raid.

Arken Tells the Story.

Mr. Arken told the story of what he said were the circumstances leading up to Louis' undoing.

"On June 8, 1916, Louis had inserted in an afternoon newspaper an advertisement which read: "Ladies wanted for modeling, 36 to 38 bust. Address W. C."

"On June 11 a certain married woman, whose husband was ill and incapacitated, answered the advertisement. I can't make public her name. She had done model work for a number of artists earlier in her life. She went to Louis' office in room 914 Steinway building. He made improper advances towards her and asked her to disrobe, saying he wanted to see the outline of her body.

"The woman struck him in the face and rushed out of the office.

"The woman, much enraged, complained to Mr. Trasher of the Committee of Fifteen.

Tells of Setting Trap.

"Last Wednesday a woman operative of the committee went to the office to investigate and pretended to be responding to the advertisement. She asked Louis what kind of a position was open. He said he wanted a good looking young woman with a good form. She says he asked her to disrobe. She explained that she was in a hurry but that she would come back Friday evening at 7 o'clock.

"She reported back to Mr. Thrasher and he called the affair to the attention of Mr. Hoyne.

"We then arranged to trap the fellow. The woman operative led us to the room in the Steinway building and the detectives and I waited outside in hiding while the woman operative went inside to keep her appointment.

Pictures of Disrobed Women.

"Louis began by showing her a book of pictures of unrobed women and said they had posed for him at different times. In reality these pictures were reproductions of paintings, we found later on. He asked the operative to disrobe and pose for him, saying he would use her form, but not her face.

"He told her he had a rich woman friend living at the Auditorium hotel and said he had sent a woman model to her at one time and that this rich woman furnished a flat for her in a wealthy residential district where the model afterward conducted a disorderly place frequented by wealthy men. He said this girl made thousands of dollars and finally married a rich man and was now leading a respectable life.

"He told the woman operative that the same opportunities were open to her.

"Finally he tried to take liberties with the operative and when she screamed for help we heard her. We forced our way into the room and seized and arrested Louis.

Louis Makes Denial.

Louis made a general denial of the accusation. He was interviewed at the home of his wife's parents, 5434 Rice street.

"There is absolutely nothing to the charges," he said vehemently. "All I can see in them is a blackmailing scheme.

"The advertisement," he added, when asked concerning it, "was a legitimate proposition. The State street stores for whom I am doing some work will stand behind me in that.

"This woman who makes the charges came to my offices a number of times and insisted upon seeing me.

"That I attempted anything improper is preposterous. The fact is she forced herself on me."

It was in reference to the support given these accusations by the woman investigator of the Committee of Fifteen who had been sent to his office as an applicant in answer to the advertisement that he alleges blackmail. He expressed himself bitterly toward Mr. Thrasher and asserted he is being persecuted by him.

NEW YORK MOOSE LEADERS FAIL TO INDORSE HUGHES.

State Committee Adjourns Without Carrying Out Perkins' Plan—Police Quell Disturbance.

Syracuse, N. Y., July 22.—The meeting of the Progressive state committee, in a session beginning early this afternoon, adjourned at 9 o'clock tonight without carrying out the plan favored by Horace S. Wilkinson and George W. Perkins of indorsing Charles E. Hughes for the presidency of the United States.

The adjournment was made without date and with the understanding that there would be no other meeting of the Progressive state committee this year.

The motion to adjourn was made by William H. Hotchkiss, former state superintendent of insurance, and was carried with few dissenting votes. When Mr. Hotchkiss offered his resolution there were loud protests from different parts of the hall and the police were called to quiet some of the trouble makers.

Also, they are more pleasing to the taste, as any one can demonstrate for himself.

A message from
ENGLEFIELD

I am a Message. The Tribune is my Messenger Boy. I am intended for only a small fraction of its readers. The rest can now turn to the next page.

I bring good tidings only to those of the South Side—to these I open wide the door of opportunity, and invite them into their own home, a dainty, modern house not built by hands alone, but with brains and soul.

I am creating a beauty spot in crude, unlovely Southwest Chicago. I am turning more than 100 acres of truck gardens into a grassy, flower-bedecked Parkery, where workers can live on the same terms with nature and landscape art as the millionaire.

To the Southsider I come as a friend; I mean to enrich his life—to even his home chances with the man of Edgewater or Evanston. He will welcome my coming, and I will make him proud of his section.

My aim is to provide an ideal development under such easy conditions and at such low prices that the "will to buy" will open the portal of "home, sweet home" to every one.

This "message from Englefield" is simply to call attention to the large area at the junction of Ashland Avenue and 77th Street, to be called by that name. Nothing more will be published until Fall, but much can be seen that will open the eyes of all who visit us.

WM. E. HARMON & CO.
Randolph 4414. 140 So. Dearborn St.,
Marquette Bldg.

P. S.—

To compensate our South Side friends for taking note of this message we propose to divide $100 equally among all those who mail us their names by Tuesday noon, July 25, simply saying "The message has been read." This offer is confined to the residents of the district south of 22d street, and is only intended to extend the reading of this preliminary announcement of a new "Chicago Beautiful."

The names received will not be used in any way whatever, but destroyed as soon as the awards are made.

NATIONAL DRYS CUT 'RED TAPE' AND BEGIN WORK

With a million dollar campaign fund and two "live" candidates for president and vice president, the Prohibition party yesterday inaugurated its presidential campaign.

The managers didn't wait for formal notification ceremonies or any details of naming campaign committees. They just moved the national convention down to Chicago from St. Paul, resumed business in the red room of Hotel La Salle, hooked up with the nominees—former Gov. J. Frank Hanly of Indiana and Dr. Ira Landrith of Tennessee—and started business.

Party Workers at Reception.

Several hundred enthusiastic party workers from all over the country participated in the demonstration.

"This high responsibility came to me unsought and unasked," Mr. Hanly said. "It is an opportunity for great service to the cause which means much to the whole country. I shall give the best that lies within me. I will attempt to present this cause for which our party stands, so as to give it a place in the hearts and minds of the people and compel the consideration of the nation. Our campaign opens today—right now. We have a million dollar campaign fund this year, more than twice as much as ever has been spent."

Win in 1920—Landrith.

Dr. Landrith, the nominee for vice president, said:

"It matters little whether we win the coming campaign. The cause of prohibition cannot fail. We are sure to win in 1920 and I see no reason why we cannot pile up enough votes in 1916 to draw more votes than Theodore Roosevelt thought of getting four years ago."

Daniel A. Poling of Boston, temporary chairman of the St. Paul convention, presided at the reception. He afterward introduced Robert Patton of Springfield, Ill., who was the permanent chairman of the convention.

The executive and national committees are to meet this week in Chicago with the candidates to plan the campaign.

CHICAGO HEADQUARTERS OF NEW WOMEN'S PARTY.

Leader Cites Organization as Power in Politics—Campaign Program Is Mapped Out.

Washington, D. C., July 22.—[Special.]—Chicago has been selected the campaign headquarters of the woman's party, which was created last month, coming into being with a complete organization inherited from the Congressional union branches already formed in the equal suffrage states.

Campaign managers have been chosen for each of the states where women will vote equally with men at the fall elections, and speakers, many of them of national reputation, will start on their swing around the circle beginning Sept. 1.

Not a Suffrage Body.

"The Woman's party is not a suffrage organization, it is a political party," Miss Paul said. "It is now the third political party in the country, having taken the place vacated by the Progressive party.

"The Woman's party has a great advantage over the Progressive party, in that its vote, instead of being scattered over the entire United States, will be concentrated in twelve close and doubtful states where a small number of votes is sufficient to change election results."

Power in Politics.

"Everybody knows," Miss Paul added, "that we women contributed fully as much as men to the Progressive vote polled in 1912. That year woman suffrage, in the political sense, was not an issue. Now it is an intensely live issue. The vote of women this year, who have organized themselves in support of national woman suffrage, constitutes a source of strength political leaders cannot afford to discount.

"It is of far greater importance to them than the ragged remnants of the official Progressive party, about which they are all so anxiously concerning themselves."

JERSEY REPUBLICANS SAY WILSON CAN'T CARRY STATE.

Point Out President's Vote in 1912 Was Less than Combined Poll of Two Other Parties.

New York, July 22.—[Special.]—Republican politicians in New Jersey say they are confident President Wilson cannot carry his home state this fall. They base their calculations on the fact that Mr. Wilson's popular vote in New Jersey in 1912 was 55,956 less than the combined vote of the Republican and Progressive candidates for president, and the belief that he is not as strong with Jersey men now as he was then because of his handling of the Mexican situation and other administration problems.

In order to carry New Jersey this year the Republicans point out Mr. Wilson must have a large Progressive support, and they profess to believe that everything indicates that this support will be reduced to a minimum before the November elections.

CLAIM INDIANA FOR WILSON.

Vance McCormick and Senator Kern Predict Victory with Aid of Progressive Votes.

Washington, D. C., July 22.—[Special.]—"We will have enough Progressive votes to carry Indiana for President Wilson," Vance McCormick said, after a conference today with Senator Kern, "and we will elect two Democratic senators."

Vice President Marshall discussed with the Democratic campaign manager the part he is to take in the forthcoming political battle. He will make a number of speeches, if called upon.

G. O. P. GOVERNOR RACERS ARE BUSY

Lowden, Hull, and Smith Lambaste Each Other and Illinois Harvests On.

MOOSE CHIEFS LINE UP

The Illinois Republican primary fight for governor already is in the superheated stage. The leading candidates—Lowden, Smith, and Hull—are turning loose their heaviest campaign artillery. Thy are tramping up and down the state lambasting each other and fighting for votes.

The notable fact that sticks out of reports of the campaign for the week just ending is that the state generally is taking things easily and philosophically. Each candidate is getting a reasonable sort of reception as he hits various county seats, considering hot weather and the act that the bulk of the citizenship is busy with the harvest.

Moose Turn to Lowden.

Col. Lowden's headquarters takes great pride in a list of Progressives who announced themselves for Lowden. The latest addition is Phil Decker, the Murphysboro banker, who was Bull Moose nominee for state treasurer in 1912. He joins with Judge Dean Franklin of Macomb, the Progressive nominee for lieutenant governor four years ago, and William H. Hinebaugh, the Bull Moose member of Congress for two years from the La Salle district, in support of Lowden.

"Every development of the week has been favorable to Col. Lowden," said former Attorney General W. H. Stead, Col. Lowden's campaign manager. "When such terrific heat as has prevailed in southern Illinois during the last fortnight could not keep the voters from turning out in unprecedented numbers to hear the candidate discuss state and national issues the political trend is made evident to every observer."

Monday Lowden is to be in Kendall and De Kalb counties, Tuesday he is to be at the Stockyards Lowden club at the Saddle and Sirloin club, Wednesday he is to be in Will county.

Smith in Military Tract.

Col. Frank L. Smith wound up a trip through the military tract counties with this comment:

"I found the same condition on the west side of the Illinois river that I found elsewhere in the state—that is, the voters are going to take the nomination of a governor and all other officers into their own hands.

"Those who set up to be bosses haven't found the state of mind of the voters yet or else they are deliberately trying to fool themselves. But voters are tired of being bossed. They are tired of being delivered to on side or the other in some factional quarrel in which only those who are playing the game for the profit there is in it have any interest."

Hull Ends First Campaign Week.

State Senator Morton D. Hull ended his first week of campaign with a meeting at East St. Louis last night. He will return to Chicago today and after conferring with his campaign managers will resume his tour Tuesday.

Springfield will be the center of his activities this week, three meetings having been arranged in his behalf at the state capital. On Tuesday he will be at Virginia, Jacksonville, and Waverly and at Springfield at night. On Wednesday he will be at Virden, Carlinville, and Shipman, with a night meeting at Litchfield.

Beyond the announcement of his candidacy and that Senator John Dailey is to have charge of his campaign, Mayor E. N. Woodruff of Peoria has not been active during the week.

103,000 Cars Stolen in 1915 alone

75% of Them Were Fords

Statistics show that in 1915 alone over ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND CARS WERE STOLEN.

And three out of every four, it is estimated, were F—O—R—D—S!

The work is done by an organization of clever thieves operating from coast to coast.

No amount of police protection—no amount of personal watchfulness on the part of the car owner seems to dismay these bold, brazen outlaws.

The first 4 months of 1916 would indicate that the yearly toll will exceed ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND THEFTS!

Your Ford May Be Next

Every time you leave your car unattended ANY PLACE you take a BIG chance of losing it.

No ordinary lock will withstand the jimmy of a clever crook!

In two minutes he can pick the lock; in one minute more he turns over the engine, jumps in—and it's good-bye car!

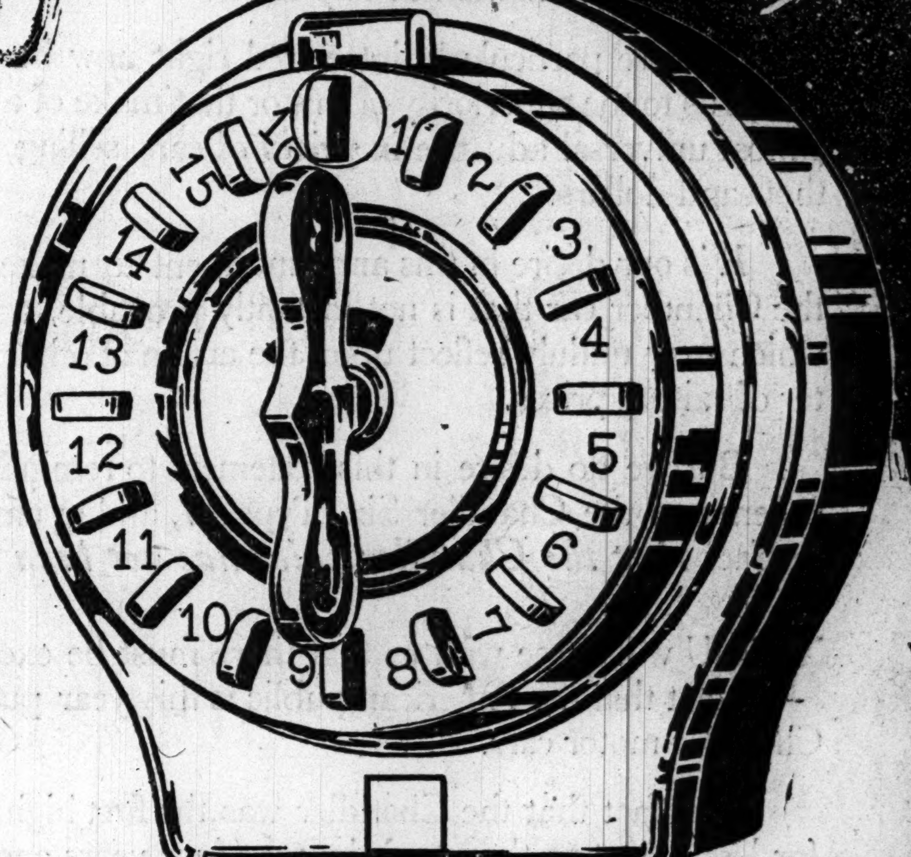
This very minute YOUR Ford may be in the hands of thieves or reckless joy-riders.



Safe, Sure Protection at Insignificant Cost

A clever inventor has DESIGNED and PERFECTED the slickest device you ever saw—to PREVENT car stealing and borrowing of cars by joy-riders.

As a result, thousands of Ford owners now leave their cars ANYWHERE, day or night—as long as they please—comfortable with the knowledge that said car will be standing right where it was left.

And the cost of the device—why, it's positively INSIGNIFICANT!

QUAYLE
KEYLESS AUTO LOCK

This Lock works on exactly the same principle as the lock on a burglar-proof Vault. The man who doesn't know the combination has just one chance in THIRTY THOUSAND to open it. Yet you can open it INSTANTLY because you KNOW THE COMBINATION. You do it without even LOOKING! Just press the exact buttons by the "Touch System" and—"Presto!" the car is unlocked. No keys to carry—no keys to forget.

Thieves, joy-riders and meddlers are completely baffled.

The "Quayle Keyless" is attached to the regular Ford switch without even disturbing the wiring. So simple is the method of attachment that any motorist can install it in five minutes. It is unqualifiedly endorsed by the leading Insurance Companies.

Unqualified Guarantee

We guarantee this lock to be the only genuine and original Quayle Keyless Lock.

We guarantee, unqualifiedly, that it cannot be picked by any thief—that it is absolutely burglar-proof—that it cannot possibly be broken without breaking the circuit of the ignition system.

We guarantee that it can be opened only by the correct combination—that the exact buttons must be pressed without touching any of the other buttons.

We guarantee that the combination may be changed at any time by the owner and that there are 30,000 possible combinations.

We guarantee that it can be installed without disturbing the wiring in any way.

We guarantee the Quayle Keyless Lock forever. If at any time it fails to completely fulfill every clause of this guaranty, we agree to refund the full purchase price on receipt of the lock.

DEALERS AND GARAGE MEN, ATTENTION

There are still some localities in which we have no representative. If such is the case in your city, we will be pleased to consider your application.

The Chandler Company wants a word with you about

Motor Car Values

and

Motor Car Prices

YOU men of affairs who read The Tribune, you merchants and manufacturers, farm managers and doctors and bankers and general business executives, you men are interested in motor car values and motor car selling prices.

You are interested because you are buying motor cars, and you are particularly interested right now because you are buying more of them at this season of the year than at any other.

You are particularly interested right now because of widely published claims as to the superiority of this or that make of automobile, and because of almost universal advance in prices of cars selling at between one and two thousand dollars.

It is our desire in this announcement to make no claim whatsoever for the Chandler car that is not instantly provable, and to make no statement which may unduly reflect upon the action of other manufacturers in the matter of raising prices.

But we do desire in this statement to remind you of the established excellence of the Chandler Six, Type 17, and to emphasize for your attention the fact that the Chandler price has not been marked up.

YOU will agree with us that there must be excellent reasons back of the fact that the American public is this year purchasing twenty thousand Chandler motor cars.

The fact that the Chandler was the first high grade six cylinder car sold for less than two thousand dollars (four years ago) has but little bearing on the leadership of the Chandler this year.

Just two facts primarily—the fact that the Chandler four years ago and ever since has led distinctly in the giving of value for every dollar asked in its selling price, and the fact that in this year of marked up prices the Chandler gives such excessive value for every dollar of its selling price—make the Chandler today the choice of so many men and their families.

We would not question the justification for the marked up prices of other cars in our field.

All materials, all equipment, everything that goes into and onto a high grade automobile, costs more this year than it did last year. There isn't any part of the car that costs less.

We state as our honest and unbiased judgment that there is not an automobile which reasonably might be looked upon as of similar character and grade selling within one hundred dollars of the Chandler price.

HERE in our factory we have thrashed out the question of an advanced price. We would be justified in advancing the price. We could sell our output at an advanced price.

But we have desired not to advance it, and we will not advance it unless the supply and material market conditions further develop to such an extent as to make this present price absolutely impossible.

In other words we have decided that the Chandler Company's relations with the public are such that we cannot afford to take advantage of a situation which would serve as a good excuse for adding a hundred or two hundred dollars to the price of this great car.

You may not be particularly interested in our reasons for not advancing the price, but you are vitally interested in the fact that we have not advanced the price.

You are vitally interested in this:

For $1295 you can buy the car with a perfected motor, worked out, developed and refined through a period of nearly four years, without radical change or an experimental feature.

For $1295 you can buy the car with the same simple, sturdy chassis, except for minor refinements, that has featured this leader of all light sixes for nearly four years.

For $1295 you can buy the car, the only one in its whole field, with solid cast aluminum motor base, the cleanest cut motor construction shown in the whole industry.

For $1295 you can buy the car with this great motor equipped with Bosch magneto (which most medium priced car manufacturers do not give you, because it costs so much more than the inferior types of ignition), the car with the Gray & Davis separate unit electric lighting and starting system, the car with the big double external and internal brakes, the car with the silent spiral bevel gear rear axle, the car with the highest grade light running ball bearings in rear wheels, differential, transmission, etc., the car with all of the modern refinements and highest grade details of equipment.

For $1295 you can buy this great car with the most beautiful bodies of the year, the bodies that six months ago showed the way for all that large group of manufacturers who are announcing "new models" this month.

These are facts, gentlemen, and the price is not marked up. We leave the rest to your judgment.

OUR dealers are doing a splendid business. There has been no time in the whole year when we have been able to make our deliveries catch up with our orders.

Here in our factory we are building one hundred Chandler Sixes daily. These cars are seven-passenger touring cars, four-passenger roadsters, convertible sedans and cabriolets. We are now coming into production on limousines and four-passenger convertible coupes.

Each and every one of these cars is a sweet running, powerful, refined motor car, with lots of life and go to it.

We have presented the facts above because we believe that right now when so many of you are about to make your purchases of the new car, we could not do you a greater service than this.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 22, 1916.

CITY OF 25,000 BUILT ON WAR WITHIN 2 YEARS

Workers Desert Other Plants to Get Big Munition Wages.

AFTER WAR—WHAT?

This is the first of a series of articles by Mr. Hyde in answer to the question "After the War—What?"

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

TWO years ago it was a stretch of galled and deserted farm land along the James river in Virginia. Today it is a city of 25,000 people—all of them dependent on the manufacture of guncotton, a single type of high explosive. And the man who named this swift city of sudden death called it, with savage irony, Hopewell.

"Where's Johnny Shepard?" asked a returning visitor to another Virginia city. "Oh, he's working over at Hopewell, getting $150 a month. That's six times as much as he ever earned here at home."

Thousands of men like Johnny Shepard—tens of thousands of them—have been working at Hopewell and other great explosive and munition plants in various parts of the country, at wages vastly greater than they ever dreamed of before. What is to happen to them when peace in Europe puts an end to the demand for dynamite, guncotton, and shells?

SHARES TO EMPLOYES.

More than eighteen months ago the largest corporation in the United States engaged in the manufacture of high explosives was reorganized on a vastly greater scale, in order to handle the enormous orders from overseas. Shares of stock in the new company were distributed among the managers, department heads, and other important employés.

They were given opportunity to buy additional shares at rock bottom prices. Presently the new shares went soaring several hundred per cent above par. And hundreds of fortunate employés cashed in and acquired high powered motor cars and large crops of expensive habits.

KIDNAP FARM HANDS.

What is going to happen to them when peace in Europe cuts off the demand for high explosives and wages and salaries drop to normal figures?

Two men sat in the smoking compartment of a Pullman car running through Indiana.

"Well, Tom," said the first, "I lost twelve of my best machinists last week again."

"What was the matter?"

"They all went over to work in the munitions plants at Dayton, O., where they can earn from $6 to $10 a day. We can't pay those wages in a silo factory."

"What did you do to fill their places?"

"I went out into the country and kidnaped a lot of farm hands. I've got a regular school in my plant now for teaching these green men to run my automatic machines. But as soon as they get to be any good they quit and go over to draw the big wages offered by the munition plants."

"But what do the farmers do when you steal their hands?"

"They do without, I guess."

WHAT WILL BE EFFECT?

What is going to happen to the innumerable workers in munition plants when their last war orders are filled? Is it going to be possible to pay $7, $8, or $9 a day for workmen when peace comes in Europe and American factories are forced to return to the manufacture of their old products?

After the war—what?

Today more than 10,000,000 men are in the battle trenches. When the war ends and all these millions are returned to the ranks of productive labor, what will be the effects on the commerce, industry, and labor of the United States?

Since the great war began immigration from Europe has practically stopped. More aliens have left the United States than have come in. There are fewer aliens in this country now than there were two years ago.

What will happen after the war? Will a flood of immigrants swamp our ports? Will the labor supply continue smaller than the demand?

If, as some authorities think, immigration to the United States is greater during the first year of peace than ever before in the same space of time, will wages be forced down even below old levels? If, as others insist, there is little or no immigration, will industry be crippled and new construction prevented?

Already there is an exodus of Negroes from the south. Drawn by the magnet of big wages they are swarming into the mines, construction camps, and even the factories of the north. The farms of the south are fast losing their available supply of labor. What will be the effect, first, on wages and working conditions in the north; second, on the fortunes of southern planters and farmers?

Since the war began the United States has started several campaigns to capture foreign trade on a vast scale. Branch banks have been opened by one great group all over South America. Another syndicate, starting with a capital of $1,000,000, has opened branch offices all around the world, and in the first year after its organization did an export business of $50,000,000.

League to Control Trade.

For the ten months ended with April, 1916, the balance of trade in favor of the United States was $1,700,000,000. The United States shipped abroad goods worth nearly two billion dollars more than the value of its importations during the same period.

But the warring nations have already formed great funds and leagues for the purpose of controlling the trade of the world after the war. Great Britain, even now, is increasing the totals of its export trade. What will happen to the budding foreign commerce of the United States when the stupendous forces now engaged in war are thrown into the fight for business?

Every nation in Europe has, since the war began, taken state control of most of its industries. Everywhere, under pressure of life or death necessity, manufacturing efficiency has been raised to the highest point ever known. Millions of men and women have been subjected to iron discipline. When peace comes every great nation may be able to march its workmen back to the shops in regiments and brigades and army corps. How far will the state retain control of industry? How shall the individualized manufacturers of the United States meet such centralized competition?

Preparedness for Peace.

It costs today $25 a ton to ship soft coal—worth $2 a ton at tidewater—from Newport News to Rio Janeiro. Foreigners own almost all the ships. What will be the freight rate on United States products when Great Britain, Germany, Japan, France, and others get ready to comb the world for trade?

Preparedness! No less for peace than for war.

The forces loose in the world today are titanic, undreamed of in their power. No man may safely predict what effect they will have on the United States—on its commerce, its labor, its life—once the great struggle for national existence in Europe is ended. Men reason from the experience of the past. But there is nothing in history to form even a remote comparison with the present situation.

One may be safe in saying that the effects in the United States will be tremendous, probably revolutionary, even if still uncertain as to specific direction.

Along some lines they are already manifest. It is possible to survey the changes which have already made themselves felt and to outline others which are plainly under way.

HETTY GREEN ESTATE SET AT $100,000,000

Bellows Falls, Vt., July 22.—It was estimated in legal circles here tonight that Mrs. Hetty Green left an estate of approximately $100,000,000.

Charles W. Pierson of New York, representing Mrs. Green's son, Col. Edward H. R. Green, agreed tonight upon a tentative administration fee of $20,000, to be paid to the state, and it is considered that this fee is an indication of the total value of the estate on the basis fee percentages as usually figured.

Col. Green now is sole executor of the estate, since it was announced today that his sister, Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilks, had declined formally to act as executrix with him as directed by the will.

The Probate court today admitted the will to probate without opposition. Virtually the entire estate is left to Col. Green and Mrs. Wilks.

Moyer Heads Miners Again.

Great Falls, Mont., July 22.—Charles H. Moyer was reelected president of the Western Federation of Miners, defeating George Powell, candidate of the anti-administration faction, by 1,523 votes, according to the report of the canvassing committee made today.

'YEGGMEN' TOUR DE LUXE BARED

Amazing Story of Two Weeks' Store and Postoffice Looting Told.

Traveling through the country in an automobile, two recently released convicts robbed more than a dozen post offices and business places before they were captured by the Aurora police. Their operations extended over several counties in Wisconsin and Illinois.

In a startling confession yesterday to detectives of the North Robey street station, the chauffeur who drove the robbers' car gave details of the two weeks' trip. Chief Healey, government secert service men and the Pinkerton National Detective agency were notified of the amazing revelations.

Two Held in Aurora.

Although the two safe robbers have been held at Aurora several days, nothing was known of their operations until the chauffeur's confession. William Kelliher and James Kennedy, the Aurora prisoners, were recently released from the Waupun, Wis., penitentiary.

Joe Redmond is the chauffeur who is locked up at the North Robey station. He was arrested Friday at Riverview park when trying to dispose of a stolen automobile.

Detectives Blaul, Rose, and Wells questioned Redmond regarding the theft of several automobiles near Riverview park. He was reticent. Yesterday he asked for Lieut. John Dammann and was taken to the lieutenant's office. Sergts. Blaul, Rose, and Wells followed him in.

Tells Amazing Story.

"You fellows have got the goods on me," said Redmond, "and if you don't rap me too hard I'll give you some dope that will knock you silly."

It took him three hours to tell the story which he later signed.

In his statement Redmond says he met Kelliher and Kennedy in Chicago about a month ago. They told him they were looking for an expert chauffeur who would be willing to travel through the country.

They did not tell him at the first meeting that they were "going out to blow safes." Redmond met them again two days later and then they broached the subject of safe robbing.

"They told me," says Redmond in his statement, "that I wouldn't have to take any part in the job. All I had to do was drive the machine and keep my mouth shut."

Redmond Steals a Car.

The statement continues that Redmond stole a car for the safe blowing tour. During the two weeks' outing other cars were stolen to replace ones broken or to gain greater comfort. They started from Chicago in a Ford (the best they could get) and wound up at Aurora with a seven passenger touring car.

Redmond tells of the different towns they visited and the number of postoffices and stores robbed. To assist him in remembering the places it was found necessary to get a map of Illinois and Wisconsin.

"We did most of our traveling at night," said Redmond. "Some nights we played two or three towns. I would be waiting in the car while Bill and Jim did the job. The engine would be going so that all we had to do to make our getaway was to give her the gasoline.

Explosion Signal to Go.

"When I'd hear the explosion I'd be ready to go. Bill and Jim are certainly experts at their business. We'd drive into a town after everybody was asleep and drive out again without being seen.

"When I hired out to Bill and Jim they promised me $15 a week and my hotel bills. In the daytime we'd drive up to some jay town and go to bed at the tavern and leave a call for dinner. We used to tell the jay landlords that we were driving through the country for our health.

"We got a postoffice near Aurora and it was a bad getaway. The town marshal organized a posse and we were followed to Aurora. We abandoned the car and I thought it about time to blow the gang. I was kind of sore, anyway, because they had paid me only one week's wages. I guess they were afraid to pay me in full for fear I would jump. I got away and came to Chicago. The next day I read in the papers that two safe robbers were caught in Aurora."

"BAD EGG" PLOT UNDER U. S. FIRE

Parcel Post Reported Used in Conspiracy to Dispose of Impure Product.

A "bad egg" conspiracy, reaching nation-wide proportions, has been uncovered by agents of the department of justice and the bureau of agriculture.

Chicago is said to be headquarters for cold storage companies and egg and produce merchants, alleged to be in the conspiracy. By means of the parcel post and the mails the scheme is said to have been worked successfully for the last four months.

According to government estimates an average of 10,000 bad eggs a day have been distributed in Chicago through the parcel post. Names of principals are withheld by federal authorities, but most of them are said to live in and around Chicago.

How the Scheme Works.

According to government authorities, cold storage men would contract to deliver eggs to various dealers before shipments were made. By misrepresenting the eggs to be fresh they were enabled to avoid inspection insisted upon by the government on all food shipments.

The shipments were listed at the market price of fresh eggs and most of them were sent C. O. D. By this method the government was acting as a carrier of impure foodstuffs and then forced to act as a collection agency for dealers who sent them out.

Bakeries and Restaurants Buyers.

Most of the bad eggs, it is claimed, were sold to bakeries and restaurants. This aspect of the case has been taken up entirely by the bureau of agriculture. Some of the produce men and the cold storage companies are said to have refunded the difference between the price of good and bad egg shipments to purchasers after it was collected by the government.

This scheme, according to government officials, constitutes a criminal conspiracy and will be one of the first matters presented to the August grand jury for investigation.

LIFE SAVER RESCUES GIRL FROM DROWNING.

Miss Lottie Bell, 25 years old, of 6843 South Ashland avenue, was rescued from drowning yesterday afternoon at the North Shore beach by Life Saver Dick Morris.

Miss Bell had been swimming beyond the outer ropes. The exercise, to which she was unused, caused her to faint. She sank unseen by other bathers. Morris saw her go down from his rowboat.

During the day four other bathers, partly overcome, were taken from the water by Morris.

At the inquest into the death of an unidentified youth whose body was taken from the lake at the foot of Bellevue place early yesterday morning the jury recommended that the Oak street beach be closed pending the resumption of the hearing on July 27. It was later decided that the beach should remain open, but the coroner recommended that action be taken by the Lincoln park board to make it safer.

BATHROBE ON SHORE BARES DEATH OF YOUTH IN LAKE

A red bath robe, a pair of slippers, and a towel marked "152" in red were found on the lake shore at the foot of East Oak street at 7 o'clock yesterday by Policeman B. Delehanty. He could see no bather to whom they belonged, and upon investigation learned from Miss Mildred Hixon of 116 East Walton street and Miss Beatrice Harrington of 52 East Elm street that a boy about 19 years old had left them there and gone swimming.

The lake was dragged for two hours and the body finally was recovered. The victim had brown hair and blue eyes and wore a blue bathing suit with a white edge.

It was taken to undertaking rooms at 1004 Wells street to await identification.

HORNLESS SHEEP AND BALD MEN PUT IN SAME CLASS.

Cause Is Identical, Girl Scientist Says—Tells Secret: Many Women Have Hairless Heads.

Washington, D. C., July 22.—When some one discovers why a sheep doesn't have horns, hair will grow on bald men's heads. Absence of horns on sheep, according to Miss Dorothy Osborn of Ohio state university, is caused by the same unknown something that is responsible for billiard ball heads on men.

The American Genetic association today published details of Miss Osborn's researches into the bald headed question. Bald heads, Miss Osborn says, are inherited, and, though more prevalent among men than women, are more frequent among women than is generally suspected, "because women can conceal baldness much more easily than men."

It generally takes two bald parents to make a bald headed daughter, according to Miss Osborn. A daughter, she says, may inherit the germs of baldness without becoming bald, but one-half of her sons are liable to become shiny pated at early ages.

CHARGES PLOT: TRAP EX-WIFE

Witness Says Lawyer Arranged for Cafe Jaunt to Escape Paying Alimony.

"Framed evidence" in an action seeking relief from the payment of alimony was alleged yesterday against John Wagner, an attorney, before William D. Munhall, master in chancery.

Phillip J. Sibley, 1008 Center street, admitted he had bestowed attentions upon Mrs. Kate Palmer Zakowski, formerly wife of Mathias Zakowski, at the behest of Wagner, who is Zakowski's attorney. Zakowski is seeking to have set aside a decree involving the payment of alimony.

Sibley, questioned by Mrs. Zakowski's attorney, said he was in Wagner's office one day when the latter told him of the action brought by Zakowski against his wife.

Seeks to "Get Goods" on Woman.

"Wagner told me he wanted to prove charges against the woman," said Sibley, "and asked me if I would be willing to take Mrs. Zakowski out and get a case on her.

"He arranged for me to meet Mrs. Zakowski and a woman named Mrs. Easton and a man called Hoffman. He told me to pay the expenses and 'do as I ought to do in taking out a lady.'"

Sibley said the appointment was kept at a downtown theater where Mrs. Zakowski was introduced as "Miss Palmer" (her maiden name granted by the decree), and they visited a notorious café and later another, where they passed the time in telling stories "with considerable zip in them."

Registered Together, He Says.

"We registered as 'Dr. Saunders and wife, Chicago,'" Sibley testified.

Mrs. Easton and Hoffman, both private detectives, who admitted receiving $40 a week for trailing Mrs. Zakowski, gave further evidence. Mrs. Easton told of other adventures which concerned the former Mrs. Zakowski.

Zakowski explained that he is married again and is often embarrassed because his former wife uses the name of "Mrs. Zakowski" to the confusion of his present marriage relation.

ONE OF ROOSEVELT'S STAFF SAVED FROM OCEAN BY GIRL.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 22.—[Special.]—Walter J. Hayes, one of Col. Roosevelt's secretaries, was rescued from drowning here today by Miss Gladys Sutphen, a young New York girl, who is spending the summer at Island Dale, the Sutphen country estate on the Mill river road.

Hayes was stricken with cramps. Miss Sutphen struck out in his direction. By the time she reached him the screams of the other bathers had attracted the attention of Arthur Voight, who was nearby in a motor boat.

Miss Sutphen managed to keep Hayes up until Voight arrived and pulled Hayes into the boat. Miss Sutphen also was taken on board greatly exhausted.

ROONEY AND SHEA DENY OWNERSHIP OF SALOON.

Leader of Teamsters' Strike Says He's Only Barkeeper, While Alleged Slugger Calls Self Manager.

Business competitors and neighbors are puzzled over the ownership of the Halsted hotel bar at 120 South Halsted street. The general opinion is that Cornelius P. Shea, who headed the great teamsters' strike in 1905, and William Rooney, an alleged labor slugger, are the proprietors.

Shea was released from the New York state prison at Auburn in September, 1914, and the supposition was that he should have remained in New York until the expiration of his parole, two years later. He was imprisoned for attacking with a knife one Alice Walsh, a Chicago waitress, who joined him in the east after he deserted his wife and children.

Rooney is free on $10,000 bail for being implicated in the shooting affray in which Joseph Cooney was killed and Bert Connors injured.

"I'm only the barkeeper," said Shea. "Rooney and I had a saloon at Forty-seventh and Kedzie, but couldn't make it pay."

"I'm only manager of the cabaret," said Rooney.

A demand for the license showed the name of Alvin W. Relyea. Shea and Rooney explained they were employés of Mike Corcoran, a former bill poster, who, they say, has made application for the transfer of the Relyea license.

NEW FIGHT ON EDELWEISS.

Hyde Park Protective Association Sends Postcards to Voters Near Garden.

The Hyde Park Protective association, following Mayor Thompson's poll of the residents in the vicinity of the Edelweiss garden on the question of continuing the garden's license, yesterday sent out 5,500 postcards to persons residing within five block of the garden. The protective association asks that the voters make known their wishes to the mayor.

"This beer garden," reads the post card protest," is adjacent to Washington park, the University of Chicago, a public school, and a hospital. The University of Illinois and Northwestern university are protected by state law by a four mile zone in which no liquor can be sold.

"A place where music and dancing are used to help sell liquor is dangerous for our daughters and sons."

Richard Ostenreider, proprietor of Edelweiss gardens, yesterday announced he would be "very glad to abide by the decision of the majority of my neighbors if a change of name is desired."

"The name Edelweiss," he continues, "is that of a rare white flower, the symbol of purity and the national emblem of a sturdy and noble nation, Switzerland."

SEVERAL OVERCOME BY HEAT SOME RELIEF IN SIGHT.

Assistant Weather Forecaster Says It Will Be Slightly Cooler Today.

Several persons were overcome yesterday in a heat that, according to C. L. Mitchell, the assistant weather forecaster, will be somewhat moderated today.

Walter Mundell, 7224 South Paulina street, died in the Post-Graduate hospital from injuries incurred when he fell from a roof upon which he was working. He is believed to have been overcome by the heat.

Policeman Arthur D. Bassett of the North Halsted street station was overcome while walking his beat. He was taken to the Alexian Brothers hospital where it is said he is recovering.

The weather office predicts a cooling breeze this afternoon and evening. The highest temperature yesterday was 88. There was less humidity than during the warm period a week ago.

BOILING OIL KILLS MAN.

Michael Heinians, an employé of the Standard Oil company in Whiting, Ind., died on Friday at the Jefferson Park hospital as a result of burns incurred Monday in Whiting when one of the oil tanks which he was tending overflowed, scalding him about the face and chest.

LOEB CLEARS WOMAN NAMED IN SITE REPORT

Deal Started Long Before Mrs. Thornton Was Put on Board.

'HORSEWHIP FOR BUCK'

The report of Ald. Robert M. Buck, chairman of the city council schools subcommittee, hinting that Mrs. F. E. Thornton, school trustee, had swapped her vote to discharge sixty-eight school teachers for a bribe in the form of a condemnation by the school board of certain property held by her relatives, brought President Jacob M. Loeb out of the hospital yesterday.

Mr. Loeb had lost his voice from a swollen larynx. Last night he found it and issued a public statement recommending a horsewhipping for Buck for what he termed "an attempt to murder the character and good name of a pure, noble, and innocent woman."

CITES BOARD RECORDS.

Mr. Loeb backed his statement with records from the minutes of the board, to show that:

Condemnation proceedings against the property in question were started before Mrs. Thornton became a member of the school board and long before the questions of discharging teachers arose.

Mrs. Ella Flagg Young wrote a letter advocating the acquirement of the property for the Avondale school.

The Parent Teachers' association petitioned the school board to take over the property two years ago.

All of these actions were taken before Mrs. Thornton was appointed to the board.

GIST OF BUCK REPORT.

Ald. Buck's report refers to the property at 2922 North Kedzie avenue. He requested that the city clerk be ordered to warn the school board not to acquire the property for school uses. Condemnation proceedings to take over the property have already been approved by the school board and the city council.

Ald. Buck points out that Mrs. Thornton voted to sustain President Loeb in discharging the teachers and in refusing information to the city council committee.

The Buck report leaves the clear inference that Mrs. Thornton so voted in exchange for the profit she might make on the sale of her property. It brings in the name of her husband, Dr. F. E. Thornton, and her sister, Bessie E. Hanson.

STATEMENT BY MR. LOEB.

Mr. Loeb's statement follows:

"Robert M. Buck, the leader in the present pernicious, self-serving political investigation of the school board proved himself in his true likeness today when he villainously and vilely sought to murder the character and good name of a pure, noble, and innocent woman, and as he thought, a defenseless one. He did so with the full knowledge that he was giving out for public consumption an unconscionable lie.

"Were he simply a private citizen his act would merit a public lashing. He is a public official, an alderman, a reform poser. The horsewhip of public opinion should be so used upon him that he and all of his ilk should be driven from public life.

GIVES "TRUE FACTS."

"The true facts concerning the Avondale site are these: In July, 1915, the Parent-Teachers' association of the Avondale school appeared before the buildings and grounds committee of the board of education and urged the acquirement of the site. The delegation presented a petition signed by 1,400 citizens asking the board to take the property. Among others, both Ald. Kennedy and Watson worked for the acquirement of the site.

"On Oct. 6 the same organization wrote Trustee Sethness demanding that the site be taken. On Oct. 13 the then superintendent of schools, Ella Flagg Young, recommended that the site be taken, and under the rules the matter was taken up by the sites committee. Mrs. Thornton did not become a member of the board of education until Nov. 10, 1915.

"The site is the east half of the block in which the Avondale school stands. It is composed of some twenty-four or more lots. The property of Dr. Thornton is in the middle of the block and is composed of two twenty-five foot lots with two story improvements on each.

NO SECRECY ABOUT CASE.

"There never was any secret or lack of knowledge that such was the case; nor was there any possible favoritism in the matter of valuation. The property was ordered acquired by condemnation. A jury must decide when the case goes to court what shall be paid for it and the measure of that price is the fair cash value. There cannot be—nor could there ever have been—a direct purchase from Dr. Thornton. Ald. Buck knew or could have known all these facts when he gave out his malicious slander.

"The exposure of the cowardly means resorted to by Buck today to bolster up his malicious attack upon the administration of the schools should awaken the public to the true situation concerning this and his other efforts at irresponsible interference with the system."

Shows Original Letter.

Mr. Loeb produced the original letter of the petition committee of the Avondale School Parent-Teachers' association, asking for the purchase of the site. The letter was written Oct. 6, 1915, to Mrs. Charles O. Sethness, trustee, and is signed by Mrs. Josephine Willis, 3110 North Sawyer avenue, chairman; Mrs. Esther Hikes, 3023 North Sawyer avenue; Mrs. Viola D. Short, 3110 Logan boulevard; Mrs. Carrie Swendsen, 2922 North Whipple street, and Mrs. Deborah Hirschberg, 2924 North Whipple street.

Mr. Loeb also produced the original memorandum of Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, in which she recommended the purchase of the site in question. The recommendation is signed by Mrs. Young on Oct. 13, 1915.

Mrs. Thornton's Reply.

Mrs. Thornton's reply is that the property was purchased by her sister early in 1914, long before she had ever considered becoming a member of the school board. She termed the accusation of impropriety a malicious attack inspired by opposition to her attitude on school questions.

On the two lots and improvements the owner placed a value of $10,800, according to the records of the school board. The attorney offered $8,350, but it was refused.

"It isn't worth while to answer a man like Ald. Buck, but I am quite willing to give you the facts," Mrs. Thornton said. "In the first place I was told about two months ago they were 'framing up' for me, in case I wasn't good. What they meant by that is easily surmised.

Scandal Talk Absurd.

"The talk of scandal is ridiculous. The property was purchased in the spring of 1914 by my sister for a price just under $9,000. My husband has looked after all the business details for her.

"We regard it as good renting property, as we made several improvements, and we have no desire to sell it. At the same time we do not wish to stand out against the interests of the community.

"The history of the matter is this: Last July the Parent Teachers' association and residents of the neighborhood petitioned the board to buy nearly a whole block, including these two lots, for a playground. In October Mrs. Young, then superintendent, recommended it. I did not take office as trustee till November, and I had nothing whatever to do with the recommendation or subsequent negotiations.

"I do not know how I am recorded as voting, but I do remember the purchase came up as a part of the whole property budget. I might feel bad about this if I had done anything wrong or improper."

Angus Roy Shannon, attorney for the board, said the negotiations were carried on with Dr. Thornton.

"We wrote to him because it appeared he paid the taxes," explained Mr. Shannon. "He replied, refusing our offer. To bring Mrs. Thornton's name into this is the worst piece of character assassination I ever knew."

The Official Report.

The report of Ald. Buck's subcommittee follows:

"To the committee on schools, fire, police, and civil service of the city council of the city of Chicago—Gentlemen: Your subcommittee, appointed to inquire into matters that might have influenced individual members of the board of education to join the majority in passing the Loeb rules and dismissing efficient teachers without charges and without hearing, begs leave to report progress as follows:

"On Jan. 19, 1916, page 1453 of the proceedings of the board of education, the committee on buildings and grounds of the board reported in a committee report numbered 28,827, providing authority for the making of counter offers in connection with a proposed purchase of additional property in connection with the Avondale school. The report contained certain proposals made by the owners of some of the property and a list of other parcels, the owners of which had made no offers.

Enter Mrs. Thornton.

"On the same date, at the same meeting, page 1481 of the proceedings of the board of education, the board by roll call authorized the making of the counter offers preliminary to condemnation proceedings to acquire the property. Mrs. Eva H. Thornton, with eighteen other members of the board, voted on that roll call to authorize the counter offers.

"On Feb. 2, 1916, the buildings and grounds committee of the board submitted a report numbered 28,917 and found on page 2158 of the proceedings of the board of education. This report states that the secretary of the board was unable to agree on a price with the owners, and recommends that condemnation proceedings be instituted. This is the usual form of purchase of property by the board, although there have been instances in which owners have accepted the counter offers of the board without resort to condemnation.

"On the same date, page 2186 of the proceedings, the board authorized the institution of condemnation proceedings to acquire the property in question by roll call. Mrs. Thornton and seven other members of the board of education voted on roll call to authorize this action.

The Council Action.

"On Feb. 7, 1916, at a meeting of the city council (page 3137 of the council proceedings) the council received a communication from the board of education asking for authority to institute condemnation proceedings to acquire property contiguous to the Avondale school. The communication was referred to the committee on schools, fire, police, and civil service, was by that committee approved and reported back to the council April 26, 1916, at the 7:30 p. m. session, and was, by unanimous consent, immediately considered and concurred in by roll call.

Details Are Cited.

"The report in question, which came to the city council on Feb. 7, 1916, as a request for authority to institute condemnation proceedings, describing various parcels of property in subblock 1 of Hull's subdivision of block 7, Brand's subdivision of the northeast quarter, section 26, township 40, north range 13, east of the third principal meridian, contained the following items:

"'No. 2924 North Kedzie avenue, lot 14x123 feet, improved with a two story and basement, stone front brick building, two flats of five and six rooms and bath, hardwood trim, furnace heat.

"'No. 2922 North Kedzie avenue, lot 15, 25x123 feet, improved with a two story and basement stone front brick building, two flats of five and six rooms and bath, hardwood trim, stove heat. No proposal submitted by the owner.

"'Value of lot 14, $750; building, $4,800; total, $5,550.

"'Value of lot 15, $750; building, $4,500; total, $5,250.

"'Price suggested by attorney and board as counter offer for lot 14, $675; building, $3,500; total, $4,175; for lot 15, $675; building, $3,500; total, $4,175.

"'Tax valuation lot 14, $700; building, $3,300; total, $4,000; lot 15, $700; building, $3,300; total, $4,000.'"

NAMED IN SCHOOL LAND QUIZ

Mrs. F. E. Thornton.

But Who Is the Owner?

"The significant thing about the above quotation is that no proposal was submitted by the owner and therefore it does not appear who the owner is.

"The above specific counter offers at those specific figures were contained in the counter offers authorized by roll call by the board of education, upon which Mrs. Thornton and the other members voted and for authorization of which she and the others voted on roll call.

"The records of the county recorder's office were examined and showed the recorded owner of the two lots above described to be one Bessie A. Hanson. Mrs. Thornton has a sister named Bessie A. Hanson, who lives with her at 2524 North Kimball avenue.

Husband Pays Taxes.

"The records of the county treasurer and collector show that F. E. Thornton has paid the taxes on the property for the last two years. Mrs. Thornton's husband is Dr. F. E. Thornton.

"In view of the fact that your subcommittee was informed that the board of education has not yet acquired the property in question, the members thereof deemed it their duty to inform the committee of the facts and recommend that the board of education be warned not to permit the transaction to be consummated until the city council has had opportunity to rescind its authorization in view of the circumstances herein disclosed.

Hoyne Asks Information.

State's Attorney Hoyne wrote the board of education asking full information concerning the controversy between the council schools committee and the board. Chairman Buck of the subcommittee has asked Mr. Hoyne to prosecute the board for failure to turn over information regarding the ousting of the sixty-eight teachers.

BARBERS' AGENCY OWNER CONVICTED AS AUTO THIEF

Louis B. Krampe Faces Term in the Penitentiary as Result of Hoyne Crusade Against Crooks.

Louis B. Krampe, proprietor of a barbers' agency at 12 South Fifth avenue, faces a sentence of from one to ten years in the penitentiary in connection with the theft of three automobiles in the loop several months ago. He was convicted yesterday by a jury in Judge David's court on a charge of having received stolen goods.

It was the first conviction in State's Attorney Hoyne's campaign against auto thieves. Isadore Goldberg, 19 years old, an inmate of the Pontiac reformatory, where he was sent two months ago by Judge Barrett for having stolen the cars, took the stand for the state.

He said Krampe had sent him out to steal the cars. He testified that Krampe then changed the license numbers and the numbers on the engines, converted the machines into delivery cars, and sold them to plumbers, grocers, and others.

EIGHTEEN BITTEN BY DOGS; RECORD LAID TO HEAT

Police Chief Orders Pound Wagons to Get on Job Early Daily for Emergencies.

Eighteen persons were bitten by dogs on Friday—the largest number in one day this year—according to the reports received by police records yesterday. The heat is blamed for the increase. Wagons from the dog pound have been ordered out at 5 o'clock in the morning by Chief Healey in an effort to clear the streets of the animals. Those bitten are:

JOSEPH FISHER, 17 months old, 3971 Wentworth avenue.

NICK VALENTIC, 3 years old, 8946 The Strand.

AGNES BROSSERT, 6 years old, 2012 Mohawk street.

BRUNO KUBAS, 6 years old, 1122 Jefferson street.

ALFRED LESDUE, 9 years old, 821 South Wood street.

EDWARD BERGMARK, 14 years old, 10642 Langley avenue.

MRS. ANNA VALENTIC, 28 years old, 8946 The Strand.

MRS. ANNA RASSMUSSEN, 71 years old, 2416 South Western avenue.

RIVERVIEW CHIEF ACCUSED.

Warrant for the arrest of Henry Miller, captain of the private police at Riverview park, was issued yesterday by Judge Kearns. Mrs. Ida Schade of 4300 Carroll avenue, the complainant, accuses Miller, who rooms at her house, of entering her bedroom by force July 19. She exhibited bruises on her arms which she said she received while attempting to free herself from the embrace of Miller.

JEWISH FUND AT $569,114.

The Jewish relief fund totals reported by the Chicago committee last Sunday failed to include a sum of nearly $9,000 turned in by the west side branch.

The grand total is now $569,114. Contributions are being sent to M. E. Greenebaum, 9 South La Salle street, and to the Jewish relief committee, 1312 Columbus Memorial building.

HOYNE BLAMES DETECTIVES FOR SPREAD OF CRIME

Since Hunt Quit Higher-Ups Have Countenanced Apathy, He Says.

What shall be done with them? The pure feeble minded can get along very well outside of institutions in a simple, protected environment. Those whose feeble mindedness is complicated with dementia præcox are more dangerous

State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne in a statement issued yesterday blamed the increase of crime in Chicago during the last two months to the detective bureau because "many of the men working out of there are asleep."

"It is apparent that since Capt. Hunt left the detective bureau Chicago again has become infested with confidence men and crooks," Mr. Hoyne said, "who find their victims in Chicago and take them to Indiana. At the time this office broke up the wire tapping games we found that they were operating at East Chicago, Ind., and Gary. This gang included Roy Jones, 'Danish Bob' Meister, a fellow named Sterling, and many others whose names I do not recall.

"If the detective bureau were wideawake and doing its duty it could pick up the confidence men and crooks before they left Chicago, while they have their victims in tow.

No Complaints Filed.

Persons who have been victimized have filed no complaints with this office nor has the chief of police filed a complaint to show conspiracy in this state. As it stands this office has been furnished with no information touching on the matter.

"I don't want to be misunderstood as reflecting on the work of Chief of Detectives Charles Larkin and Lieut. Mooney, for I do not believe that they are to blame. It appears that it is due rather to a lack of support from the powers above.

Courts Great Aid to Clinics.

"The specialization of courts in a great city like Chicago results in bringing together a large number of those who have come in conflict with the law and who do not conform to normal standards. Here is brought together material for one of the largest psychological clinics in the world. The volume of business running through such a clinic requires fairly rapid diagnoses, as well as correct diagnoses. The psychological approach to mental diseases enables more rapid work than under the old clinical method of keeping the individual under observation, which is often only an admission that the physician does not know what is the matter.

"The report of the director of our laboratory shows that a large number of offenders brought to trial in the specialized courts are suffering from mental diseases, chief of which, of course, is feeble mindedness, followed in order by dementia præcox and feeble mindedness with dementia præcox grafted upon it, what the Germans call Pfropfhebephrenia.

"The tabulation of 2,700 cases which passed through Dr. Hickson's hands, illustrates the mental and physical status of a large number of those charged with crime. The Morals court cases are the female equivalents of the Boys' court cases, with certain minor differences. In the Domestic Relations court Dr. Hickson found dementia præcox in some cases uncomplicated, but in the largest per cent of cases complicated with alcoholic delusions of infidelity and other paranoiac manifestations.

What Shall Be Done with Them?

"After we shall have identified the defective classes brought to our courts, next and really the large question is: and should be confined in farm colonies under proper supervision. This type usually composes the so-called defective delinquents, who make the more or less serious disturbances in feeble minded institutions. These types might be usefully employed in making roads in the state, in clearing land and work of that sort, but would need for winter quarters perhaps institutional care. At the present time the criminals who are such by reason of mental defect are sent to jail, houses of correction, state reformatories, and the state penitentiary."

The rest of the report takes up the "remedy" and advises that the heads of the various departments dealing with the city's crime should be trained, technical, and superscientific, as well as practical minded men.

No New Trial for Nathalie.

A motion for a new trial on behalf of Miss Nathalie Herman, 19 year old, convicted several days ago on a charge of operating a confidence game, was denied yesterday by Judge Turney.

SEEK TRUE BILLS IN MONON CASE

Federal Officials Give Rebating Charges Over to U. S. Grand Jury.

COAL RATES INVOLVED.

Criminal investigation into the activities of officials of the Bankers Trust company, the Monon railroad, and several coal mine operators in an alleged conspiracy to violate rebating laws will be made by the August federal grand jury. The action, which foreruns possible jail sentences, is contemplated by the district attorney's office as the result of an investigation made by the attorney general's office in Washington.

Evidence was forwarded to Mr. Clyne several days ago with orders to file an injunction suit against the accused companies to prevent them from continuing the operation of the alleged conspiracy. The railroad, the trust company, and the coal operators are alleged to have an agreement to ship coal by the longest routes over the Monon and discriminate against other railroads.

$4,000,000 Bond Deal Alleged.

A $4,000,000 bond proposition is said to have been the consideration agreed upon by those alleged to be in the conspiracy. The coal mines of the Monon Coal company are located in Vigo, Greene, Clay, and Sullivan counties, Indiana.

According to District Attorney Clyne the communication from Washington stated the system has been in operation almost five years. The matter has been under investigation by the authorities at Washington for two years.

Charges in the Bill.

The restraining bill filed by Mr. Clyne directly charges James and William Imbrie with illegally entering into a scheme to profit by rebating and discrimination.

A hearing on the bill will be held before Federal Judge Geiger within two weeks. In the meantime the August grand jury is expected to take up the cases.

SHERIDAN ROAD EXTENSION PLAN GAINS HEADWAY

Completion of Paved Highway Through to Milwaukee Foreseen Soon.

The Sheridan Road Improvement association is making a new campaign for membership and is pushing efforts for the completion of a permanent roadway through to the Wisconsin line and on to Milwaukee.

An especial movement for the increase of membership in the association will be made during the period from July 25 to 30. Henry Atwater is secretary of the association with headquarters at 800 Rookery building. Membership and anual dues cost $5. The association wants money for the promotion work.

Grimes Explains Plans.

The association has engaged J. Edward Grimes as its engineer. Mr. Grimes yesterday said:

"The roadway from Chicago through Lake Forest, according to the plans of the association, should be completed next year. Much construction work now going on will be completed soon. From Lake Forest north to the state line, the road is in bad condition, and an effort is to be made to secure an improvement through the aid of bond issues simultaneously with improvements south, so that a junction can be made with the road now being built by the Wisconsin authorities south from Milwaukee to the Illinois state line.

"No pains are being spared to familiarize the citizens of Evanston with the possibility offered by the state in extending the Lincoln park administration and oversight to a boulevard through Evanston, lying in general along the shore of Lake Michigan. Numerous improved streets in that suburb are being worn to an extent which would be avoided by having the thoroughfare removed to one side and without cross traffic. Likewise the proposed Sheridan road through Evanston would have the advantage of a regulated automobile traffic.

"In Wilmette the roadway is as yet unfinished through the north part of the village, but the association believes this improvement will be an actuality before the coming winter.

"Kenilworth is now paving Sheridan road with a forty foot roadway, to be opened within thirty or forty days.

"In Winnetka property owners along Sheridan road are working to have the road improved by next season.

Villages Pushing It Along.

"In Glencoe the pavement is in fairly good condition, but there is hope and expectation for permanent reconstruction simultaneous with the repaving further south.

"Highland Park already has completed one and one-quarter miles of concrete paving on Sheridan road, and proceedings are to be started to improve that portion extending south past Ravinia to the Cook county line.

"In the present United States army bill is included an appropriation to boulevard that section of Sheridan road leading through Fort Sheridan.

"From Zion City north to the state line the question of paving must be met by a bond issue, which the Sheridan Road Improvement association is interested in pushing. There are plans for a 'booster' meeting to be held either in Waukegan or Zion City. The Wisconsin Sheridan Road Improvement association will jointly assist in making this meeting a success."

DOCTOR HELD TO GRAND JURY

Dr. Edmund Otto and George Hallick Accused in Connection with Operation.

Dr. Edmund Otto of 1454 Clybourn avenue and George Hallick of 6900 Sheridan road, were held to the grand jury in bonds of $5,000 and $3,500, respectively, by Municipal Judge Robinson yesterday.

Dr. Otto is charged with performing an illegal operation and Hallick with being accessory to the operation.

An Unparalleled Victory

About a month ago we announced to the world our newest value—the $635 Overland.

In twenty-four hours and from every state in the Union we had received more orders than we could fill in several weeks.

So we immediately increased the production—filled the orders and notified our dealers not to push the model too hard as we were going night and day to catch up with orders.

Before the end of the first week orders were pouring in so rapidly that we decided to again increase the production so that there would be no disappointments.

Now we are shipping 500 of the new cars every single day and are fairly breaking our backs to keep pace with the great demand that now looks as if it never would cease.

We anticipated a great success, but we did not look for such a daily avalanche of definite shipping orders.

Never before has any automobile enjoyed such an unparalleled victory.

Step in and see this extraordinary car yourself today.

GERMAN SYSTEM MAKES SOLDIERS FROM NOVICES

Berlin Employe of "Tribune" Tells of Days Full of War Training.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

OFFIZIERSHEIM, Goduzischki, Russia, end of May.—Friedrich Ernst Rohde, Landsturmman, is a Christian Scientist and a Socialist. On the ground of both his religion and his politics he said that he had no desire to kill anybody. War seemed to him at once unnecessary and futile, and as between inflicting death or suffering it he thought the arguments were mostly in favor of the latter procedure.

The fact remains that when Friedrich Rohde was about to sail from Rotterdam a few days before the war came, for a long planned visit in America, he returned to Berlin because he thought it was no time for a German to be leaving his native land.

This young man was secretary, translator, stenographer, adviser, and provider of general information in the Berlin office of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and the United Press association.

Rohde Knows Everything.

When we did not know a thing we turned to Rohde for the information, and got it. He knew what hours were kept by the governor of Berlin and when the evening train left for Metz, and what row a 5 mark ticket for the Deutsches theater would put you in, and when the oldest son of the crown prince was born, and in what volume of Goethe you could find the passage on cannon fever at the battle of Valmy, and where in the park of Sans Souci the dogs of Frederick the Great were buried, and in what section of what gallery Franz Lenbach's best pictures hung, and how many men made a German company, battalion, regiment, brigade, division, and corps.

Combined with his readiness and his executive skill was a poetic spirit intensely responsive to beauty. We soon came to regard him more as a friend than an employé and he repaid in full measure both our confidence and our liking.

Because we were so dependent upon him and so fond of him we felt much at a loss when word came in October, 1915, that our friend had been called to the colors.

Influence Is Worthless.

At first we said that his apparently delicate physique would cause the military doctors to reject him, for he was tall, thin, and not full chested, and we had noticed that on wet, chill days he was apt to cough a good deal. But he came through the examination.

Then we tried that influence which every American correspondent who does not write slanders about the Germans is supposed to possess with the German government. We promptly discovered that we had none.

At the foreign office we advanced the idea that so competent a man as Rohde might be of more use to his country as a worker in a foreign news bureau than he possibly could be as a common soldier on the front. The foreign office replied that it could not interfere with the decisions of another department of the government. An appeal to the general staff brought the intimation that Germany alone must decide where her sons would be most useful. They regretted the necessity, etc.

So our friend went away.

News from Koenigsberg.

None of us expected ever to see him again, for we feared that his was a constitution that could not survive the burden and strain of a soldier's life.

We first heard from him from Koenigsberg, where he was in training. The life, he said, was no bed of roses, but his letter was cheerful. He apologized for not having written sooner, adding, "But the training of a soldier is done so rapidly that we have only a little time left for private affairs. I have not been able to read any book or newspaper yet, because I apply my free time to the study of the infantry instruction book."

Then he gave u the program of his busy hours:

"We rise at 5 in the morning. From 7 to 7:45, instruction lesson with the under officer.

"8:15 to 11, drill.

"Between 11 and 2:30, dinner and study of the evening instruction lesson.

"2:30 to 4:30, drill.

"4:30 to 5:30, coffee and conversation.

"5:30 to 6:30, instruction lesson.

"6:30 to 7:30, cleaning of boots and uniform.

"7:30 to 8:50, left to ourselves, but generally employed for study of the war laws, etc."

Training Hard on Muscles.

His comment was: "So you see that we are rather busy. The training is at first hard on the body, especially because it is such unaccustomed work. But I feel physically well, and that is the main thing for the present work. Some of my comrades are nice boys. Some of the others I could hardly stand at first, but I quickly got accustomed to their mean tricks, and they don't hurt me any more."

We could see the sensitive, fine fibered Rohde in that last reflection, and it made us smile. We knew that temperamentally as well as physically Rohde was being put through his paces. It is an experience that does no man harm.

Goes to Seek Friend.

In the course of the winter our friend was sent to Wilna, and in a hurried letter we had from him there he told us how he had stood as one of the guards in the street when the emperor, Prince Oscar, Von Hindenburg, and Count Moltke had visited the ancient Lithuanian town, and how he had seen them four times. He added that the war was not costing Germany nearly as many men as it had in the beginning.

One day word came that I could go to Lake Narocz and thereabouts on the extreme front, and that the journey would be made via Wilna.

Ah, I must look up Rohde, I thought, and telephoned his family that I would do so and would take their greetings to him.

"I'm so sorry," his sister said over the phone, "but my brother is no longer in Wilna. He has been sent to the front and I suppose there is hardly any chance of your finding him."

Last Thursday Lydia Wiles, 19 years old, left her home at 6102 Stewart avenue, for the loop store where she works and did not return. Her father told the police he believed she had been kidnaped, and the incident was narrated in the newspapers.

Yesterday Mr. Wiles received a telephone call from his daughter. The burden of her remarks was:

"I'm all right, but am not going home. And also I don't want to see anything more in the papers."

Her father says he has no idea why she left home, and could not locate the telephone call.

JEAN CRONES AT WAUKESHA? HANDWRITING ON WALL

Poisoner of Mundelein Banquet Said to Have Been Circulating in Chicago Neighborhood.

Jean Crones is believed to have left his latest mark in Waukesha, Wis., and it is there detectives from Chicago have made patient investigations which they believe prove that the poisoner of the banquet to Archbishop George Mundelein last January is not far from Chicago.

Various reports of those conversant with Crones' habits have coupled up a number of reports of his recent visits to summer places about Chicago. In Waukesha Crones' signature was found written upon the wall of a public restroom, and upon comparison has been found to be identical with the poisoner's handwriting.

HIBERNIANS END MEETING BY RE-ELECTING OFFICERS.

Boston, Mass., July 22.—The national convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians was brought to a close today with the reëlection of the officers of the last administration and the selection of San Francisco as the place of the next convention.

The victory of the administration forces over the opposition, which was represented largely by delegates interested in the teaching of Irish history in the schools, was a pronounced one.

WAR VETERANS TO MEET AGAIN

Tales of American Campaigns on Foreign Soils to Be Related.

BAKER MAY COME.

Several hundred veteran soldiers, sailors, and marines who saw service in Cuba, Porto Rico, the Philippines, and China are expected to attend the seventeenth annual encampment of the Association of Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, to be held at the Hotel Sherman from Aug. 14 to 17.

Secretary of War Baker has been invited to attend as the guest of honor at the banquet to be held on Aug. 16, and it is hoped he will be here.

Many of the members will be unable to attend owing to the fact that they are now on duty with the national guard on the border, but every state in the country will be represented.

A citizens' committee headed by Attorney Frank L. Cheney is raising a fund of $1,900 by subscription for the entertainment of the boys who fought for Old Glory during their visit here. The program includes auto trips through the park system, excursions on the lake, and visits to the stockyards and other industrial plants.

Watkin W. Rosser is secretary of the committee and Nelson N. Lampert, treasurer. The other members are Charles G. Avery, Anson L. Bolte, Fred Boyer, Attorney George T. Buckingham, Leonard A. Busby, Dr. Charles L. Daniels, Senator James Hamilton Lewis, Congressman Martin B. Madden, Charles A. McCulloch, John T. McCutcheon, Lieut. Gov. Barratt O'Hara, Lynn R. Rutter, Attorney Frank L. Shepard, and Fred W. Upham.

The objects of the association, founded in 1900 by Brig. Gen. Irving Hale, U. S. A., are to strengthen comradeship among the members, to assist worthy members, and to foster true patriotism.

Performance

I've heard a lot of talk about performance, but the surprise of my life came the day I first sat behind the wheel of the 1917 Chalmers 3400 r. p. m. and watched her take the Illinois and Wisconsin roads for more than eight hours.

I hit the roads where most cars find going the hardest, but this 3400 r. p. m. never hesitated.

I stuck her nose into the sand roads along the dunes south of Chicago and for mile after mile we drove straight through the hub deep sand without a falter.

I tried her out on the nastiest hills and mud roads in this part of the country and even over the worst the 3400 r. p. m. made the going a pleasure.

Thousands of motorists to whom this car has brought the thrill of glad going, rejoice that Chalmers engineers hit upon 3400 r. p. m.

For that's the key to a three-fold motor revelation.

A throbless, uninterrupted stream of might—the boon of instantaneous pickup—irresistible attack on grade and hill—are no longer for the few.

Thirty-four hundred revolutions per minute, the highest crank-shaft speed ever attained, so far as I know, in an American stock car, means that every drop of gasoline that sweeps through her carburetor is torn apart and translated into the highest available degree of dynamic energy.

The swift succession of cylinder explosions reduces to the minimum the loss of heat through radiation—and heat is might.

You get speed where you need it most—at 10, 15, 20, 30 and 35 miles an hour. That is to say, you get acceleration—a wonderful wealth of pick-up that responds as instantly as the flight of lead to the trigger.

You get 60 miles an hour when you want it, and always that swift, smooth transition from speed to speed that motorists prize above and beyond any other phase of performance.

A gallon of gas takes on new, strange meaning when fed to this uncanny, uncommon carrier. Every gallon that takes the fiery course graduates into 18 miles of obedient and fervent flight.

And the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers doesn't gulp down gas as other high-speed engines do. She'll save you $150 to $200 per year in fuel bills, while by virtue of her unfretted ease of going, she adds many, many miles to the life of your tires.

You ought to know more about the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers. Her pick-up is plush; her velocity is velour.

THE LESSONS OF MOBILIZATION.

In six weeks after the mobilization order had been sent forth from Berlin for the Franco-Prussian war and only a month after the first contact of troops the hopes of France had been crushed out at Thionville, Gravelotte, and Sedan.

That was a generation ago, before the day of nations in arms and the miracles of mobilization achieved in 1914. But it is worth recalling to impress upon our civilian minds the swiftness with which conclusive military disaster can be wrought upon even such a people as the French by an army better prepared in every respect. The few days which Germany gained at the beginning meant everything in 1870. The few days lost before Liege we realize may have meant as much to France in 1914.

Happily for us the United States does not live under the intense pressure of the European continent and has no powerful neighbors across an imaginary boundary line. On the other hand, all distances are rapidly lessening over our globe and the sea is now not a barrier but a great thoroughfare, where winds and currents no longer seriously retard transport. We are nearer Europe or Asia than the New England of the revolution was to Virginia or Pennsylvania, and added to this fact is the tremendous increase of military power and efficiency abroad with which we have not kept pace. The world is far nearer us than before. It is able to act with far more swiftness and power.

These are palpable facts which the indifferent should realize even though the doctrinaire pacifist refuses to do so. Our system of defense has ignored them. It is founded on conditions no longer existent. A new policy is needed and happily is being developed under pressure of an awakening public opinion, and we are realizing that our defense must not only be stronger on sea and land but it must be more ready.

The mobilization of the national guard has been a striking object lesson. The order was issued June 18th. A month later, or to draw a parallel, when the German army was wreaking the crushing defeats of Vionville and Gravelotte upon the French, we have managed to place about 100,000 militia in camps on the Mexican border and about 60,000 in camps at home.

These troops, it is roughly estimated by the Scientific American, are in a ratio of about 35 fairly trained civilian soldiers to 100 virtually green men. That is, from 10 to 20 per cent of the original guard have been rejected on physical or other grounds and one-third of each organization has had only a year's training, or from 50 to 60 drills in armories.

The whole body is without tactical organization larger than a brigade and there is no proper balance among the different arms. There is a deficiency in the trades necessary to a force in the field, such as farriers, blacksmiths, etc. A large proportion of the officers have had no experience in the field even in peace maneuvers, and it would take months to give them all the experience requisite to intelligent coöperation.

The equipment is lacking. Not only draft animals but also horses for cavalry and artillery must be got, and the latter must be trained for months before they are fit for war service. Armed motors, aeroplanes, modern field kitchens, machine guns in proper proportion, to say nothing of light clothing, goggles, and other requirements of a soldier's comfort and health are noticeably lacking.

In short, the national guard is not in any modern sense an army and cannot be brought to a modern standard of efficiency short of many months of hard training.

This fact, which the advocates of preparedness have been trying for years to impress upon congress and the public, should now be frankly faced and thoroughly studied. Several resolutions have passed the house touching different aspects of the mobilization, but it would be better to cover the whole subject comprehensively in a full report on the whole movement and condition of the guard. Some time would be necessary for the reception and summarizing of reports, but not a great deal, and as a result of a full demonstration of the wastefulness and inefficiency of the state militia system it should be possible to obtain radical legislation, if not from the present congress, at least from the next.

The spirit shown by the officers and men of the national guard deserves the admiration of the American people. It has been an inspiration. We have seen the flower of the land respond to the call of the president. We have learned that the spirit of sacrifice is not dead. That is good. But it shines out in contrast to the system through which it has been demonstrated; a system always found wanting from the beginning of the republic; a system that has written the record of its failures in blood in every war.

Why will we not learn this lesson? We are fortunate in having it taught us now without bloodshed or defeat. Must we wait for these grim teachers or shall we act before they lay again the bloody ferule of experience across our shoulders?

The state militia system has never worked. The volunteer principle has never worked. Both are a delusion, working injustice, inefficiency, and cruel waste. The American democracy has the example of other democracies before it. The republican armies of France, of Switzerland, of Australia, and New Zealand reproach our citizenship.

SKIPPER BEN DEAD AMONG HIS ROSES.

There died at Bayonne, N. J., the other day a grizzled old salt whom Stevenson or Conrad would have liked to know. Seventy-nine years ago Ben Doane, then 14 years old, skipped for his first voyage. From then until after the close of the civil war, in which he served, there happened to him nearly everything which could come to a seaman. He saw the decline of the clipper ship, the rise of steam navigation, the introduction of the steel battleship, the submarine, and the coming of the undersea merchantman Deutschland.

He sailed around the world many times. He visited Japan before Perry went there. He saw storms and wrecks, and he quelled mutinies, and finally he retired to a cottage on the Jersey shore, where he could watch the shipping of an age to which he no longer belonged come and go. And what do you suppose he then did? Raised roses, the most beautiful blooms in that part of the country.

AFTER THE WAR.

If there is one thought that is in the minds of all Americans at this time, sometimes in the background as a shadow of grave warning, sometimes pressing forward for anxious consideration, it is: What of our future after the war?

The strength of the demand for naval and military defense is a part of this. But we are coming to understand that a much wider and deeper preparedness than that against military offense is to be required of us. When the armies of the world lay down their arms the war will not be over. The unending warfare of peace will go on, and with more formidable weapons and more far reaching strategies than ever before.

The Paris economic conference of the entente allies was not needed to remind us that we are to confront a more drastic and inclusive system of alliance and international coöperation than we have had to meet in the past. We need only glance at the tremendous mobilization of British resources, the astonishing energizing and radical reorganization of its industrial and financial powers, the miraculous transformation of that nation of laissez faire and traditional conservatism, to waken to a profound sense of the struggle before us.

We need not face these momentous facts in fear or discouragement. But we must face them without an unthinking optimism. We must realize that we are not foreordained to victory, but that, on the contrary, we have been blest in the past with fortunate conditions which have ministered not only to our success but to the development of many weaknesses. We must realize that we have wasted resources and acquired loose habits, have let youthful strength and pristine riches take the place of forethought, patience, economy, science, and orderly advance.

But now we are to meet a world in arms. Not the arms of the soldier, but the arms of the commercial conqueror, founded on an organized might of brain and will such as civilization has never revealed before. We must match the organization, the coolly developed forethought, the minutely planned coördination of our rivals' effort, with at least equal resource. We can no longer drift in the happy optimism of inconsiderate youth. We must plan as farseeing men and work with a will.

And first we must look at facts. Today in THE TRIBUNE begins a series of articles by Henry M. Hyde which will roughly but significantly outline some of the main features of the world situation and our own. They will but stimulate the thoughts that have been in our minds for many anxious months. It is hoped they will do more, that they will contribute to the accomplishment, through a thoroughly aroused opinion, of the larger preparedness which our country needs profoundly today and will need for generations to come.

MEDILL M'CORMICK'S CANDIDACY.

It is gratifying to Illinois, and especially to Illinois Republicans, that members of its delegation in congress have taken conspicuous parts in the most important activities of the present congress. Senator Sherman, House Minority Leader Mann, Representatives Madden and Britten have distinguished themselves in the campaign for defense, against pork expenditures, in the discussion of international complications.

But Illinois ought to be a leader in congress and its delegation might well be strengthened by the addition of more men capable of doing constructive work. The opening of Medill McCormick's campaign for congressman at large offers voters an opportunity to consider the views of a candidate of exceptional qualifications, proved in actual service.

Mr. McCormick as a leader in the general assembly showed ability of high order in constructive work. He proved his comprehension of the essential weaknesses of state government here and he endeavored to correct them. He led the attempt to persuade the legislature to call a constitutional convention. In some not remote time Illinois will get a new and needed constitution, and when that work has been accomplished much of the credit will go to the pioneers who worked in reluctant soil to seed the idea.

Mr. McCormick also protested and worked against the wasteful system of appropriations and demanded the budget system, which also some day will be adopted, and the credit will go to the men who broke ground for it.

He fought for the principle that the control of Chicago's public utilities should be vested in Chicago, that it inherently belongs there and could only violently be taken away. He fought for efficiency and economy in state administration with a clear idea of the necessity of strengthening state government if the American nation is to realize its opportunities. He also was an effective advocate of social legislation for the protection of women and children in industrial relations.

Illinois ought, for national as well as state reasons, to send men of constructive ability to Washington. The opportunity is not always offered the voters. Mr. McCormick's candidacy gives an opportunity.

WHAT MEXICO WILL GET.

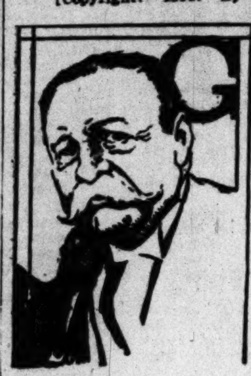
[From the Montreal Star.]

It is difficult to see what Mexico can get out of it. But the trouble is that there is now no Mexico. Disorder, permanent revolution, and anarchy have wrought their perfect work. President Carranza may be a patriot; but he must act in the sense of general Mexican opinion or see his place taken by some leader who will. And Mexican opinion is exactly like opinion the world over—it is restive under the presence of foreign troops on its territory.

Of one thing, however, all Mexican leaders may be certain; and that is that, if they once get into real grips with the American nation, and if much American blood is shed on Mexican soil, that soil will in the end become part and parcel of the United States. They may today feel too proud not to fight; but they are cutting the throat of Mexican independence. Any foreign advisers who are counseling "passive resistance" are their truest friends.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1916: By the Brentwood Company.]



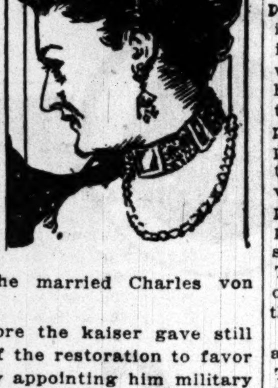
GEN. PRINCE WEDEL, in accepting the presidency of the national committee organized at Berlin at the instance of the kaiser to prepare the minds of the German people for "an honorable peace," has undertaken an extremely difficult and delicate job, which will tax to the uttermost all his gifts of diplomacy and statecraft. Some three score of the ablest speakers in Germany have been required by the emperor to assist the prince in his task, and it is proposed that the committee is to work by means of public speeches, private discussions, pamphlets, and by influencing the press not only in Germany but also abroad.

If there is any one more than another, however, who might be considered as qualified for the mission, it is Prince Wedel, who is a man of the soundest judgment, of the utmost courtesy and consideration in his dealings with others, and who, in addition to being a thorough man of the world in the broadest sense of the term, is a great statesman and a singularly shrewd diplomatist.

His career has been a very extraordinary one. For in 1866 he fought against Prussia in the battle of Langenzalza, distinguishing himself as a subaltern of the Hanoverian cavalry regiment of the crown prince of Hanover. Later on he entered the Prussian army, rose to the rank of colonel; then became military attaché of the embassies in Paris and Vienna, where he did so well, in a military as well as in a diplomatic way, that he was appointed to the post of German envoy at Stockholm.

He was virtually dismissed from the diplomatic service, however, in 1894, for having married a Swedish woman in defiance of the kaiser's personal prohibition, as well as in violation of the rules of the German government against matrimonial alliances between members of the diplomatic service and foreigners. Gen. Count Charles von Wedel, as he was then, instead of manifesting his resentment for this treatment, abstained from expatriating himself, as everybody expected that he would do, and instead of settling down in Sweden, a course which would have been warranted by the vast landed estates of his wife in that kingdom, he took up his residence in Berlin, where the magnificence of his establishment, the splendor of his entertainments, and the stately beauty of his wife, served to make him one of the most conspicuous figures in the German capital.

It was not long before he was fully restored to the favor of the emperor, who, with the empress, frequently dined with the Wedels, off the superb service of gold plate which is one of the ancestral possessions of Wedel's wife, and which has been owned by her family for more than 200 years.



Her family is that of the Hamiltons, a branch of the historic Scottish house of that name, which has been established in Sweden ever since the reign of King Gustavus Adolphus and the Thirty Years' war. Her father, the late Count Hamilton, was governor of Stockholm, her mother was grand mistress of the court of Queen Sophia, while she herself was the widow of Count Platen when she married Charles von Wedel.

It was not long before the kaiser gave still further manifestation of the restoration to favor of Count von Wedel by appointing him military governor of Berlin; and when Baron Saurma, former German ambassador at Washington, became so ill at Rome as to be obliged to resign his post, Von Wedel was appointed as his successor. Two years later he was transferred as ambassador to Vienna, in the place of the disgraced Prince Eulenburg.

At Vienna he was welcomed with open arms. For he had spent no less than eight years there as military attaché of the embassy, being to such an extent initiated into the diplomatic work of the mission that in the absence of the then ambassador, the late Prince Reuss, it was he, Wedel, and not the first secretary, who took his place as chargé d'affaires.

About nine years ago Von Wedel was transferred from Vienna to the office of viceroy of Alsace and Lorraine. He remained there until the winter before the beginning of the war, having accomplished more towards the reconciliation of the people of the annexed provinces to Teuton rule than any of his predecessors as stadtholder.

In fact, he was virtually driven to resign by the abuse of the Prussian ultra-conservatives and bureaucracy, who complained that both he and his wife were treating the people of Alsace-Lorraine with altogether too much laxity. On his retirement the kaiser bestowed the title of prince and princess upon Von Wedel and his wife.

Although a former officer of the Hanoverian army, yet Prince Wedel is an Oldenburger by birth, being a son of Gen. Count William von Wedel, who was chief of the military household of the reigning Grand Duke of Oldenburg of his day. The prince's grandfather was a Danish field marshal and one of the last of the Danish viceroys of Norway. Prince Wedel greatly distinguished himself in the war of 1870 against France, winning the iron cross on the battlefield, and, what was still more important, the good will of Field Marshal Count Moltke.

Moltke, after the war, attached him to the general staff, and on the outbreak of hostilities seven years later between Turkey and Russia, dispatched him to the Muscovite headquarters as his representative. In fact, Prince Wedel went through the entire Turko-Russian campaign of forty years ago as a member of the personal suite of Czar Alexander.

Prince and Princess Wedel have no children, consequently their princely title will lapse with their death. His elevation to the rank of prince met with the approval of all the minor German courts. For there are few of the latter at which the Wedel family is not represented in a more or less confidential capacity. Each reigning house of Germany has one or more Wedels in its service, usually holding an office of much dignity and great trust.

It may be recalled that a few years ago a member of the Von Wedel family, Count George, came to this country and spent some time here as secretary of the German embassy at Washington, occasionally acting as chargé d'affaires. He is married to a daughter of the late Baron Charles Magnus, whose family played an important rôle in the haute finance of Berlin and was ennobled by King Frederick William IV. of Prussia some seven decades ago.

HEADACHES.

PHYSICIANS attending establishments in which large numbers of people are employed, tells us that headache is one of the most frequent symptoms complained of by those who come to the doctor for help. Especially is this true if the establishment is one employing a force in which there is a considerable proportion of women.

Headache is not a disease for which people consult a physician customarily. The custom is for a person suffering from headache to take a dose of some proprietary preparation or headache cure and let it go at that. It is true that in large establishments which provide free, easily available, and confidence inspiring medical service, more employés consult the physicians for headache than is the custom among people generally. Therefore, taking all things into consideration, it is fair to say that headache is the most frequent of all symptoms.

Every one thinks he knows how to treat a headache. The custom is to take one or more headache powders. The base of all headache medicines is some coal tar remedy. Some are built around phenacetin or acetanalid, and some around aspirin. Combined with one of these coal tar preparations there is sometimes ordinary cooking soda, sometimes an effervescing powder, sometimes some drug derived from opium. From top to bottom there is not an entirely harmless drug in the list. Some are very harmful—for instance, codein, which stands at the head of the list—and some are almost harmless—for instance, soda, which stands at the foot of the list—and in between come others.

Every headache medicine, regardless of its name or what may be said on the label, contains one or more of these drugs. If you want to know what the federal government says about these medicines send to the Bureau of Chemistry, Washington, D. C., for bulletin 126—"The Harmful Effects of Acetanalid, Antipyrin, and Phenacetin"; also to the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., for Farmers' Bulletin No. 377—"Harmfulness of Headache Mixtures," and Farmers' bulletin No. 393—"Habit Forming Agents, Their Indiscriminate Sale and Use a Menace to the Public Welfare," by L. F. Kebler.

This last bulletin, speaking of headache mixtures, says: "These mixtures are advertised as cures or effective treatments for many ills of mankind, ranging from cholera morbus in infants to "brain fag" and exhaustion, due to drunkenness. They have been the cause of many deaths and hundreds of cases of poisoning.

"The amount of acetanalid, acetphenaltidin, antipyrin, caffein, etc., used in preparations of this class of habit forming drugs is very large. Until recently it was claimed by some that these agents were harmless, and did not belong to the habit forming group. Later investigations, however, clearly show that this position is unwarranted. The medical profession for some time fondly believed that the depressing effects of acetanalid were counteracted by caffein, which is present in most headache mixtures, but pharmacological experiments have shown that the assumption is erroneous. These remedies in general simply benumb or stupefy the senses, but do not remove the cause of the trouble."

Note the several statements that headache mixtures are habit forming drugs. They bring about the headache habit and that in turn calls for more headache medicine. A dose of headache medicine will relieve the discomfort of a headache nine times out of ten. Therefore, the temptation to use them. But the man who has a headache and takes headache medicine lays the foundation for another headache. That day, or the next, or some time soon a second headache in part caused by the medicine follows the first. In the course of a few years daily headaches and daily use of headache medicine, or something approximating that, is the rule.

The reason for this is twofold. First, the headache medicine produces certain changes in the blood cells and the brain cells, which changes bring about a tendency to headaches. In the second place, a headache is a warning of some wrong habit or some organic disease. If, instead of changing the habit or remedying the disease, a man takes a dose of headache medicine, he is certain to have another headache before long.

Be wise and take no headache medicines. Do not buy them from the drug stores and do not permit your physician to give them to you.

The Minnesota State Pharmaceutical association is authority for the statement that there are drug peddlers who go around the country stocking up homes with drugs on consignment. Above all, do not take any of the headache mixtures peddled by these people.

What is a man with headache to do about it? That will depend upon the cause. And that statement runs right to the heart of things. A person having headaches must ask himself why he has headaches, must not stop until he knows why and has remedied the cause if it can be remedied.

Since the quotation from Kebler contained an allusion to the katzenjammer headache let us answer the first question as to that form of headache. For relief take three compound cathartic pills, put hot cloths on the head, take a hot bath, drink a cup of milk or clam bouillon and two crackers, and chew gum.

More important still is prevention. The way to cure katzenjammer headaches is to prevent them by laying off the booze. Did you ever see a man accumulating a jag? Quarts of beer, interspersed with ounces of whisky, are filled with tobacco smoke, hot rooms, dirty skin, dirty clothes, dirt everywhere. No sleep. No food.

The most frequent form of headache is what is known as biliousness. When we say a man is bilious we mean he eats too much for the exercise he takes and the air he gets. A bilious headache is characterized by a throbbing pain, some tendency to dizziness, some confusion of mind, and, occasionally, some loss of appetite and some nausea. This type of headache generally gets better at once following a free bowel movement. For the cure of this type of headache nothing is better than a saline purge. If, after free watery purgation, the sufferer will lie quietly in a darkened room for a short while, this treatment will bring about as much relief as will a dose of headache medicine.

But the more important question is to prevent these headaches. They are due to bad habits. They can be prevented in every instance by changing the habits. Let us say the man is a newspaper man working as an editor, sitting at a desk from 5 o'clock in the evening till 1 o'clock in the morning. Let him get up a little earlier and plan nine holes of golf or take a horseback ride. Let him eat about one-fifth as much meat, potatoes, and bread and make up for it with fruit, vegetables, and water.

Whatever be the vocation or work of a person subject to bilious headaches the cure lies within his own hands. Nobody can cure him, but he can certainly cure himself, and that by merely changing his habits.

A not infrequent headache is that due to eyestrain. How can one know that eyestrain is causing his headache? Generally speaking, in headaches from the eyes the pain is in the forehead or the temples. The headaches come on after several hours' work. They are more apt to come on after work that is trying on the eyes. To these rules, however, there are many exceptions. If any one had repeated headaches he should suspect eyestrain.

If eyestrain is suspected the sufferer can make a rough test of his own eyes. Test cards abound. Optical establishments have them to give away. Let him secure a test card, hang it up in a well lighted room, take his position twenty feet away, by measure, and see if he can read the line marked 20—with each eye separately and then with both eyes together. If he cannot read it with each eye and both eyes, if the letters are not clear cut, distinct, and separate, his eyesight is faulty and he is in need of glasses.

Even though his eyes be good a man might suffer from eyestrain if the illumination is very poor, if he must gaze at a bright light or shiny surfaces, or if his work is very fine. The remedy for this variety of headache is even more accessible. Eyeglasses with proper lenses and with a frame that holds the lens at just the right place are easy to get.

No man is justified in getting a drug habit because of eyestrain.

Other forms of fatigue are responsible for headache. Naturally the headaches of fatigue are more apt to develop toward the end of the day. The cure for this form of headache is easy to understand and, in most instances, is easy to apply. In most cases the cause operates after work hours rather than during them. In this event the cure consists in correcting the bad habit. Sometimes it is late hours and too little sleep. Sometimes it is worry. If the cause operates during work hours, planning can save enough motions to get fatigue with proper limits.

Another form of headache frequently encountered is the tea and toast breakfast headache. This is a hunger headache. If taken just as it starts, an apple and a piece of bread or a glass of buttermilk will cure it. To prevent this form of headache one should eat a more substantial breakfast.

Another frequent cause of headache is neurasthenia. The neurasthenic headache is often described as a feeling of a band around the head. Or the headache is said to beat at one point or along a line or in a certain square. Or there is a feeling that the top of the head is likely to come off or to cave in. All those various bizarre feelings in the head—and a hundred neurasthenic patients will describe them in twenty-five different ways—are symptoms of neurasthenic headache. A headache which causes a man to fear he is going insane or to fear something else is a neurasthenic headache, nine times out of ten.

The way to prevent these headaches is to benefit the neurasthenia. That is a slow process, for neurasthenia results from two bad mental habits, fear and worry. Retraining a badly trained mind is a slow and tedious process, but it can be done. No one suffering from neurasthenic headaches gains anything in any way from developing the headache medicine habit.

There are many different forms of headache, due to many different causes. In this article only a few have been covered. We have said nothing about migraine or menstrual headache, and nothing about the headaches which result from Bright's disease and other forms of organic disease.

Let this statement cover all of them: In no form of headache is the persistent use of headache medicines justified. They always make matters worse in the long run. Every form of headache except those due to organic disease or migraine can be cured by change in some habit or in the method of living. When the headache is due to organic disease the proper treatment of the headache is directed toward the disease itself and not toward the headache.

FUMES FROM PAINT.

J. W. writes: "Kindly inform us whether it is injurious to breathe the fumes which arise from a paint made from the following: One-half pound lamp black, two and one-half gallons varnish, and two and one-half gallons benzine.

"In the office where this paint is used there are ten employés and they are all exposed to the fumes of this paint throughout the day. Is there any danger of painter's colic, or could the health of any one of these employés be impaired by constantly breathing the fumes that arise from this paint?"

REPLY.

There is no danger of painter's colic. There is danger from the inhalation of considerable quantities of benzine. If wood alcohol is a part of the solution used to cut the varnish there is danger from that source. The degree of danger depends on the ventilation.

GOITER ON CHILD.

A. writes: "1. Should one grow anxious over goiter in the neck of a girl of 13? 2. What is the best remedy, medicine or electricity? 3. What is there for or against use of latter?"

REPLY.

1. No. Moderate sized goiter without nervous symptoms in a girl of 13 is a matter of small consequence.

2. A proper regard for hygiene is better than either in such a case.

3. The only objection in this case is that it is not necessary.

AND STILL THERE ARE SOME WHO WONDER WHY WE DON'T GET ANYWHERE WITH IT.

PAVING LEAVITT STREET.

Chicago, July 18.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I would like to know whether Leavitt street, from Madison street to Washington boulevard, will be paved this summer. The street is in a terrible condition.
M. CHIAPPE,
12 North Leavitt street.

The paving of Leavitt street, from Madison street to Washington boulevard, depends upon the proposed construction of a relief sewer in this street. If the sewer is constructed as contemplated the pavement cannot be laid this year. Plans for the sewer are being made at the present time, but until the details of construction have been determined nothing can be done with the paving proposition, the assessment for which has been confirmed.
M. J. FAHERTY,
President Board of Local Improvements.

PAVING IRVING PARK BOULEVARD.

Chicago, July 19.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly notify me through your paper if Irving Park boulevard, west of the river, is going to be paved this year.
ROBERT DOLL,
3225 Irving Park boulevard.

Bids have been received and opened for the paving of Irving Park boulevard, between Milwaukee and Lincoln avenues, and the contract for the improvement will probably be awarded at the next meeting of the board.
M. J. FAHERTY,
President Board of Local Improvements.

PAVING SEVENTY-NINTH STREET.

Chicago, July 18.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I have paid one assessment for paving Seventy-ninth street—work which I have understood was to be completed late in 1915—and to date the only thing done has been the setting of the curb. Can you advise when this paving is to be completed and reason for delay?
E. J. HABERMEYER,
7444 Jeffery avenue.

The paving of Seventy-ninth street, between Stony Island and Saginaw avenues, will be resumed as soon as the rehabilitation of the car tracks has been completed. The street railway company is working on the tracks at the present time.
M. J. FAHERTY,
President Board of Local Improvements.

PROCURING DIVORCE FOR DESERTION.

Chicago, July 17.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Could a man obtain a divorce on a charge of desertion from a woman who had deserted her husband without notice, and went to live with her mother? Her husband went to live with her, but on account of bad accommodations, etc., he left, asking his wife to come with him. She refused, saying she wanted to stay with her mother. F. H.

The wife must go with the husband to any suitable residence he provides for her. If she does not, and the parties live apart for two years, he may get a divorce for desertion.

LIABLE FOR RENT.

Chicago, July 17.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Two young ladies have rented an apartment, paying $40 rent per month. Upon leasing this apartment both signed the lease, which commenced May 1, 1916, and expires May 1, 1917. They now find that they cannot afford to pay this amount and would like to inquire whether they would be held responsible for the balance of the lease. In the event that they should move, could the owner hold their furniture on which they have paid a small deposit? A. N.

They are both liable for the rental till May 1, 1917. The landlord can obtain the furniture by a distress warrant if the rent gets in arrears.

NOISES AT NIGHT.

Chicago, July 16.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—[1] What recourse has a tenant against another who in an apartment section of the town indulges in phonograph and piano orgies as late an hour as 2 in the morning? [2] Also, what recourse have I against a man who runs an automobile with an open muffler down a narrow street at about the same time of night? F. W. C.

1. Report same to the police. And if it continues frequently, you can have it abated as a nuisance. 2. There is a fine for such conduct and by reporting same to the police you can have the driver fined.

IS SUGAR SYNONYMOUS WITH PORK?

Chicago, July 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In your editorial of the 15th inst., entitled "Kill the Pork Bill," you mention three Illinois congressmen who voted for the measure. I note that this legislation will take $42,886,085 from the United States treasury during the present fiscal year, and note this money goes principally to the bank accounts of private interests. You predict that the waste of the pork bill will be resented more than ever it has been before.

I have been a constant reader of your paper and have been more interested to note any expression of your disapprobation of the subsidy, pork, or any synonymous term you choose, of the $50,000,000 given to private interests—the domestic sugar producers, by the repeal of the Underwood free sugar law, but have looked in vain. Do you not know that by the repeal of the free sugar law a tax of $90,000,000 was automatically levied upon the people of the United States, and that less than 50 per cent of this money finds its way into the United States treasury, and approximately $50,000,000 is paid by the people to swell the bank accounts of the private domestic sugar producers? For your information, there were but fifteen votes cast against this iniquitous measure of private graft, and four of these votes were from Illinois congressmen—the Hon. James McAndrews, the Hon. Frank Buchanan, the Hon. A. J. Sabath, and the Hon. Clyde H. Tavenner. Do you not think they deserve some recognition for trying to protect the people of the United States from this imposition?
J. REX ALLEN.

EXPLOITATION IN MEXICO.

Chicago, July 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial in Sunday's issue on "Exploitation in Mexico" h. the n. on the h., as B. L. T. would put it. It is just what I have been trying to say, but less pointedly and effectively, for months. Permit me to observe, however, that it is not the first duty of government to maintain a lecture bureau or to equip a kindergarten.

SOME POLITICAL INQUIRIES.

Chicago, July 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—As a Republican, then a Progressive, I am very much puzzled as to certain political moves and would like to have some light in any way it may seem best to you. As an individual it is unimportant whether I understand or not, but as one of many (I assume) it might be important. Why does an honorable, upright man like Ald. John Kjellander tie up with the Thompson-Lundin, née Lorimer outfit? Has he lost his mental balance, made a mistake of judgment, or joined the gang? Do the Republicans think they have the Progressives back with them and they can put over the Thompson slate? I know Sherman and Thompson framed up a deal whereby Thompson was made national committeeman, but surely men of the standing of Kjellander do not have to curry favor with a man like Thompson. Another question: Is there any significance in the fact that Thompson and his gang were willing to hold out such inducements for the purpose of getting their man in as state's attorney?
W. C. L.

MEXICANS MUST BE REBORN.

Colchester, Ill., July 19.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The acceptance of a few pieces of silver is not enough for the forty brave soldiers who lost their lives in the battle of Carrizal. We should compel Mexico to do some great good by establishing a compulsory public school system throughout all of Mexico, where even five or ten or more children of school age live, similar in character to our own, which would build up a better race of Mexicans.

You can't change the present generation—but you can lay the cornerstone of a foundation for Mexico to build upon—you can practically float the stars and stripes on every public schoolhouse in Mexico—and that would be an eternal monument for the forty United States soldiers whose lives would not have been spent in vain.

Regardless of any opinion our president may have, the majority of the American people want righteousness. Our forefathers never laid their hands to the plow and turned back, for if they had the Mexican border would now extend from Louisiana to Oregon, and nearly one-fifth of the present United States would still be in Mexico.

Will the next generation in the United States be as thankful to their forefathers as we are to ours? I fear not! From the beginning, God has always fought the devil. Righteousness should always conquer wrong. The eternal right must prevail—we should never lay our hands to the plow to right a wrong and turn back until some great good shall have been done.
CHARLES N. JOHNSON.

CRIMINAL ADMINISTRATION.

Chicago, July 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial, "Criminal Administration," hits the nail on the head. The Orpet trial purely demonstrates the greatest defect of criminal prosecution in this country. It plainly shows that the prosecution and desire to convict serves more as a means to further personal ambition than to administer justice.

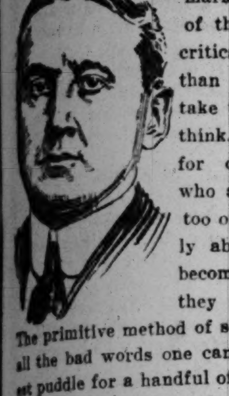
OPINIONS

By Robert Herrick



I AM occasionally favored by receiving the opinions of readers of my humble remarks in these columns on the validity of the views I hold and express. My critics disagree with me rather oftener than they approve—at least, those who take the trouble to write me what they think. (Silence, I suppose, may be taken for consent or—indifference.) Those who are thus moved to address me are too often abusive, personally and coarsely abusive. Why do so many people become instinctively abusive whenever they disagree with another's opinions? The primitive method of self-expression seems to be to throw all the bad words one can recollect, then stoop to the nearest puddle for a handful of mud. (I recommend this psychological phenomenon to the pacifists for further examination.) One brother citizen of the republic, writing from Milwaukee with a good German name, even threatened that "they would get me yet." I have been puzzled as to who "they" are, and where and when "they" would begin to "get me," and, incidentally, why "they" should waste their efforts on such an insignificant hater of kaiserism as myself.

* *

IN my mail today came two missives from unknown readers that are so completely unlike, although instigated by the same remarks from me, that I am tempted to discuss them for a little space and to draw a simple moral from them. The first, from an "M. D." in some Illinois village, fills two typed pages with abuse of me and my "stupidities," as he ironically dubs my ideas, and wonders that I should be permitted to defile the wholesome pages of THE TRIBUNE with them. In a final burst of sarcasm and denunciation he classes me with "one B. Arnold, E. Goldman, William (also RANdolph) Hearst, and others of that ilk," and signs himself "A la 'Decatur'"! (Please note that the wit is not mine.) Although I do not admire either the doctor's wit or his manners, his vituperations give me food for thought.

Apparently he considers me to be a reprehensible traitor to my country because I believe the actions of the present administration—in this instance in the handling of the Mexican situation—to be stupid and blundering and because I utter aloud a fervent prayer that my country may be delivered from another four years of such incompetence and weakness. Also, it is evident that my correspondent considers himself to be a patriot because, "A la 'Decatur,'" he feels himself obliged to swallow whole whatever the official head of his country happens to consider, for the moment, the right thing to do or say.

I am unable to agree with the little kaiserite M. D. in such a conception of the obligations of patriotism, and, as there are many Americans who think confusedly on the point, it is worth while to dwell on it. The writer of the letter is making the same mistake that President Wilson made when he pronounced his neutrality exhortations to the American people at the outbreak of the great war and afterward. Because the president of the nation had decided in conference with his chosen advisers on a policy of strict neutrality, morally and physically, toward all the belligerent peoples, was sufficient reason why I, as an American citizen, should refrain from conspiring against any of the belligerents or militarily abetting any other, but no reason at all why my beliefs and convictions should be stifled within my dumb breast, why I should refrain from proclaiming at the height of my voice and with all the passion of my soul that our president in making us neutral before Belgium, in the face of the submarine outrages, was dishonoring my country and misrepresenting its best will.

Any other conception of patriotism in a republic than one that permits and encourages the greatest possible freedom of opinion, held and expressed, also criticism of authority, means the sure downfall of free institutions, the stultifying of mind and conscience, and ultimately all the miseries of kaiserism. History has proved that abundantly. Fortunately for us a few Americans were robust minded enough from the beginning not to be intimidated by the solemnity of the president, who forgot that he was no longer a college president, and during the two years that have followed a goodly number more have recovered their courage and found their voices, speaking, and unmistakably, against what I mercifully called the "stupidities" in the Democratic administration of foreign affairs. So many Americans, in fact, are still expressing themselves—probably to the deep disgust of Dr. "A la 'Decatur,'" that there is grave doubt whether President Wilson and his party will be allowed to muddle through another four years at Washington. If they are turned out next November I wonder whether the kaiserite doctor will consider himself bound to support every utterance and act of the Republican president? I doubt it. He will more probably consider it the duty of patriotism to "expose the traitors" to his country, publicly and privately.

WELL, enough of my village doctor's ironic meditations. . . . I said the mail brought me another letter on the same topic—my remarks on our shambling Mexican policy and the sending of raw militia boys to the border, perhaps into Mexico, in "defense of the country" from Villa et al. This other letter was from a lady, using the word in all the force of its fine old meaning. It was not abusive, needless to say; instead it was soothingly appreciative of my outburst against a government that would send green, untrained boys on the errand contemplated. The writer was a mother with two boys who are in Texas with their regiment. After expressing her approval of my article she called my attention to one aspect of the affair that had escaped my attention when I wrote the article, although since I have had occasion more than once to consider this additional example of political bungling. Her words are so much better than any paraphrase I could make of them, so much fairer and more generous than I could use, that I will take the liberty of quoting exactly what she says and then add a few needless words of comment—one thumping amen at the end:

"There is another aspect—the requiring of the militia to take the federal oath that to my mind was a distinct breach of faith on the part of the government. These men had volunteered for one kind of service—had made their contract with the government, and the government forces upon them another contract—it was virtual conscription, and conscription of men not trying to escape service, but of those who were willing to do their part toward preparedness, but who were not in a position where they wished to enter the regular army. The psychology of it was so poor. If the government had said, 'We know you entered for one kind of service, but here we are in this crisis, with no army (although the act was passed before the crisis, the oath was not taken until July), will you go into the federal service and help us out?' I believe almost as many men would have taken the oath, but they would have had some of the joy of feeling that they were making a sacrifice willingly for their country, not that they were conscripted."

The essence of conscription is that it constrains all of fit condition, does not compel a few caught by a trick in a trap to do service for which they did not enlist and for which they had not been trained. No, it was "bad psychology," as this mother justly observes, to force these young men to take the new oath, to subscribe to a contract other than the one they had voluntarily made. But it was even worse dishonor for the administration. (I always suspected that the soft spoken pacifist would become the most unscrupulous militarist when he found himself in a mess.)

I DO not know about the law of the matter, but I suspect it is as bad as the psychology and the honor. There are those who see in this forcing of the militia into federal service a kind of poetic justice because of the lobbying last winter in congress against an increase in the regular army by militia interests. But "interests" of any sort are never the little fellows who have to pay the piper—the militiamen themselves in all likelihood did not lobby or pay lobbyists, and they are the ones who have to take the oath. The jaunt to Texas is not likely to render the administration popular militia circles whatever other results it may have.

Indeed, if the Democratic administration adopted its "vigorous" Mexico policy with an eye to the November elections the thing is likely to prove a boomerang, for our heroics on the Rio Grande please nobody, not the pacifists, the fire-eaters, the timidists; not the Bryanites nor the Rooseveltians. And the president has almost lost his one great campaign plea: "I kept the country out of war!"

But one good thing, in fact, can come out of the muddle and that is a plain demonstration to congressmen and their kind that there is no earthly use in pretending that militia make an army. They must line themselves up as no army men or vote for a real army, and the sooner they do it the better for the peace and the credit of the country. If a real increase in the regular army is brought about by the summer which our militia are to spend along the Mexican border the young men can congratulate themselves on doing a fine piece of service for their country even if they never fire a shot at a Mexican. The policy of pretend and compromise has broken down ridiculously, sooner than might have been expected. Will our congress recognize its futility and give us something real in its place?

* *

MEANWHILE all honor to those young men who took their medicine quietly and went off to stew in Texas on a duty that they had not pledged themselves to do. And great pity, as this mother of two of them wrote in her letter to me, that our national government did not give them the opportunity to make the sacrifice voluntarily instead of shabbily forcing them into it in this ex post facto fashion. It is hardly the way to encourage patriotism! But fortunately the mass of any people is infinitely better than its rulers.

The Three Sacrifices

By James Douglas.

An Englishman said to me the other day that the English people were growing weary of the Irish question. I replied that they were not half so weary of it as the Irish people. If ever a question on this question cumbered earth was ripe for solution it is the Irish question. It has been debated to death. The maddening aspect of it at this moment is that on the very edge and eve of a settlement by consent there appear to be politicians who appear to imagine that they will be allowed to push us all back again into the old bog of black, barren controversy.

In a former article I discussed "the riddle of duty," which every Irishman is bound to read aright in these fateful days. It brought me a letter from an Ulster lady. "There were touches of feeling," she wrote, "in your article of which I could not help feeling conscious, and your heading was arresting—it was arrestingly true. I think few people in Ulster have had a quiet night's sleep all week. I go about and meet distracted people—distracted by 'the riddle of duty.' All along we have had one clear course open to us—'to keep our covenant or die first.' We were all prepared to leave the question as long as the war lasted, but now we are brought to a full stop.

"We are all held up and Mr. Lloyd-George points a pistol at our head and says, 'Do your duty to the empire.' Our first feeling is one of bewilderment. A revolution yesterday; Ireland today packed with troops and risings considered imminent. 'Do your duty and make a business deal of six counties and all will be well.' If we are betrayed by such a trick—then . . . I can say no more, but we all feel in our hearts that if our empire is served by men who could play such a trick at such a time on such a people, then God save Ulster from all her enemies, for you will never be friends of ours again."

The passion in these words is unmistakable. I quote them in order to show the magnitude of the miracle wrought in Ulster. The six counties concordat has been accepted by these people, and with it their covenant is offered by them as an oblation to the empire in its peril. They have broken that covenant in response to the appeal made by Sir Edward Carson in the name of the empire. They have broken it with the consent of their brethren in the three counties.

There are few people in Great Britain who grasp the meaning of the Ulster covenant. It was a solemn and sacred vow of fidelity, binding upon each man and each woman who signed it.

The Ulster Nationalists are being called upon to make an even greater sacrifice. To you in Great Britain their sacrifice is as hard to understand as the breaking of the covenant. These people are the outcasts of Ulster. They are cut off from their fellow countrymen by a social and religious feud.

For generations they have borne the stamp and stigma of an inferior caste. They are not humble or humbled. They are Irish, and therefore they are proud, even though they are for the most part desperately and dismally poor. For them home rule was the dawn of self-respect and erectness of spirit.

They are now asked by their leader, Devlin, to turn their faces away from the promised land for the sake of Ireland. Their exile is to be endured out of patriotism. They do not know how long it will continue. Hope deferred has made their hearts sick. In that sad land many men have grown old and have died without seeing the desire of their hearts. And now the war which is to liberate Serbia is postponing their liberation.

But these people are draining the bitter cup to the dregs. They loathe its taste. If it is hard for the other Ulster to separate itself from its brethren, how much harder is it for these men forbid who look across the border at their brethren marching into the promised land!

There is another tragedy on top of these twin tragedies. It is the tragedy of the Unionists in the other three provinces. They are being torn away from their brethren in Ulster and in Great Britain. They feel that they are being deserted. They are scattered people, mostly aristocrats, nobles, landed or landless gentry, bred for generations in the article of racial and religious ascendency. Some of them are poor. All of them are proud. They are the kith and kin of the British aristocracy. Their plight appeals to Lord Lansdowne and to the house of lords. They are a delightful and charming race, but they are saturated with tragic Irish memories. They look upon the Irish race with feelings which are a blend of contempt and compassion. It is these people who are jeopardizing the settlement. They have more influence in London than you suppose. I know how hard it is to reason with them. There is none so blind as a decaying aristocrat. And yet I can enter into their feelings. They are the legacy of the past. They are what you have made them.

But, for the sake of Ireland and for the sake of the empire, they are called upon to make a sacrifice which in its way is as bitter as the twin sacrifices of Ulster. They must take the plunge into the chilly waters of equality. They must merge themselves in the destiny of their countrymen.

It is an hour for charity and tolerance and gentleness all round. Ireland is racked with a fever of distrust. She sorely needs the healing touch of time. If all her sons join hands round her couch of pain she will rise again with new hope in her heart and new life in her veins.

WALLS OF THE MEUSE

By Sterling Heilig

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—While destruction was storming on Verdun, one of the world's greatest etchers was completing the last plate of Verdun in its beauty. A small accompanying plate may show the ravages. Here is the story of the "key of the world" in picture:

Andrew Affleck, the adventurous Scotchman, is, indeed, a grand artist. His rich and velvety etchings of French and Belgian cathedrals are known all over America. He is a specialist of north France, Belgium, and the River Meuse, beloved by artists. He permits me to publish his preliminary Verdun drawing, and has made me certain hurried sketches of the Meuse cliffs—on which all eyes are fixed.

Not Verdun, but the sweet, romantic little river on which Verdun sits is becoming the "key of the world." Through Shakespeare's Forest of Arden, where it flows in grace and beauty, the River Meuse, beloved by tourists, is to become terrible by hurricanes of fire and metal, clouds of poison gases, and the flowing blood of men. Germany has prepared it, in the tranquillity of her rear. In a word, Germany is all ready to use the River Meuse as her new western front in case of retreat from France and Belgium.

And what a western front—a wall of cliffs!

It is now known that Germany has transformed the Meuse cliffs into an unprecedented fortress 100 miles long. The low banks of the stream, for almost an equal distance, are mined with secret explosives. The river beloved by artists will be an awful place.

Gone is the calm of its earlier shore,
And we, on its breast, our minds
Are confused as the cries which we hear.
And we say that repose has fled
Forever the course of the river of Time.
That never will those on its breast
See an ennobling sight
Or drink of the feeling of quiet again.

It comes as a surprise to the public, but the armies have known it for a long time. Indeed, Germany has established two new lines in Belgium. The first, in view of a retreat from their Yser front, goes north from the old front at Maubeuge to Mons, strikes the little River Dendre north of Mons at Lens, follows the Dendre by way of Ath, Lessines, Grammont, and Aost to the Scheldt, and thence along the Scheldt to Antwerp. I would make them lose Ghent, Bruges, Ostend, and all the Belgian coast, with Roubaix, Lille, and all northwestern France; and their port of Antwerp would not serve them without violating Holland. The other line—the grand, sensational line—is simply the course of the River Meuse, all the way from Verdun up to Maastricht and Aix-la-Chapelle.

This "front of the Meuse," about which so many are talking, was originally constructed by the Germans for use in case the French should pierce their lines near Verdun; and a retreat to it purely and simply means the German armies abandoning all France and Belgium—except a little strip of both those countries east of the Meuse, containing the greatest iron mines of all Europe, which Germany laid hands on in the first months of the war, after having long been tempted by them. It is a story by itself, Germany's craving for the iron Basin of Briey—which belongs to her French and Belgian neighbors; and the cliffs of the Meuse, transformed to 100 miles of fortress, are, at worst, to protect this booty—along with the fatherland.

"The front of the German fatherland, they will surely call it that!" exclaimed the fighting Scotch artist. "Liège is the principal fulcrum, and it is said that they have carried a line across to Antwerp, to hold Antwerp as long as they can, but in the last report it is 'the artists' line,' the Meuse, from Verdun up to Holland, that is all prepared to be Germany's last stand in the west."

"In case the allies break through between Soissons and Verdun?" I said.

"In any case," he answered. "It's a question of numerical forces. When Germany hasn't enough men to defend her old western front, she will retire."

Col. Dupuye of the French army was present. So I turned to him.

"How much saving will the front of the Meuse make Germany?" I asked.

"The line of trenches from Belfort to the sea is 800 kilometers," answered the French colonel. "The Meuse front cuts off 250 kilometers, all saved, of course, from Verdun to the sea. The Germans have recently employed some ninety divisions in the west, which averages, say, one division per ten kilometers—one division of 15,000 men—or 1,500 men per kilometer or, if you want to, say 2,000, and trenches can be held by 1,000 men per kilometer, i. e., one man per meter."

"Why, that's double what is needed!" I said. Yet I remember that the British front in France has notoriously five fighting men per meter in numerous stretches, and always three or four.

"And that's not all," continued the French colonel. "Add thirty-five or more German divisions against our front. It has weakened them a lot."

"Weakened them?" I exclaimed. "How could it weaken them to bring up thirty-five new divisions against you, from the Balkans, from the Russian front, from the German depots, and all over?"

"You forget Verdun," he answered. "Forty divisions have been weakened around Verdun. Their losses are far beyond half a million. And they still have thirty divisions on that short stretch of fifty kilometers. All to the prejudice of the remainder of the front."

It seems that Germany has been defending her trenches against the French and English, in many sections, with as few as 900 men per kilometer—a terrible and dangerous work in open country.

"They do it with machine guns," he said. "A machine gun replaces 200 men—up to a certain limit. A machine gun shoots 600 bullets per minute. Much depends upon the country, flat or hilly—and whether the enemy is ready to attack or not. You see?"

I began to see.

"Cliffs?" I suggested, "100 miles of cliffs?"

The French colonel shook his head.

"There are cliffs along the Meuse which need nobody to hold them, in a way of speaking," he answered. "The Germans can bore in them like quarries, like Gibraltar. Their artillery, safe in its cliff shelter, running back and forth on rails, can sweep attackers on the low lying opposite bank afar off. Suppose we attack them in turn with artillery? We may pound upon the cliffs for weeks, but how are we to storm them when the whistle blows to advance and capture trenches?"

Cliffs line the eastern shore of its most beautiful section for nearly 100 miles. Here and there in the cliffs are natural caves. Some, like the grotttoes of Lesse, have always been tourist sights; others, preserved on private properties, are unknown to the world. But the German armies know them and will utilize them. German prisoners and French women and old men repatriated from the occupied territory are full of stories of mysterious military works along the Meuse. From Amsterdam, Dutch whisperings continue the advice. Where the cliffs degenerate to hillsides, they are dug with laboriously made trenches, in the living sandstone. Barbed wire flings its entanglements far and wide from every height.

The valley highroads have been forbidden to the public for weeks together, and the Belgians, no longer peaceable, but sullen and suspicious, tell that these highways have been dug and mines planted underneath before they were restored to human use.

"The French army knows about it?" I suggested.

The French colonel nodded "yes." The spy system on both sides is perfect.

"The vast works have been done exclusively by German workmen," he said, "and the native population has been kept at a distance; but it is impossible to hide everything in such a populous region. From Namur to the German frontier, the lower banks have been built into veritable fortifications, with barbed wire barriers and cement foundations for heavy artillery. All these works are united by new railroad lines, constructed at the cost of unheard of efforts."

"Can you storm the 100 miles of cliffs?" I asked.

He shook his head "no."

He admitted that it would be very difficult.

Human elements of strength enhance them, chateaux turned into strongholds, and pleasant country houses razed to make shell proof redoubts. They are all Belgian property, so the ruin costs Germany little. On the river are innumerable pontoons and portable bridges ready for use—or for immediate destruction. These positions command all the roads to Germany.

* *

What does it mean? Why has Germany transformed the Meuse valley—away behind her old front—into an inviolable fortified frontier? To make use of its means the giving up of north France and all Belgium, except that narrow strip of each east of the Meuse, adjoining Germany. Obviously, they will quit the "conquered" territory only section by section, when Germany shall not have men enough to defend a longer western front.

And why this feverish hurry?

Are they building a military wall around what they still hope may be included in Greater Germany—the strip of France and Belgium east of the Meuse? The strip is narrow, but within it are the iron and coal of which they seem to make more store than human lives. And, as the wider hope of conquest fades, perhaps it is thought that the French and Belgian iron Basin of Briey may be kept against a world fatigued with war.

Strange price for the hecatombs of Verdun!

And the French colonel don't seem worried.

"They won't keep the Briey basin," he said simply.

What then?

The cliff fortress 100 miles long—the most colossal ever dreamed of and accomplished by the mind of man—is it only to protect, to the last, Germany's slow retreat to her own lair?

MUST HE DIE?

By Edward Goldbeck

THERE is hardly a condemned criminal facing opprobrious death who is not comforted by a woman's love. A mother, a wife, a sister, a sweetheart will stand at his side as long as the law permits it. These women do not demand whether he is guilty or not—they only ask with trembling lips: Must he die? The very idea of their martyrdom makes the world somber in the midst of all this splendor of luxuriant summer.

My belief in human justice is not very strong. I do not doubt the sincerity of the men who are the organs of the law, but our faculty of finding the truth. "I am beginning to think," said Freeman, "that there is not, and never was, any such thing as truth in the world. At least, I don't believe that any two people ever give exactly the same account of anything, even when they have seen it with their own eyes, except when they copy from one another." This seemingly paradoxical view of the historian is confirmed by experimental psychology. It is acknowledged today as a scientific fact.

Moreover, our legal methods of finding the truth are still very defective. In all the European countries I know the prosecutor is from the beginning convinced that the accused is guilty. He starts from this fact and considers it his task to expose the lies and the subterfuges of the adversary. I say "adversary," for he treats him as a cunning enemy, and the startled, entertained, and shocked audience assists at a forensic Indian warfare, which it is true mostly develops into the cruel play of the cat with the mouse. Which of these two will prove more wily, which will display more presence of mind—more feline velocity? I read in a newspaper a few days ago: "The cross examination was harsh, sarcastic, and amusing." Amusing! The Romans had their arena and the dying gladiators, we modern and Christian human beings have the sinister excitement of the court, with the electric chair in the background.

* *

THE layman who reads these cross examinations at home, carefully detached of any external impressions which might bias his judgment, feels that only a strong, healthy man with an unclouded brain and excellent nerves can undergo them without talking nonsense, contradicting himself, and finally breaking down. Most of the questions are perfectly foolish, have no connection with the matter, and muddle the issue. The jury listens bewildered, absolutely unable to see what it all means. The accused is not fully master of his faculties, as so much is at stake for him; he is afraid to say something the jury might resent, he does not know the etiquette of the court, and wavers between indignation and timidity. (I have gone through these experiences myself in Germany and know what I am talking about). The prosecutor asks you what you have done a week ago at 4:45 p. m. You don't know. Will you dare to confess that you don't? "I am highly astonished," answers the prosecutor with bitter irony, as if you had hurt his most precious feelings, "that you pretend not to know about your doings a week ago at 4:45 p. m. I am grieved at your lack of memory. But I am so fortunately situated that I can help you out. At that time you entered the drug store of Miller & Mealy." (Sensation in the audience.)

The reader may ask what I am aiming at. Does the writer intend to suggest that crimes should go unpunished? Where would human society be then? Is it good to undermine the belief of the public in our justice? I shall answer that I only want to destroy the belief in our infallibility.

The last case which has tormented and moved me deeply was that of Lieut. Becker. I am not convinced of his innocence, but I believe that there was no proof of his culpability, and that he would not have been condemned in Germany or France. I could not read the few calm and dignified words of his last statement without painful emotion, and the idea of what his faithful and courageous wife must have suffered has not left me for a long time. People will shrug their shoulders at such sentimentalism, which may seem particularly foolish in a man who believes—as I do—in the necessity of war. Most people say: "Well, that cannot be helped. Mistakes are just as unavoidable in justice as in all the other ways of life." That a man is executed by mistake sometimes happens, these philosophers say, and remind us of La Rochefoucault's bitter epigram: "We are always strong enough to endure the misery of our neighbor." When they hear about such a case they mumble: "Isn't it too bad!"

A THINK that we should not so easily pass by a legal murder. If an innocent human being is executed, such a mistake burdens the conscience of the whole nation. King David prayed: "O Lord, purify me from those of my vices which I do not know and forgive me those of my fellow beings!" We have not advanced since his time in tenderness of conscience and depth of feeling. We are but too prone to forget that we are responsible for our neighbor's faults, that we are all inseparably connected. Nowadays the most enlightened of us say that "society" is responsible, but this is very often a convenient manner of loading an abstraction with very concrete responsibilities. King David was more sincere and more courageous than we are. But everybody who feels humanely bears the burden of such a terrible mistake as the condemnation of an innocent. Even when the flood of daily life has weighed it down into the depths of the subconscious, there remains a scar—a painful memory. This memory becomes suspicion—the suspicion whether the legal and moral foundation of our society is durable.

However, the other people—the sober-minded ones—will come back to the assault and will say, sneeringly: "There is no such thing as a collective conscience—there is only an individual conscience." And, indeed, this sort of rationalism is irrefutable. At least, it cannot be disproved by dialectics, it can only be disproved by an experience of the soul. But every editor of a great newspaper knows how many letters, questions, complaints, criticisms he will get after a verdict which does not convince and satisfy the public. Some of them have been dictated by vanity, some by the idle pleasure in gymnastics of the mind, but many of them will show that the writer obeyed a generous impulse and a serious spiritual need. The nation in its best elements feels that it participates in the guilt.

THIS feeling is legitimate, for we could render such cases impossible by abolishing capital punishment. Of course, we never can wholly make amends to a man who has been imprisoned for years by a mistake—we cannot give him back the lost years of freedom—and there is no way of exactly measuring what he has suffered. Suffering is spiritual, while the indemnity would be of a material kind, so both are incommensurable. But at least the possible can be done and our conscience would be pure. Today we cannot say that it is, for we keep up an institution which allows such irreparable mistakes. We keep it up, although it is not indispensable and cannot be approved from the Christian or from the merely human point of view.

We could do without it, for the aim of the punishment is chiefly to protect society. This aim is attained just as well by life-long prison as by execution. Some people may answer that the aim of the punishment is discouragement by terror, but it is very doubtful if a criminal of this kind could be influenced this way at all. The crime of murder supposes a complete elimination of all the intellectual and ethical inhibitions which keep a normal human being on the straight road.

And what do they think who regard moral improvement as the aim of punishment? Capital punishment seems to me reprehensible from the Christian and the human point of view, because it prematurely destroys the possibilities of moral development in the condemned man. Who will assert that in some cases such an improvement would have been impossible? I remember a criminal who had quite uncommon qualities of intellect and will. Goethe has said that he felt in himself the germ for any crime whatsoever, and Goethe was exceptionally healthy in body and mind. Criminals may become heroes under different conditions of life. The method of dividing mankind in angels and devils is too primitive to satisfy us. Perhaps some German-American readers will remember Spielhagen's "Hammer and Amboss." In this beautiful, although now a little antiquated novel, the author relates with striking pathos how prisoners at the occasion of a breach in a dam work tried to restore it at the danger of their lives, and after their heroic performance quietly return to the prison because the director of the jail had appealed to their honor. What is most remarkable about this story is that Spielhagen did not invent it. It happened in Germany in the middle of the last century.

Lombroso collected interesting facts to show that a fate inherent in their individuality dominates and molds the existence of criminals. On the arm of the murderer, Philippe, one read many years before his execution the ominous words: "Né sous mauvaise étoile" (born under an unlucky star). Three criminals showed the tattooed words: "The past cheats me, the present torments me, the future scares me." Another one had on his arm the inscription: "Maledetto il giorno che mia madre mi diede alla luce!" (Cursed be the day when my mother gave me to the light!) But all these inscriptions prove not much more than that these men suffered. In Russian the word for "criminal" means "unhappy," too.

* *

CAPITAL punishment offends Christian and human feeling, because it annihilates the process of the soul which we call repentance. This process may come or it may not, but it is not our right to destroy the possibility of such an evolution. In doing this, we commit a crime. There is nothing on earth which is as valuable as the human soul. If we depart from this principle for a moment only, we sink back into darkness and barbarism. The execution would be a moral act if the criminal felt that he could not live after his crime, and wanted to pay for it. As it is, it is only a police act, a matter of expediency. Society wants to get rid of a dangerous member.

Great men, Bismarck and Goethe, for instance, have taken another point of view, and Joseuph de Maistre, the brilliant Catholic author, has glorified the executor in a famous page. But, as Goethe himself has said, there is "a right which is born with us." Torture was considered perfectly legitimate in medieval times, but it has been abolished, the pillory is abolished, bodily chastisement is limited to exceptional cases or abolished in all civilized countries.

We have not the faith in mechanical remedies which our forefathers had. We become more and more sensitive in every generation. Justice has developed from vengeance. As its origin was the lex talionis: it demanded eye for eye, tooth for tooth. If we stick to these precepts and proclaim that blood demands blood, we follow atavistic impulses. This way of retaliating is too summary, the individuality of the case decides. And we know by now that the "case" is not everything, not even the most important, the most important is the man behind the case. Look at him. For even if you get all the facts marshaled up correctly, they may not show you the man.

* *

OF course, we may proclaim that the sovereignty of the nation which takes the life of the soldier can certainly take the life of the criminal. The difference is that the soldier is supposed to fight voluntarily: his will is identical with that of the state, while on the other hand, we have before us the disgusting act of killing a defenseless human being, an act which remains hideous even if it is disguised and legitimatized by the ceremonial of the law. The mother of a man who was executed and afterwards proved innocent, may say to the defenders of capital punishment: "A society which believes in its own ethics can tolerate a situation which makes legal murder possible only if it would annihilate itself by changing it." Who cancontradict it? And nobody will dare to say that capital punishment is indispensable and that the building of our civilization would crumble down if it was abolished.

French Fields of Calm and Quiet

[From the London Times.]

There are many wide acres in France where men and women are living lives of quiet industry in most beautiful and peaceful surroundings. A chance visitor would see no signs of war in such places, but he might think the world strangely unpeopled. The far-stretching fields waving with fast ripening corn, the meadow with the hay waiting to be carried, the villages extraordinarily silent and peaceful, and nowhere any young men, unless in soldier's uniform.

Women in blue aprons and wide brimmed straw hats may be seen working in the fields with old men and sometimes children. The sheep have their shepherd, but he is single handed, where once he had two or three men working under him. The cows are brought home every evening, with their attendant goats and tinkling bells, by the women and children, and the milking is done by elderly men and women. Everything on the farm is being done "more or less," for want of men. Nothing yields full increase for the same reason.

But there is no distress and the weather in harvest time is almost as much of a grievance as the war. It is, moreover, the length of the war rather than its cruelties which calls for complaint. "We are tired," they say; "our women are overworked, our children miss their schooling, and, although every one does something extra, we do not get it all done." It is quite true that every one does something extra. M. le Curé tucks up his soutane and uses the scythe, M. le Marquis turns the hay rows and rallies his little army of haymakers with stories of cheerful farmers near the front, who, after plowing a field, will have it torn up by shells and thus be forced to begin their work all over again.

No sound of cannon has ever caused the people who live in these peaceful areas to stop in their work and look with unquiet eyes toward the direction from which the sound comes. No personal experience of atrocities has been theirs, no appalling sights of wounded men have shocked their senses. No refugees have troubled the calm of their homes.

And yet the war is beginning to tell on them all. Some have lost their sons, their husbands, their fathers; all have lost a man temporarily, and generally he is the breadwinner.

They are always "under" their work, instead of "on the top of it," and these things discourage the quiet living people after a time.

They are overworked, and not excited by the war, and that is depressing.

Yet France owes much to these quiet living people; whether in château or cottage, they are "keeping things going."

MARKET BROAD AND ACTIVE.

New York, July 22.—For a midsummer week end session today's market was unusually active, broad, and strong. Special stocks again afforded the basis of a large proportion of the total overturn, being in further demand by the bears or short interest, that faction suffering additional impairment of "paper profits."

Motor issues were particularly prominent, with gains of two to three points in Willys-Overland and Maxwell and ten for General Motors. Munitions and allied shares were substantially better, together with Tobaccos, American Hide and Leather preferred, American Beet Sugar, and the Zinc issues.

United States Steel was the real leader, trading in that stock representing about 20 per cent of the whole, at an extreme advance of 1⅛, most of which was retained.

Better Tone in Steels.

There was a better tone to shares of the independent steel companies, notably Lackawanna and Republic, together with Colorado Fuel and American Car.

Rails were again relegated to a place of minor importance, even the investment issues moving sluggishly. Reading closed with a fractional gain, but Wisconsin Central forfeited four points of its recent advance. Shipping shares were backward, with no material price changes.

Weekly reports of the mercantile agencies were of a confident tenor, the only discouraging note coming from that portion of the south which recently experienced severe storms.

Bonds were steady today on nominal trading. International issues were firmer. United States bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

Mercantile paper, 4¼ per cent. Sterling—Sixty day bills, 471¾; demand, 475⅝; cables, 476⅜. Francs—Demand, 590⅝; cables, 590. Marks—Demand, 72 9-16; cables, 72⅝. Kronen—Demand, 1255; cables, 1265. Guilders—Demand, 41⅝; cables, 41⅝. Lires—Demand, 642; cables, 641½. Rubles—Demand, 3045; cables, 3050. Bar silver, 63⅝c. Mexican dollars, 48⅝c. Government bonds steady. Railroad bonds steady.

Farm Loan Bank Debentures.

The rural credits bill has become a law and there is every prospect that United States farm loan banks soon will be a reality. If the various practical difficulties of getting the system in operation do not kill it in infancy, it will produce one of the most conservative and desirable investments possible.

The bill provides in effect that the banks shall make mortgage loans to groups of ten or more farmers who must, to a certain extent, be jointly and severally responsible for the payment of interest and principal of all the mortgages. Then each bank may issue debentures against its mortgages. Not only the mortgages but the capital and undivided profits of the banks will be back of the debentures.

If the law is carefully administered the debentures will become a more conservative investment than the average high grade farm mortgage, and, further, they will enjoy the unique advantage of being tax exempt. This last point should be enough to assure the ultimate success of the system, although there are many difficulties to be overcome.

Probably the greatest difficulty at the start will be the lack of demand on the part of farmers who can give mortgages measuring up to the high standard that should be, and probably will be, required. Plenty of successful farmers are no doubt in a position to use long time loans to great advantage, but most of them will be reluctant at first to give a limited guarantee to the loans of nine or more other men even if they can by so doing get a lower rate of interest. However, if the system is carefully administered experience will show that these mutual guarantees entail few losses and the lower rate of interest finally will win.

The banks are to be permitted to charge the farmers 1 per cent more than the rate which they pay on the debentures. This 1 per cent will be insufficient to cover expenses until the land banks get a fair amount of business. If the time comes when it yields a profit, part of the surplus will go back to the farmers whose mortgages the banks hold.

Naturally investors will take the debentures sparingly at first. When the system has proved itself completely successful the debentures, if still tax exempt, ought to sell not far from a 4 per cent basis, which would give the farmer 5 per cent loans.

Towar Cotton Mills.

H. L. S., Elgin, Ill.: The Towar Cotton Mills company of Niles, Mich., has been formed to manufacture heavy cotton duck suitable for tires and belts. The backers of it are owners of the Acme Belting company of Niles, which says it cannot keep up with its orders because of inability to get duck in sufficient quantities. The new company has an authorized capitalization of $300,000 common and $200,000 preferred stock. Half of the preferred is being sold with a bonus of common. A purchase of shares would be a participation in a business venture.

Corn Products.

H. M.—Corn Products common is purely speculative. The company is overcapitalized and there are 19 per cent of unpaid preferred dividends accrued. Recently the United States Circuit court in New York ordered the company dissolved as a combination in restraint of trade. The case will be appealed. A plan has been on foot for a long time to reduce the amount of stock outstanding. With so many uncertainties there is little basis for any opinion of the value of the stock.

Hog receipts of 10,000 head sold 5@10c lower than Friday's average, with tops at $10.05 and the bulk at $9.25@9.75. Only a few loads of prime butchers sold higher than $9.90. Trade was sluggish and about 3,000 hogs were left unsold at the finish, although prices accepted were lowest made since early in June. Pigs met with an indifferent demand at weak prices, with the bulk selling at $8.50@9.25.

Final prices made good hogs steady to 10c lower than a week ago, while mixed packing grades and inferior lots were 30@80c lower. Pigs showed a loss of 25c for the week. The average price of all hogs here this week was $9.65, or the lowest made since the week ending Jun 10, and compared with an average of $9.90 last week.

CATTLE.

Lowest prices in many weeks were made in the cattle trade at Chicago this week and final quotations on steers, cows, and heifers made the bulk 75c lower than a week ago. Few steers offered late in the week were good enough to sell higher than $10.00, and some cleared at $9.00 that would have brought better than $10.00 little more than a week ago. The outlet was congested, with receipts unseasonaby liberal, while consumption was curtailed by hot weather. Early in the week prime beeves reached $10.90. Calves suffered a loss of 25c for the week, being less severely affected by the hot weather than the heavier cattle. The close found packers' coolers well lined with beef and advices to the country warned against heavy marketings the coming week.

Cattle at seven western markets for the week, 148,600, against 153,700 the preceding week, 125,300 a year ago, and 126,500 two years ago. Total for 1916 to date, 4,036,000, against 3,592,000 the same period in 1915.

SHEEP.

Fat lambs finished the week at a decline of 50c for the bulk, while yearlings were off 15@25c and matured sheep of light weight were unchanged to a shade higher than a year ago. Receipts for the week showed a good decrease and consisted chiefly of lambs. Shipping demand for thin lambs to go to feed lots was of good character and desirable offerings sold at an advance of 15@25c. There was little outside demand for fat lambs for immediate slaughter. The market closed in a healthy condition, with pens well cleared and the trade inclined to look for better values under reasonable receipts. Top lambs this week made $10.60 and sheep sold up to $8.25.

$100 Grows to $16,500

Had you invested $100 in the original shares of the Hupp Motor Car Company you would have received in cash dividends in seven years $4,816. In addition, you would have received stock dividends of $4,000, which, on a book value of approximately $15 per share of $10 par value, were worth $6,000.

In other words, $100 worth of Hupp Motor Car Company stock returned to the original investor from 1908 to 1915 $10,816. Since that date the capital of the Company has again increased to $6,500,000, and it is now stated that an original investment of $100 has now grown to $16,500.

This is not an isolated instance by any means. Investments of $100 in such Companies as Chandler, Reo, Chalmers, Paige Detroit, Federal Motor Truck and Kelly-Springfield Motor Truck are said to have returned to the original investors comfortable fortunes.

The margin of profit in the manufacture of motor trucks is very much larger than the profit in passenger cars. Where the manufacturers of passenger cars figure the profit on each car at $100 or a few hundred dollars per car, the production of the White Motor Co. in 1915 shows an actual profit of $1,070.

I believe that the motor truck business today is where the passenger car business was five years ago. The increase in the volume of business should give to the motor truck industry the same immense profits that the passenger automobile companies have made during the past few years. One of the leading motor truck producers in the United States is the White Motor Co. This Company earned 54.3% on its capital in 1915, or over $8,640,000. Profits for this year are now estimated in excess of $10,000,000.

The Federal Motor Truck Co. pays dividends to its shareholders at the rate of 40%. Gramm-Bernstein Co., a comparatively small motor truck company, earned over 50% on its total capital in the last six months of 1915, or equal to 100% for the year. It is reported that Kelly-Springfield Motor Truck Co. has earned 12% a month, or equal to 144% per year.

The Packard Automobile Co., manufacturers of the well known Packard motor truck, recently declared a dividend of 50% upon the capital stock. The White Motor Co. will earn this year over 60% upon the capital stock. A few months ago you could have bought Paige Detroit, and today you would have doubled your money.

What Hupp, Ford and others have done for the popular priced passenger car industry I believe W. C. Mack will do for the popular priced motor truck industry. Large volume and popular prices have made millions for the shareholders in the passenger automobile industry. I believe that a large output and popular prices will do the same for the shareholders in the motor truck industry.

I deal exclusively in automobile securities. I do not handle any other stocks or bonds. My entire attention is focused on the motor security market. I believe that I am in a better position to give you facts and information regarding automobile securities than any other broker or banker in the United States.

I advised my clients to buy Willys-Overland a few months ago. Since that time the stock has advanced over $100 per share. Reo has advanced $30 per share since I advised my clients to buy that stock. General Motors advanced 67 points in one week.

Regardless of the merits of other automobile securities, I advise the purchase of Metropolitan today. I urge all clients and readers to act immediately, as the price is on the eve of advance.

W. C. MACK

Founder of Mack Motor Trucks

has joined a few substantial business and financial men in the organization of a new Motor Truck Company to manufacture Popular Priced Motor Delivery Trucks that will sell at a price within the reach of the hundreds of thousands of small merchants that are now waiting for such a motor to replace their present horse-drawn equipment.

Big Profits in Motor Trucks

Metropolitan Motors

Operating Company

Popular Price Motor Truck

Motor profits are so numerous—the cash and stock dividends paid to stockholders so big—large fortunes from small investments so common that investors now demand Motor Stocks in preference to any other class of investment. Never before has the public been given an opportunity to share in immense manufacturing profits on such a fair basis and with such assurance of unusual possibilities for big, quick profits.

W. C. MACK'S new Company is Metropolitan Motors. It is incorporated in Delaware with a capital of One Million Dollars, the shares are all common shares, par value $10 each. The Stock is fully paid and non-assessable, there is no preferred stock and no bonded indebtedness. All shares have equal voting rights and share equally in all profits.

Metropolitan Motors has taken over the established business of the White Star Motor and Engineering Company, including the patterns, drawings, trade name, good will, &c., and will enlarge the facilities for manufacturing the well known White Star line of 2, 3 and 5 ton Motor Trucks. In addition, it is proposed to design and manufacture a popular priced Motor Delivery Wagon.

W. C. MACK is among the first to recognize the immense Marketing Possibilities of the popular price Motor Truck. With his brothers, he was a Pioneer in America of the Motor Truck Industry. Starting with only $2,000, in 1892, the Mack Brothers developed a three million dollar Motor Truck Company in 19 years. Every one has heard of the well known Mack Motor Truck.

If you haven't, ask your nearest friend about it or talk to any Motor Truck owner. What Mack did for the Mack Brothers' Motor Car Company, I believe he can do for Metropolitan Motors. Success breeds success. The men handling Metropolitan Motors are successful men. This is your opportunity to join hands with success.

BUY YOUR SHARES TODAY

? ? ? Are you one of those fortunate ones who bought motor stocks in the big companies of today when they first organized?

If you did you are now enjoying the fruits of your foresight and courage to ACT. If you did not you are now aware of what "might have been." I say fortunate because most people think that the investing of $100 in the Original Hupp Motor Company and watching it grow to $16,500 was just good fortune. They are wrong; such an investment is the result of good, hard-headed business sense, coupled with foresight and courage.

R. C. Hupp, of the Hupp Company, first foresaw the marketing possibilities of the popular price passenger car, and the result was big profits for those who had the foresight to join him at the inception of the Company.

W. C. Mack first foresaw the possibilities of the Commercial Truck, with the result that $2,000 grew into millions in 19 years. He now foresees the immense marketing possibilities of the popular price Motor Delivery Wagon. Mr. Mack now offers you an opportunity such as the early investors in the big Motor Companies had a few years ago. The Motor Truck Industry is yet in its infancy; secure an interest in it now and let your investment grow with the development of the industry.

I offer for immediate sale, subject to withdrawal without notice and advance in price,

Metropolitan Motors Common Stock (Par Value $10) at

$3.50 PER SHARE

I can deliver only a limited block at this price, as this is the organization stock.

The rush to secure an interest with Mr. Mack in this new company of his has been so great wherever this announcement has been made that this first issue at $3.50 has almost gone, and this may be your last opportunity to Buy Metropolitan Common at $3.50. You can forward check or money order at the rate of $3.50 per share for the number of shares you want, or you can fill out the coupon and let me send you full descriptive circular, catalogue and full information regarding an investment in the company. INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITY

A large Chicago Engineering Company with a National reputation can use to good advantage some additional capital in the expansion of its business and in handling some large contracts now on hand. This company last year paid 14% dividends and indications are that it will earn more than that rate for 1916. $25,000 of stock is offered at $110 per share which will be ample for present requirements. This is a close corporation which, on account of existing conditions, offers an excellent opportunity for investors with $500 and upwards of securing an interest in a splendid paying business that will bring large returns. NEW YORK BANKS SHOW A GAIN IN EXCESS RESERVE

Surplus Increased $13,000,000 During Week—Further Shrinkage in Loans.

The New York bank statement showed further improvement in that the surplus reserve increased nearly $13,000,000. This brings the excess up to $108,085,360, and compares with a low of around $54,000,000 a few weeks ago.

Meanwhile the loan account recorded a further shrinkage. The figures as a whole were reassuring, and follow:

Forecasts War's Prolongation.

Munition manufacturers in discussing the outlook for future allied buying, point to the fact that while Great Britain and France up to a few months ago were asking for final deliveries on business offered by Oct. 31, recent inquiries have extended delivery dates until March 31, 1917, indicating the belief that the war will last beyond that time.

It was insistence on quick deliveries that prevented the successful closing of orders in the market last month. Some uncertainty exists regarding the exact amount of war business now pending, and the opinion prevails that it is considerably higher than reports have indicated. Several concerns have been asked to bid on contracts running all the way from $15,000,000 to $30,000,000, and it is not believed this bidding is competitive, but that each concern offering satisfactory prices and shipments and able to make good on its bid will get an order.

Curb Active and Higher.

The local unlisted securities market continues quite active, with the average of prices on a little higher level. American Chicle common advanced from 40 to sales as high as 56, closing 55 bid, offered at 57. American Fork and Hoe common is unchanged, being 102 bid, with small lots offered at 105. Utility Stocks Irregular.

Public utility securities were more or less irregular, the feature of the trading taking place in Ohio Cities Gas common, which advanced from sales at 63½ to sales as high as 68¾—reacting slightly at the close to 67½ bid, 68¼ asked. The rise in the stock was due to a rumor of an extra cash dividend and 5 per cent in stock at the next quarterly dividend payment.

Cities Service common stock continues to fluctuate between 295 and 315, the market closing 300 bid, 305 asked. The preferred was a trifle lower with sales at [illegible]. The remainder of the public utility stocks were in fair demand at unchanged prices.

Bank Share Quotations.

The bank stock market has been dull and little actual trading has taken place. Continental and Commercial National changed hands at 261½. Bank shares are so closely held for investment that there is usually little trading in them during the summer months, but as the local money market has shown distinct signs of improvement, it is reasonable to expect that they will soon become more active. Sales were reported as follows:

Continental and Commercial National bank, 261½@262; First National bank, 468½; Central Trust company, 192@193.

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

One of the largest copper selling agencies has lowered the price of electrolytic copper to 25c a pound for late delivery. It seems probable that this reduction will bring about a 4c decline in open market quotations. The large producers have held up the nominal price for weeks, while awaiting a buying movement from abroad. The domestic demand has not been sufficiently insistent or of large enough volume to warrant the prices that obtained when Europe was in the market for copper by the hundreds of millions of pounds.

The market was helped by announcements from Washington of assurances that both railroads and their employés will eventually accept mediation to prevent the threatened big strike. The information came from the United States board of mediation and conciliation.

Spelter interests are much encouraged by the buying which has developed from domestic users. This has advanced the price ¼c to 10¼c in New York and 10c St. Louis.

Wall street is turning to the belief that at the meeting of the directors of the United States Steel corporation next Tuesday there will be no increase in the regular dividend rate.

It is announced that more than 70 per cent of the stockholders of the Muskogee Refining company have assented to the plan of merger with the Oklahoma Producing and Refining company.

Between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 profit is expected to be realized from the American Car and Foundries company's war orders.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

LONDON, July 22.—Money and discount rates were steady. Trading on the stock exchange was generally quiet with a firm undertone. Indian and other colonial stocks and the war loan were in good demand, with investors doing the leading business. Russian securities and shipping and oil shares were steadily supported, but Americans were idle and closed a fraction below yesterday. Bar silver, 30 3-16d per ounce. Money, 4¾ per cent. Discount rates, short bills, 5⅝@5¾ per cent; three months, 5⅝@5¾ per cent.

News from the northwest was again of a sensational character yesterday, and prices scored a big advance. Offerings were unexpectedly light at the opening, and on the other hand there was general buying by nearly all the leading commission houses. Prices for the day were 3⅝c to 3¾@3⅞c higher. All months were strong and there was no pressure to sell except from longs taking profits, and selling against the offers.

Outside buying was in evidence and the general character of the buying here and at other markets suggested the greater interest being taken by the general public. Buying was continuous and the free offerings by profit takers were easily absorbed with last prices at about the best level of the day.

Northwest Situation Worse.

Some reports from the northwest indicate the situation is now worse than in 1904 and the reports from experts now in the fields indicated conditions rapidly growing worse, while other advices indicate the spread of rust into Canada, with North Dakota complaints coming from the extreme northern portion of the state. Canadian conditions are still favorable, but black rust was reported at Morris, Manitoba, and from this it would indicate that damage is still possible, as it will be a month before the Canadian wheat will be out of danger.

With the situation in the northwest becoming more serious, conditions in the cash trade are attracting more attention. So far there is little country selling of wheat, and the winter wheat movement, in spite of the fine weather conditions, is comparatively small.

Cables Are Unchanged.

The cables were unchanged, with a good demand for spot wheat reported abroad. Foreign crop conditions indicate the need of heavy purchases from this country and Canada the coming week. Statisticians estimate that the soft wheat states this year have raised much less than their own requirements. Moreover the southwest farmers are demanding higher prices for their wheat, while the demand from mills is indicated by the prices paid for new red wheat, No. 2 red at St. Louis being quoted yesterday at $1.31. Local sales were 10,000 bu. Receipts were 115 cars, with primary receipts 1,433,000, against 979,000 bu a year ago, and northwest receipts were 432 cars, against 115 cars a year ago. Winnipeg had 612 cars, against 89 cars a year ago. Clearances for the day were 1,436,000 bu.

Old Crop Corn Futures Up.

July corn shorts were anxious yesterday and bid prices up sharply. The September also was strong, while there was some selling pressure on the December. Prices finished 1@1⅛c to 2⅛c higher. There was some profit taking on the advance. Cash sales were 65,000 and while country offerings were reported larger, the cash prices advanced 2½@3c, which did not suggest any material weakness. Kansas sent in a good many bad crop reports on hot weather.

Cables were unchanged. Receipts in the west were 5,114,000 bu, for the week, against 2,968,000 bu a year ago. Receipts here were 424 cars. The forecast was for fair and continued warm weather. Clearances for the day were 404,000 bu.

Oats Show Strong Tone.

Oats were strong, sympathizing with the advance in wheat. Advances for the day were 1@1¼c. Cash prices were ½@1c higher, with sales of 75,000 bu and the buying of futures was supposed to have been against export business. The foreign inquiry was reported fair at the seaboard. Receipts were 184 cars and primary receipts for the week were 4,423,000 bu, compared to 3,171,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were small at 9,000 bu. Weather conditions were unfavorable in some sections northwest, and damage claims from that section are increasing.

Hog Products Are Firm.

Provisions were firmer, with a fair demand from commission houses. Offerings were moderate and the strength in the grain list helped lift prices. Receipts were 11,000 at the yards, with 35,000 for Monday and 125,000 for the coming week. Prices at the yards were 5@10c lower. Cash trade conditions generally are reported healthy. Receipts in the west for the week were 423,200, compared to 400,000 a year ago. Liverpool prices were strong, Cumberlands backs and hams all being 1s up.

Rye Scarce and Dull.

Rye was quiet, with old No. 2 quoted 95@96c nominal. Receipts, none.

Barley ruled quiet and steady. Malting was quoted 70@76c, with sales at 71@72c; feed was quotable 64@71c and sold 70c; screenings were quoted 40@58c and sold at 58c. Receipts were 63 cars.

Timothy seed was easy with September $6.00 bid. Cash lots were quoted $4.50@7.50. Clover seed was steady. Cash lots quoted 7.00@14.00.

Duluth flax closed 1@3⅛c higher. Cash on track, $1.98½; July, $1.96½; September, $1.98½, and November, $1.98. Receipts, 14 cars. Minneapolis was 2c higher, with cash on track $1.95½@1.98½. Receipts were 15 cars. Winnipeg closed ⅝@1½c higher. July, $1.74; October, $1.77, and November, $1.76. Receipts, 29 cars.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

Cash prices were firm in all directions and mills continue to pay high premiums for new wheat without causing any increase materially in the country offerings. Receivers are disappointed in the movement from the country, and dealers yesterday said that farmers were selling but little wheat. St. Louis No. 2 red was $1.31. This was regarded as especially significant, showing the indifference of farmers to the strong bids, and indicating the need of mills for wheat. The fine quality of the new wheat is increasing the demand through the winter wheat territory, especially as reports now indicate the spring wheat quality will be much poorer than a year ago. Local sales were 10,000 bu. There was a fair inquiry at the seaboard, but the advance in prices and in freight rates has made it difficult for futures to buy much wheat.

Black rust was reported from Morris, Manitoba, the report coming from Minneapolis. There were also reports of rust from the northern counties of North Dakota, indicating the steady spread of the rust. Many well posted traders are of the opinion more damage is being caused northwest by blight than by rust, but there were reports received yesterday saying that conditions were becoming decidedly serious in the three northwest states, and that prospects were for worse developments before the crop was harvested. The crop experts continue to report serious conditions in the South Dakota wheat sections, and serious damage either from rust or blight is being reported. High temperatures were again reported yesterday throughout the greater part of the spring wheat belt.

Free buying of oats by commission houses usually acting for exporters was supposed to reflect a better call for oats for shipment. Foreign needs this year are expected to be larger than last year while this country is expected to have less competition unless peace opens up the Russian markets. Canada is not expected to have oats that were raised last year, while Argentine shipments will be affected by the scarcity of tonnage.

Offerings of corn from the country were reported a little larger yesterday, the recent advance in July and September as well as in cash corn causing increased selling, while the shipping demand from the east was reported light. The cash market, however, was 2½@3c higher, which did not indicate any materially weaker situation. Cash oats were ½@1c up. Sales were 65,000 bu corn and 75,000 bu oats.

Kalb wired A. O. Slaughter & Co. from New Rockford, N. D.: "From Hannaford here along the Great Northern, wheat bottom land lots drowned out, thin, weedy. Drove all afternoon round here, found every field black rusted, but not so bad yet as further east, still its there and has almost month more to develop. Weather not unfavorable today."

Le Count wired Finley Barrell & Co. from Bristol, S. D.: "All wheat seen today is badly rusted. Many fields with straw and stand for 20 bu will only make about 10 bu of low grade wheat. Cooler today, but rust is not being checked. All fields have a slaty gray color, which shows the rust has eaten into the plant and shut off the nourishment from the soil and conditions will show no improvement from now on."

Ware-Leland had the following from Mitchell, S. D.: "I made a trip to Spencer, twenty-five miles east of here, and examined at least twenty-five fields, found black rust in all of them. The velvet chaff will make fair wheat, but the blue stem will make from nothing to a third of a crop. The marquis wheat is fairly good. I was much surprised to find the wheat in this condition, as weather has been dry and wind blowing every day."

Charles Sincere & Co.'s advices from Decatur said: "For the past three weeks the car shortage has bound the local division of the Wabash railroad into a knot. Elevators full and 2,000 cars are needed in next ten days to relieve the congestion, and it is thought that this will be accomplished."

Bids for wheat sent out Friday night through Illinois, Iowa, and Nebraska by two firms did not bring a single acceptance. This indicates a decidedly bullish attitude on the part of the grower. South west offerings were reported extremely light also.

John Inglish wired Logan-Bryan from Grand Forks, N. D.: "West of here wheat not sufficiently advanced to show rust. Fields in milk show rust increasing; also blight. Crop materially hurt now and fear worse is coming."

Country houses were credited with buying December corn. With clear and generally hot weather over the belt the tendency was stronger in the December corn, while the cash trade conditions were responsible for advances in the old crop months.

The Red Book annex for July was issued by Howard, Bartels & Co. yesterday. It contains the usual statistics and information concerning the grain trade up to July 1.

Nebraska reported buying corn on account of the dry weather conditions, rains having covered only a small part of the belt.

There were several reports of corn damage in Kansas as the result of the dry and hot weather.

Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 90,000 bu for one day.

Sales of wheat to to store were 150,000 bu.

WINNER OF AMERICAN DERBY BEATEN AT HAWTHORNE

DODGE THIRD AS SIR EDGAR COPS FEATURE

CROWD OF 7,000 OUT.

BY E. S. MERRILL.

Dodge, the latest American Derby winner, didn't "come back" yesterday. On the occasion of his first Hawthorne appearance since the Derby, and before the second Saturday crowd of the meeting, he finished a rather indifferent third in the Chicago Merchants handicap, the feature race of the day.

But his defeat was a mild surprise compared with the sensation that was narrowly averted when the good son of Jim Gaffney stumbled at the barrier and almost fell. Murphy kept his valuable mount on his feet, but the accident put Dodge lengths behind his field, and as the race was only six furlongs he never was able to make up the full loss.

Faux Col Not in Money.

The race was won by H. G. Bedwell's 4 year old gelding, Sir Edgar, after the latter had waited on his stable companion, Pesky, trained but not owned by Mr. Bedwell, to the stretch. He finished first by a length, with Pesky a length and a half ahead of Dodge. Faux Col, the second horse in the Derby and a well played third choice yesterday, was a disappointment, finishing four lengths back of Dodge.

For the first time during the meeting the judicial ax fell upon a jockey for a bad looking ride on a favorite. The victim was Schermerhorn, rider of Skiles Knob in the second race, after having ridden the winner of the first race. Skiles Knob, announced as a starter also in the Merchants handicap, had been scratched from the latter race and was a pronounced favorite for the second, but never got out of the ruck, and after the race the stewards promptly set Schermerhorn down indefinitely, not even permitting him to finish his engagements for the day.

Card Draws 7,000 Patrons.

Seven thousand persons came out to see the sport, the boxes being fairly well filled for the first time since the opening day, and the rest of the grandstand well occupied. It was again sizzling hot. Deputy sheriffs and Pinkertons seemed to be having a fairly busy day, judging by the number of reported arrests—so many of them that it was announced the trials of part of those arrested for open betting would be put over from Monday to Tuesday.

The sport was only fair from the standpoint of keen competition in the final strides, neither of the headliner attractions producing a tight finish, although one of the selling events saw half a dozen horses in a close group at the wire.

Dodge Favorite at 9 to 10.

With Leo Skolny and Skiles Knob out, the Merchants handicap had a field of six, Dodge being the 9 to 10 favorite, with the Bedwell & O'Meara pair and Faux Col almost equal second choices.

Following the mishap to Dodge at the barrier, Pesky rushed into the lead. There was a fairly compact quartet back of her as they ran up the back stretch, with Dodge four lengths back of all the others and Murphy whipping him vigorously.

Going around the turn Pesky led by two lengths, but Sir Edgar, her stable mate, moved up to even terms by the time they were straightened out for home. Dodge in the meanwhile was laboring to get to the front. He appeared to be cut off on the turn into the stretch, then came on the outside, but never had a chance to get to the leaders, although under the whip all the way home. Pesky tired at the finish and Sir Edgar won by a length from her, with Dodge a length away.

Neither Dodge nor Faux Col can be said to have run so good a race as they had in the Derby, a comparison of the time in the two races helping to confirm this impression.

Franklin Takes Cup Race.

Only four were carded to start for the President's cup handicap at a mile, third on the card. For this event President Friebling of the Illinois Jockey club offered a cup in addition to the purse.

Franklin, stable mate of Dodge, was at all times the betting favorite, with the sturdy Wilhite second choice over Huffaker and Kinney, the outsider. Franklin was giving Wilhite, an aged horse, twenty pounds by the scale.

Franklin proved an easy winner of the handicap. He lay in third place for the first half mile while the lightweighted Kinney was setting the pace, attended by Huffaker. On the far turn Franklin moved up fast and turning into the home stretch had gained the lead. He never was bothered and won by a half dozen lengths, but Huffaker barely saved second money from Wilhite, which finished fast.

Long Shot Shows Speed.

Jerry, a long shot, ran a remarkable race in the fifth, a selling affair at six furlongs. He trailed the big field into the stretch and then came on the outside of the bunch, made up a vast amount of ground, and was just beaten by Rio Branco. He was ridden by Murphy, for whom it seemed to be a day of sensa-

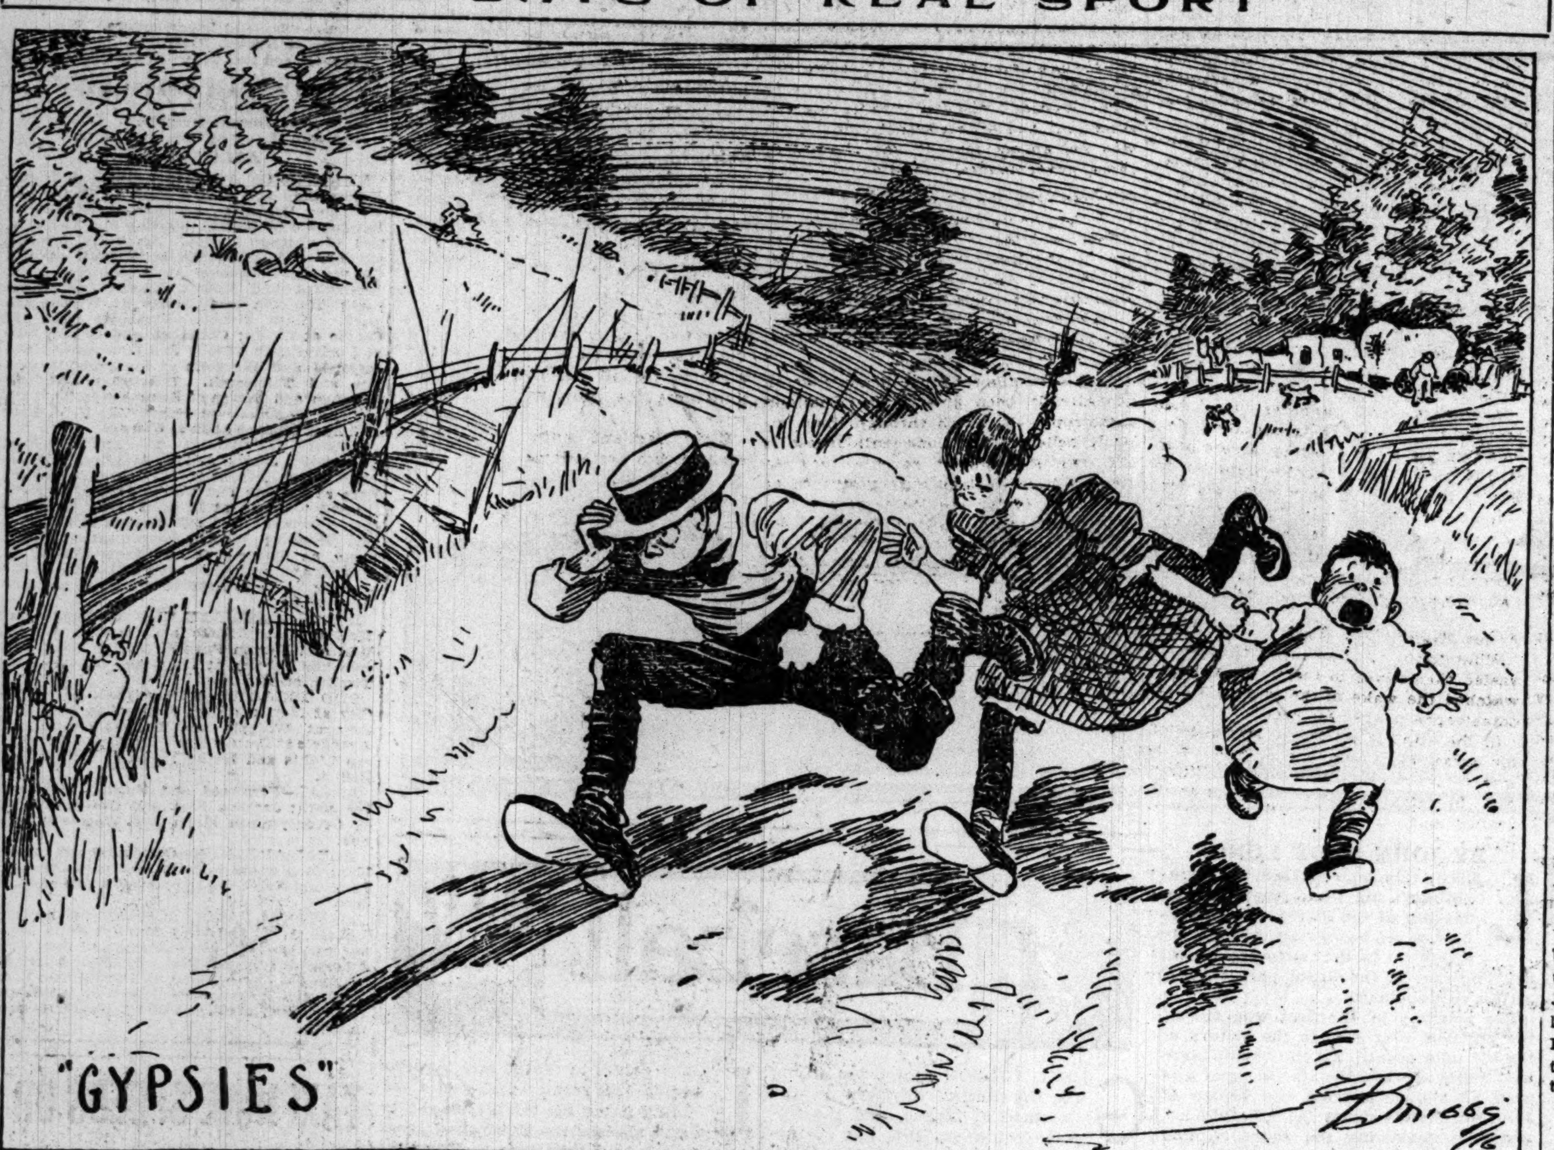
THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT



Hawthorne Notes

Balfron was caught in a jam at the first turn in the last race and pulled up lame.

Most of the big crowd remained in the stand between races.

One of the judges of the Municipal court was a spectator, but he was not seen to "nod."

Yesterday's crowd leaves no doubt of the meeting coming up to the expectations of the promoters in the way of attendance.

There was not a 2 year old one the card, and not many of the debutants are at the track, for that matter.

There being many real southerners in attendance at the present meeting, there was no applause when the band played "Dixie."

The value of the Chicago Merchants handicap to the winner was $1,225.

The fields were the largest of the meeting.

As the result of his victory yesterday, Sir Edgar will have to pick up a five pound penalty over his assigned weight of 113 in the Harlem handicap tomorrow.

Jockey Claver, a recent arrival from the Canadian tracks, was aboard the winner of the main event. Jockey R. Goose, the "New Orleans champion," is said to have arrived at Hawthorne.

CHARLEY WHITE BALKS ON TERMS FOR WELSH BOUT

BY RAY C. PEARSON

Although it had been announced that the meeting between the managers of Lightweight Champion Freddie Welsh and Charley White and the matchmaker of the Colorado Springs club which plans to stage a twenty round scrap between this pair of ring men on Labor day would result in the signing of articles yesterday at the Hotel Sherman, nothing of the sort happened. Harry Pollok and Nate Lewis, the two managers, and both fighters were present, as were also the president of the Colorado Springs club, Mr. Fertig, and Matchmaker Eddie Pitts.

There was no trouble in getting Welsh in line, for some time ago he accepted the terms offered—$17,500—but the confab had hardly started before Lewis stopped the machinery by declaring that the club would have to make it worth while for White to fight.

White Demands $4,000.

Pitts offered White $2,500, but this Lewis wouldn't accept. He demanded this amount, with a privilege of 20 per cent of the gate, or a flat guarantee of $4,000 without any privileges.

The argument lasted several hours and at the end the club representatives and the Lewis party were far from a match. Fertig wired his club, asking if they thought it advisable to meet Lewis' terms. At a late hour last night no reply had been received. White's managers, however, seemed to take an optimistic view of the situation last night.

Another Confab Today.

"The club wants a Welsh-White bout and nothing else, and I believe my terms will be met," said Lewis. "We are going to hold another meeting today at 1 o'clock and by that time I believe the club representatives will have reached the opinion that I am asking only what is fair. Johnny Dundee has offered to fight Welsh for nothing, but if he wants to do that it is his business. I don't see why White should not receive the amount we demand."

Pollok is remaining in town for the meeting today, but Welsh hopped on the rattler at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon for New York. He has a ten round engagement with Benny Leonard.

GOTCH THROUGH WITH MAT GAME AS WIFE SMILES

Kenosha, Wis., July 22.—[Special.]—Frank Gotch, the world's champion wrestler, is through with the mat game. He said so himself today at the Kenosha hospital where he is recovering from a broken leg which he sustained during an exhibition bout here last Tuesday afternoon.

"Going on again?" a reporter asked Gotch.

"No," emphatically responded the champion, and his wife who stood by his bed echoed the "no" even more emphatically. "I am done for good," continued Gotch. "Don't you think it is time for a man to quit when he is 40 and when he has everything that the game has to offer him?"

It's a Go, Says Wife.

Mrs. Gotch smiled a self-satisfied smile. "That's the first time that he has ever come out and said it and believe me that promise is one that is going to be kept."

"She's right," said Gotch. "I'm all done and I don't care a cent who is wrestling champion. I am not going on the vaudeville stage. The footlights have never appealed to me."

"But the money," his interviewer insisted.

Gotch Loves His Farm.

"O, well," the champion said, reluctantly, "money is not the only thing in life, and I hope to save enough out of what we have made to retire to the farm. If I have a weakness, and you have got to show me the man that has not, it's farm life and we've got some farm, believe me—horses, cattle, and all the rest, and you know we have a boy—some boy."

"I suppose he will be a wrestler some day," suggested the reporter.

"Not if his dad can help it. "He's going to be the best lawyer in Humboldt and some day the best and biggest in Iowa."

FOURTH ATTEMPT TO BURN AURORA DRIVING PARK.

Aurora, Ill., July 22.—[Special.]—A fourth attempt to burn the buildings at Aurora Driving park was made last night just after midnight. Oil was poured over the second floor of the grandstand and a pile of oil soaked paper lighted. The fire was discovered soon after it started by Patrolman August Bjorseth. Frank Clancy, 38 years old, and John Yost, 42 years old, both of Aurora, were arrested as they were leaving the park soon after the fire was discovered. They are being held as suspects.

Cleveland, O., July 22.—Matt Hinkel, local referee and fight promoter, today offered $15,000 for a fifteen or twenty round featherweight championship contest between Johnny Kilbane and George Chaney of Baltimore, the bout to be held Labor day at Cedar Point, O. The length of the bout is optional with the champion. The $15,000 purse offered by Hinkel is the largest ever hung up for a featherweight contest.

WELSH BARRED BY GOPHERS

Ninety-nine have been picked from 580 to appear, and from this number from twenty to twenty-five will be selected for the final contest next Sunday.

Four youngsters will be chosen for trips as members of White Sox and Cubs on their final eastern invasions. Two will go with Rowland's men and two with Tinker's team. A fifth youngster under 18 years old will be awarded the Ban Johnson prize of a trip to the world series as a guest of Mr. Johnson.

If you have been chosen for the semi-finals and fail to appear today you will forfeit your chances to enter the final contest. Friends of the players will be admitted free.

BASEBALL AVERAGES

CUBS BUY MOLLWITZ AND HURLER CARTER

Two more Cubs were added to the roster by President Weeghman yesterday in continuation of his crusade for a winning baseball team. They were Fritz Mollwitz, first baseman from Cincinnati, and Nick Carter, pitcher from Indianapolis. Mollwitz is expected to report today and Carter to join the team in the east.

The acquisition of Mollwitz does not necessarily mean the discarding of Vic Saier, as the former Red was obtained with the idea of using him to help break up the southpaw jinx under which the Tinx have been struggling most of the season. Mollwitz probably will be put on first against left handers and Saier against right handers.

The purchase of Carter gave Prexy Weeghman great pleasure as he has been angling for the association star for some time and against some bidding. Carter is a big right handed hurler, towering 6 feet 4 inches above the slab, and has enjoyed great success this year. The Hoosiers have won thirteen games and lost only three while Carter was performing up to date. It had not been decided yesterday just when the pitcher would be released to join Tinker's squad. The purchase price was not announced, as it seems some of the minor leaguers have believed the exorbitant figures advertised as paid for previous acquisitions and have tried to get that amount of real money for other players whom Weeghman wants.

Weeghman declared he had two or three more deals on the fire and that he would give the north side a winning team if coin could do it.

Infielder McCarthy left last night for Pittsburgh, which club claimed him by the waiver rule. Other players will have to be weeded out to make room under the league limit for the new men, but who is next under the ax would not be discussed by the Cub officials.

SHOOT AT SPEEDWAY PARK

The Gun club section of the Speedway Park association will hold its opening trap shooting tournament July 27 at the Maywood grounds. The shoot will begin at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Several trophies and prizes will be given to men and women contestants. A 100 target event will be shot in six strings.

DE PALMA TAKES MOTOR CONTEST; O'DONNELL HURT

Kansas City, Mo., July 22.—Taking the feature event of a day's program marred by one accident, Ralph de Palma, driving a Mercedes car, won the 100 mile motor race at the new one and one-eighth mile speedway in 1:42:54, an average speed of 58.68 miles an hour, almost eight miles below the world's record.

Eddie O'Donnell in a Hoskin special was second and George Buzane in a Duesenberg third. Art Klein finished fourth and Art Johnston fifth. Only five of the twelve starters finished. The purse was $5,000.

After leading for thirty-two laps, Eddie Rickenbacher was forced out of the race because of a broken water connection developed in his motor. O'Donnell then went into the lead with De Palma second. Charles Devlin went off the track on the eighth lap because of magneto trouble.

Eddie O'Donnell Hurt.

Eddie O'Donnell furnished the only accident when in the twenty-five mile speed trial following the main event his car broke a steering knuckle as he was making the turn on the back stretch and the car shot through the fence and down an embankment. O'Donnell was pinned under his wheel and received four fractures of his left arm, severe cuts on his face and body, and a possible fracture of the skull. Physicians tonight believed he would recover. Jimmy Murphy, his mechanician, was thrown clear of the machine and was uninjured. The race had been reduced from fifty miles because of the soft track.

O'Donnell had a comfortable lead at the time of the accident. There were only four other entries, the majority of the other drivers declining to risk their machines on the soft track. The crowd became unmanageable when O'Donnell's car crashed through the fence and swarmed on the track, necessitating the flagging down of the other two racers by Starter Fred Wagner for fear of injuring some one.

Up to A. A. A. Officials.

The status of the race was undecided, and will be determined by officials of the American Automobile association at New York.

The temperature was given as 107 degrees. Art Klein was overcome by it while making a tire change at the pits. His place was taken by Ora Halbe, but later Klein reëntered.

CUBS BEAT GIANTS ON HOMERS, 5-2; SOX LOSE TO SENATORS IN 12TH, 2-1

Single and Double Yield Final Run for Griffs in Long Battle.

JOHNSON CHECKS 'EM.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Washington, D. C., July 22.—[Special.]—In one of the hardest battles of their whole eastern trip the Chicago White Sox were nosed out today by Washington, 2 to 1. The end came in the twelfth inning, when Eddie Ainsmith lined a two bagger to dead left center that drove Gharrity home from first base with the winning run.

When the finish came Reb Russell was on the slab for the Sox, having been rushed there to rescue the eccentric Joe Benz in the ninth inning after Joe had set the Nationals down like a lot of schoolboys for eight innings. Before Russell could suppress the riot they had pushed over one run, which tied the count.

Johnson Checks White Sox.

After that it was only a question of whether Washington would make another run before the game would have to be called to let the Sox catch an early train for Detroit, because Walter Johnson was on the slab and pitching in such style that it didn't look as if the Sox could get a run off him before fall.

Walter hadn't started the game, but after the Sox had scored their lone tally off Bert Gallia in the sixth a pinch hitter appeared in his place in the next round and then the great Walter went to the slab.

For a time after Russell had quelled the ninth riot it seemed he was just as good as Walter, and that the game must end a tie, but in the twelfth inning, with one out, Gharrity lopped a measly little low fly over second base, just out of every one's reach. It went for a single, and Ainsmith followed with a regular hit and beauty liner to left center.

Relay Wide and Late.

Felsch made a depserate effort to knock it down and failed. Jackson succeeded in knocking it down in deep left center, and then instead of shooting it to Weaver, who was back to relay it to the plate, Gen. Joe tried to heave it all the way home himself. He was both late and wide. There was a chance for Weaver or Terry to relay the man out and save the game.

Joe Benz pitched as swell as any of them could for eight innings, allowing the Nationals only four blows and walking only one man. In the meantime the Sox had been presented with a run in the sixth. Murphy opened with a single and Weaver bunted in front of the plate. Henry heaved the ball high over first base, and Murphy scored while Weaver reached third. That was the only good opening the Sox had all afternoon, and yet they couldn't get even one more run out of it.

Benz Fields Ball Poorly.

Benz never wavered in his work until a couple of unexpected plays in the ninth upset the beans. Moeller, first up, dragged a bunt toward first base. Benz was taken off his guard and made a mess of his chance to field the ball. Then Foster, instead of bunting as the Sox expected, pulled a hot one down the third base line for a single.

Benz was yanked right there, Russell appearing. Milan bunted in front of the plate and Schalk, hurrying to make a force play at third, slipped and fell. With the bases filled Rice produced a sacrifice fly that tied the score and killed all chances for the Sox to win.

Rochester, N. Y., July 22.—Shocker of the Toronto International league team pitched an eleven inning, no hit, no run game against Rochester this afternoon. Up to the eleventh neither side scored. Toronto then got to Leverenz, for Rochester, and put over the run that clinched the victory. Leverenz allowed three hits.

Notes

New York once more today.

The Cub-Giant series now stands even, each team having won five games. They have twelve more to play, however.

Vaughn struck out the side in the third inning, whiffing Rariden, Perritt, and Burns in succession. As usual, when Vaughn does this sort of thing, he fell into bad luck in the next inning.

Manager McGraw of the Giants released Pitcher Schauer to the Louisville club yesterday. According to McGraw, Schauer has as much pitching talent as anybody—below the collar.

Doyle could have scored on Herzog's Texas leaguer in the fourth, as the ball got away from Flack in his eagerness to stop the run. But Doyle played it safe and was rewarded by a chance to go in on Robertson's long fly.

Kauff made a one handed pinch of a long fly which Fischer tried to drive over center field in the third inning. Ben had trouble picking it out of the sun, otherwise he could have captured it more easily.

J. T. Mahoney, alias Jack, former president of the Tampa Baseball association, was among the Cub rooters. He is a charter member of the organization which first tempted the Cubs to train in Tampa, and is on a business trip north.

Cubs and Giants close their long series this afternoon and both teams will leave for the east after the game. The Cubs go direct to Boston to open their second invasion, but the Giants will stop off to play an exhibition game in Cleveland tomorrow.

Notes

Washington, D. C., July 22.—[Special.]—The Sox left right after the game for Detroit, where they perform tomorrow and Monday.

Benz and McMullin were transported direct to Chicago.

Although it was a Saturday afternoon, with the home team playing good ball, only about 6,000 fans saw the final game.

Manager Rowland had hoped to save Russell for tomorrow's game against Detroit. Now Williams is the likely hurler.

The Sox have won nine and lost ten games against the eastern clubs on this trip and are just about as far from first place as when they began the invasion.

Dan Moeller would have had a three base hit in the sixth if Felsch hadn't spoiled it by a great running catch of a liner to right center.

Joe Benz really deserved a hit off Johnsons in the eighth. He smacked one on the nose by Walter's ankles, but Foster stabbed it with his bare hand and shot to first just in time.

NEW YORK FANS TO HONOR MATTY

New York, July 22.—Next Tuesday will be the biggest baseball day of the year in New York, unless the Yanks or Giants should cop the pennant and bring the world's series to the Polo grounds in October.

Christy Mathewson will appear here for the first time as the leader of an enemy team, with the Cincinnati Reds, on that day. At the same time, Buck Herzog, old Giant favorite, whom Matty succeeded, will be seen again with McGraw's infield. Between welcoming Herzog and showing "Big Six" just how much they think of him, New York fandom will simply outdo itself.

A local paper has started a popular subscription for the purchase of a testimonial to Mathewson. Anything from a nickel up will be accepted.

Flack with Four Hits and Fischer with Fence Drive Help Vaughn Win.

PERRITT DRIVEN OFF.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Compressing their attack into the middle innings of yesterday's game, the Cubs trounced the Giants, 5 to 2, in the fourth skirmish of their long campaign, much to the delight of a gathering which comfortably filled the north side plant.

Home run swats by Bill Fischer and Max Flack were potent factors in the victory, as they were delivered in the fifth inning, when the Tinx were trailing, and, besides putting the home team in the lead, these blows put a dent in Papa Perrit's pitching so serious that he was driven off the slab in the succeeding period.

One Bad Round for Vaughn.

Jim Vaughn was impasse except in the fourth inning and would have blanked his opponents all the way but for a wee bunt by Doyle, which eluded everybody and upset the well filled whitewash pail from which Hippo was ladling out a coat of white for the Giants. They made two more hits behind that lucky bunt and ran wild on Bill Fischer, scoring their two runs before the effects of the bunt could be eradicated. Before and thereafter Vaughn had McGraw's men at his mercy.

Those two Giant tallies stirred the Cubs to action, and they went after Perritt in their fourth hard enough to count once. Then came Fischer and Flack with their four baggers, both of which went over the new screen in right field. Flack's cleared the barrier, but Fischer's stuttered a little, for it lit on top of the screen and bounded over.

Flack Poles Four Hits.

Flack's home run was one of four hits that flashed off his bat, and all but one of them figured in the run making. Max started the fourth inning assault and finished the cinching rally in the sixth after whaling out what proved the winning tally in the fifth.

The fielding was brilliant on both sides at times. Zimmerman and Doyle, in particular, were stars defensively. Each of them made a one handed stab of what looked like a sure base hit. Zim perpetrated the only Cub error, but made it in an effort to convert Doyle's safe bunt into an out, and if he had been successful would have given Vaughn a shutout. Herzog's lone boot cost the Giants nothing.

Three innings elapsed with only one hit on each side and nothing across the plate. Doyle opened the fourth with a little bunt toward first base. It went just out of Vaughn's reach and Zim, tearing in, scooped the ball toward Saier too late to get the runner and so wide that it let Doyle to second.

Merkle Scores Herzog.

Herzog scratched a hit back of first, but Doyle could get only to third. Robertson scored him with a long fly. Herzog stole second, Kauff lofted out, and Merkle scored Herzog with a single to left. Merkle pilfered the keystone easily, but Lobert flew out.

Flack led the home fourth with a single, went to second when Doyle robbed Williams of a hit, and scored on Schulte's drive to right. Saier also singled, but Zeider forced Schulte and the side out.

Fischer, first up in the fifth, drove his liner just over the screen, tying the score. Vaughn and Wortman subsided gracefully, then Flack pounded the pill high over the screen for another homer and a lead of one run. Zim skied.

Perritt Wabbles in Sixth.

Rasped by this rough usage, Perritt wabbled in the sixth, giving Schulte a pass with none out. Saier grounded, but Zeider hit a Texas league single and Perritt passed Home Run Bill Fischer, filling the bases. Vaughn showed up that strategem by singling to right so hard that only Schulte could score on it. Wortman forced Zeider at the plate, but Flack delivered his fourth safety, scoring Fischer. Sallee took charge of the firing and struck out Williams.

Nothing doing after that. The Giants made two hits off Vaughn in the last five rounds and pushed one man as far as second. Sallee held the Tinx hitless until taken out for a pinch hitter, and Schupp worked the eighth round without letting a Cub live.

COBB WINS FIRST, 4-3, THEN RED SOX BLANK DETROIT CREW, 1 TO 0

Boston, Mass., July 22.—Boston and Detroit split a double header, Detroit winning the first, 4 to 3, and Boston the second, 1 to 0. Cobb's three bagger to right in the ninth scored Burns with what proved the winning tally in the first game. In the seventh inning of this contest Lewis robbed Cobb of a three base hit by getting his drive to left with one hand against the scoreboard.

The Tigers were unable to hit Leonard at opporune times in the second game. Boston scored the only run when Baker dropped Burns' throw to get Hoblitzel at the plate. Score:

INQUISITIVE FANS

Pine Ridge, S. D.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Please state whether or not tie games in the National and American leagues count in the batting and fielding averages of the players.
H. E. MORROW.

They do.

Reader, Oak Park, Ill.: To have the batsman declared out automatically on an infield fly there must be base runners at first and second, or at first, second, and third bases, with less than two out already. It must be a pop fly that can be handled by an infielder, and no line drive is considered an infield fly.

Missouri Valley, Ia.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Man on third and man on first, one out. Batter hits to third baseman, who throws to second, retiring the runner from first. Second baseman completes a double play at first. Runner on third crosses the plate before the batsman is retired at first. Does the run count?
B. B. C.

Run does not count.

B. B. Geringer, South Chicago, Ill.: The Merkle play has been explained at length several times in the columns of "The Tribune," and requires too much space for constant reproduction. Send stamped envelope for reply.

CYCLE FEATURE TO VANDERPELT

R. Vanderpelt won the three mile open race, the feature of the bike program at Riverview velodrome, after a three cornered fight last night. The Belgian won by spurting away from Willie Kell, German-American A. C., and Ernest Kockler, the local rider competing under Mystic A. C. colors, at the finish. The latter two took second and third honors, respectively. R. Scheppens, another Belgian, captured the fifteen mile motor paced grind, second going to Paul Kell, a brother of Willie. E. Salems won the mile open. Summaries:

Three mile open—Won by R. Vanderpelt, Belgian-American A. C.; Willie Kell, German-American A. C., second; E. Kockler, Mystic A. C., third. Time, 6:38.

Fifteen mile motor paced race—Won by R. Scheppens, Belgian-American A. C.; Paul Kell, German-American A. C., second; Olaf Lodal, Mystic A. C., third. Time, 24:30.

One-third mile, Repechage handicap—Won by E. Davini, Italian-American A. C.; Andrew Andriesen, Conquer A. C., second; E. Balgacci, Italian-American A. C., third. Time, :38 3-5.

Mile open—Won by E. Salems, Logan C. C.; Nick Becker, German-American A. C., second; Fred Vinch, Belgian-American A. C., third. Time, 2:27 1-5.

Half mile novice—Won by J. Braeckelaere, Riverview C. C.; D. Cecchini, Italian-American A. C., second; D. Cansteenkisti, Belgian-American A. C., third. Time, 2:13.

Only a foot separated the three leaders in the three mile open, and Kell protested the award of the event to Vanderpelt. A crowd of Germans from his club backed Kell, but a contingent of rooters from Vanderpelt's Belgian organization met them on the track, ready for hostilities, and an imitation of European warfare seemed probable until the groups were dispersed.

BY JOHN G. DE LONG.

LED by Commodore Harry H. Higinbotham's big white yawl Priscilla, flagship of the Chicago Yacht club fleet, seven boats started yesterday afternoon in the thirteenth annual cruising race of the Grant park organization to Mackinac.

The getaway of the fleet was one of the prettiest ever seen in the history of the 331 mile event. All the yachts were well bunched when the starting gun was fired at 3 o'clock from the bridge of John Burnham's steam yacht Pathfinder, which is convoying the squadron and acting in the capacity of judges' boat. At the signal all the skippers bore down on the line, with Priscilla in the weather position and leading by a slight margin over Snite and Barcal's sloop Intrepid.

Boats Near Collision.

Following in order came D. W. MacDonald's sloop Larikin, C. H. Morgan's schooner Natant, Morgan L. Eastman's sloop Mavourneen, Paul Tietgens' sloop Dorello, and George O. Clinch's yawl Arcadia. The last two boats all but fouled each other as the line was crossed. They came so close together they almost touched sides, and it took some quick thinking on the part of skippers Tietgens and Clinch to prevent an accident.

Weather conditions were ideal for the start. There was no sea, and the wind came at a moderate rate from the east. This gave the boats a reach, and all held on the starboard tack until they had passed from sight to the north.

Intrepid soon made up its slight loss at the start and took the lead away from Priscilla in spite of the fact that the big yawl carried a much larger spread of canvas. The race is thought to rest between these two boats, with Intrepid having a shade the advantage.

Intrepid the Favorite.

Intrepid ranks favorite because the Snite-Barcal racer has won all the big races sailed so far this season. It is uncertain how long it will take the winner to reach Mackinac, but under ordinary conditions the leader should check in at the finish late tomorrow or early on Tuesday.

Dr. William L. Baum's schooner yacht Amorita holds the record, having set a mark of a little over thirty-two hours in the memorable race of 1911, when a storm wrecked the sloop Vencedor, drove several of the contestants into shelter marbors, and beached Mavourneen after it had crossed the line a winner, owing to the big time allowance it had over Amorita. The longest time ever consumed in one of the Mackinac races was seventy-two hours.

Field in the Race.

Only one boat was scratched from the list of entrants, George B. Currier, owner of the sloop Leda, winner of the 1915 race, withdrawing his boat at the last minute. The starters, together with the owners, skippers, and crew, were as follows:

Yawl Priscilla—H. M. Higinbotham, owner and skipper. Crew, L. C. Roberts, C. Q. Smith, L. J. Ibold, C. H. Burras, Dudley M. Condit, five professionals.

Yawl Arcadia—George O. Clinch, owner and skipper. Crew, R. Babcock, Henry Babcock, Gordon Cameron, Stanley Fairclough, three professionals.

Schooner Natant—C. H. Morgan, owner and skipper. Crew, Mrs. C. H. Morgan, Ed. Cowen, William Wood, Gilbert Stone, H. J. Morgan.

Sloop Intrepid—Frank J. Snite and Roy M. Barcal, owners; Roy M. Barcal, skipper. Crew, F. J. Snite, Henry Rubinkam, Elliott Durand, Malcolm Vail, Chester Foust.

Sloop Larikin—D. W. MacDonald, owner and skipper. Crew, J. H. Blair, G. F. Noyes, J. I. McKim, H. A. Redmond, H. Dickey, Harold Manning.

Sloop Dorello—Paul Tietgens, owner and skipper. Crew George L. Weed, Albert Peterson, M. J. Slavey, Oscar Larson, two professionals.

Sloop Mavourneen—Morgan L. Eastman, owner and skipper. Crew, E. W. Grover, W. R. Frye, E. C. Hitze, S. E. Eastman, A. H. Swestman.

Bike Races at Velodrome.

The Velodrome bike card today contains four features. There will be a five mile open, a five mile motor paced, a miss and out race for classes B and C, and a two mile handicap for classes B and C. In addition, there will be three other races. The racing will start at 8:30 o'clock, and large fields are entered in each event.

BAN JOHNSON CRITICIZES FINDING ON NEWARK CLAIM

Cincinnati, O., July 22.—President Ban Johnson of the American league in his minority report on the national commission's decision in the case of C. H. Ebbets of the Brooklyn Nationals against the Newark International league club contends that the decision of the International league was just, and he sharply criticizes the finding of President Tener of the National league and Chairman Herrmann, who wrote the majority report.

The majority decision, which Johnson contends is at variance with the facts, denied the Brooklyn club's claim for $73,293.81 against the Newark club, but allowed the Brooklyn club the difference between the amount received for the franchise of the Newark club by the International league and the net expenses incurred in operating the club during 1915 at Harrisburg, Pa., and Newark, N. J.

GOLFER SCHMIDT TAKES HONORS IN WESTERN EVENT

Oakland Entrant Scores an Easy Victory by Defeating Grant, 7 and 6.

Del Monte, Cal., July 22.—Heinrich Schmidt of the Claremont Golf and Country club of Oakland won the western golf championship today by defeating Douglas Grant, northern California champion, 7 and 6.

The winner showed the same form which brought him first honors in the medal play of the qualifying round. The match practically was won in the morning round. Schmidt won eight of the first nine holes and finished the ante-luncheon journey 5 up on the representative of the Burlingame Golf and Country club.

Shows Reversal of Form.

Grant suffered a great reversal of form from yesterday's play, after beating Clarence E. Bangham, the young Texan, whose play was one of the bright spots of the tourney.

Yesterday Grant covered the thirty-six hole well under par. Today his approach shots lacked direction and his drives left both distance and accuracy to be desired. In the afternoon, however, he took a decided brace and took the first hole with a beautiful four. Schmidt came back with a surprisingly long putt for the second.

Grant Takes Three in Row.

Grant took the next with a three and the play zigzagged back and forth until the turn, when the winner found himself four up. The tenth was halved with a smart pair of fours and on the eleventh Schmidt laid his approach dead to the pin, holing out in four to Grant's five.

Dormie down, Grant's drive from the twelfth tee was wild, his second the same, and when he required three putts on the green Schmidt clinched the honors with a mediocre five.

The victory gives Schmidt his first important tournament honor on the Pacific coast. In 1915 he was runner-up in both the California and Exposition tournaments.

The gallery, which numbered more than 100, was treated to some excellent putting by Evans. The champion negotiated the first nine holes in 34 and required 36 for the inward journey, while Gardner took 40 for the first half of the round and came back in 37. The cards of the foursome follow:

Evans—Out	3	3	4	3	5	5	4	3	4	—34
In	5	3	3	5	4	5	4	2	6	—36—70
Hendee—Out	5	4	5	4	5	6	5	4	4	—42
In	5	4	3	6	5	5	4	4	5	—41—83
Gardner—Out	5	4	4	6	5	4	4	3	5	—40
In	6	3	3	5	5	4	4	4	3	—37—77
McConnell—Out	4	4	5	3	6	6	4	4	4	—40
In	6	4	3	6	5	5	4	4	4	—40—80

Following the day's activities on the course the club tendered the champion a testimonial dinner, at which more than 200 covers were laid. Informal speeches were in order, and Evans reluctantly told the story of his latest victory.

In addition to the feature match the regular week-end events were decided as follows: Class A—E. R Moore [illegible] E. T. Hendee, 3 and 2; E. F. Seney defeated W. C. Coe, 1 up; match between H. H. DODGE BEATEN AT HAWTHORNE tions of a varied type. There was a close bunch at the heels of the two leaders, the finish being the best of the afternoon.

Cardome, the favorite in the first race, a selling event at six furlongs, took the lead at the outset, but was shortly joined by Rosemary, and the pair drew away from their field on the bend. Rosemary passed Cardome and in the run home proved much the stronger. Both leaders tired and at the finish were being overhauled by Ralph S., which came from far back. Rosemary won by a length.

Wanda Pitzer, with Murphy in the saddle, made most of the running in the second race and won as she pleased from Billy Joe.

Fifteen Start in Sixth.

The biggest field of the meeting, fifteen, went to the post in the last race, at a mile, but the start was good. Charles Francis and Mex, the two outside horses, were hustled to the front at once. Mex cut out a fast pace, but Charles Francis, the betting choice, hung on until the leader tired and then came on home a handy winner, with Type beating Mex for second place.

Westward Ho.

H. Evans and A. C. Quest won the four ball event at Westward Ho with respective cards of 75—16—69 and 84—12—72. H. Davies, 87—16—71, and R. M. Cutting, 88—16—72, with 143, and W. S. Hayes, 94—25—69, and C. M. Lauritzen, 102—28—74, were tied for second place. C. D. Richards won the final match for the Tom Morris trophy, defeating A. Hughes [14], 3 and 2.

South Shore.

Shooting a perfect 71, J. W. Carey defeated E. I. Stephens by 1 up in the finals for the Sedgwick trophy at South Shore. Stephens held a lead of 1 up at the ninth hole, but lost it at the twelfth when he dubbed his drive. Matters were all even at the final green, where Carey won by taking two putts to his opponent's three. Summary of the other events:

Third flight final, C. W. Price trophy—W. T. Blew defeated M. M. Vincent, 2 and 1.

TENNIS EXPERTS START TOURNEY FOR STATE TITLE

Seventeen First Round Matches Decided at Wanderers' Club.

With several of the star contestants away at the Kansas City tournament, the first day's play in the state tennis tournament at the Wanderers' club courts was not as fast as it might have been. Only seventeen of the thirty-one scheduled first round matches were played. The rest must be played this afternoon, except when out of town contestants are involved. These will be allowed until Monday, when they will have to participate in both first and second round matches on the same day.

Perhaps the fastest match of the day was that between M. G. Ketchum, former California star, and Ruthven Pike, Hyde Park High school player. Ketchum was forced to let out all he had, and then won only after three closely contested sets, 3—6, 6—3, 8—6.

Stars Win Matches Easily.

Hayes, Burdick, and Blair took their matches in easy fashion. Al Lindauer was forced into three sets by H. C. Wolff. Young Stagg carried off his match with F. C. Henkel, 5—7, 6—4, 6—0. A. H. McCormick, scheduled as a 100 to 1 shot over F. T. O'Brien, was upset quite decisively, 6—8, 6—0, 6—2.

Drawings for the doubles will be made tonight. Play in the second round of singles and first round of doubles will commence at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

$5,000 CUP OFFERED FOR SPEEDWAY RACE

A GOLD cup, valued at $5,000, will go to the winner of the Speedway Grand Prix to be run on the Chicago speedway Aug. 19.

The trophy was delivered to the promoters by the goldsmiths yesterday and will be placed on exhibition this week. It is almost a replica of the Grand Prize cup that is hung up for road racing annually in the event conducted by the Automobile Club of America. In fact, the Motor Cups Holding company of New York, which controls the Grand Prize and the Vanderbilt cups, has protested to the contest board of the American Automobile association against the Chicago promoters using the name Grand Prix in connection with the Aug. 19 race. Dario Resta, winner of the 300 mile races at Indianapolis and Chicago and the 150 mile event at Omaha, will be a certain starter, according to his manager, Arthur Hill of New York, who was in Chicago yesterday.

SAXONS IN RELAY CROSS COUNTRY

In a remarkable transcontinental relay race against time forty-three Saxon six cylinder automobiles established a new record yesterday when the last car arrived at San Francisco at 4:40 o'clock in the morning, six days, eighteen hours and ten minutes after the first car left New York City.

The record run was made over the Lincoln highway, the drivers carrying a message from Mayor Mitchel of New York to Mayor Rolf of San Francisco. The official mileage of the memorial road is 3,331 miles, but the distance actually covered was considerably in excess of this, as long detours were imperative because of road construction at various points.

An official observer, appointed by the American Automobile association, started with the first car that left New York and traveled every foot of the way from coast to coast, changing from car to car as the relay progressed.

BYFORD SCORES TENNIS VICTORY IN PLAINS MEET

Defeats Clifford Lockhorn in Tourney Final, Taking Three of Four Sets.

Kansas City, Mo., July 22.—Heath Byford of Chicago won the Great Plains championship by defeating Clifford Lockhorn of Kansas City, 6—4, 7—5, 6—7, 6—1, in the tournament finals at the Rock Hill club today. The match was seen by one of the largest crowds that ever attended a tournament here.

Lockhorn is holder of the Missouri valley title and is looked upon as a resourceful player, but the superior tennis displayed by the Chicago entrant suffered only one slight delay in his march to the title. That was in the third set, which Lockhorn won, 8—6. His spurt was short lived, for the Illinois champion's tennis was capable of only one puncture in the concluding set, the score being 6—1.

Consistency, aided by the cool deliberateness of the Illinois man, took Byford safely through the hard match. His serve stood him in good stead, getting several aces from a peculiar hop put on the ball. Lockhorn was in form in his back court game, but his short strokes were below par, easy returns being repeatedly smashed into the net or outside the court. In the last set Byford passed the Kansas City man many times at the net.

Play in the doubles will be concluded tomorrow.

MEET FOR PARK ATHLETES.

The seventh annual running meet for the Hamilton Park trophy will be held at Hamilton park, West Seventy-second street and Normal avenue, next Saturday. This meet was formerly known as the John E. W. Wayman meet, as the late state's attorney donated the original cup. The home team at Hamilton park won that cup in three successive years, 1909, 1910, 1911. The present cup was given by citizens of Hamilton park. Three park teams now have an interest in the present cup. Armour square won in 1913, Palmer park in 1914, and Hamilton park last year. The meet is open to all the parks of the south side. Eligibility rules of the south park system govern. The races include all track events from fifty yards to five miles and a mile relay.

TOP EPISCOPAL NET LEAGUE.

The Church of Our Savior tennis team won the Episcopal Athletic league championship yesterday at Lake Shore playground by defeating the St. James players in three straight matches. Harry Brown's playing for the winners was the feature. This victory gives the Church of Our Savior a leg on the cup presented by Joseph G. Tyssowski, president of the league.

GIRLS BATTLE FOR CITY TITLE IN SWIM MEET

TABLE OF POINTS

Illinois A. C.	56
Chicago A. A.	20
Hamilton club..................	19
Cincinnati Gymnasium A. C...	3
Northwestern university......	1

Central A. A. U. individual point winner; Perry McGillivray, I. A. C., 20 points; A. C. Raithel, I. A. C., 11 points; Michael McDermott, I. A. C., and W. P. Heyn, C. A. A., tied for third, 10 points.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

After Perry McGillivray of the Illinois A. C. had won the Central A. A. U. championship in the one mile swim, his fourth title victory, Miss Violet Wilson of the Sinai Social center won the women's city championship by defeating three opponents in the fourth batch of the Central A. A. U. championships, held yesterday under the auspices of the Chicago Yacht club at the foot of Monroe street.

Not only did McGillivray win the mile swim, but he established a new record of 25:50 1-5 for the distance. The former mark was 25:50, and was held by Clement Browne of the Hamilton club. The tricolor natator went into the lead at the crack of the pistol and never was in danger of defeat.

McGillivray Point Leader.

As a result of his victory McGillivray is the individual star in the championships. He has scored 20 points by winning first place in the mile swim, half mile, 220 yard swim, and 100 yard back stroke. A. C. Raithel of the I. A. C. is second with 11 markers, secured by first place in the century and second places in the 50 yard swim and the 440 yard event.

Although the title race featured the tourney in the basin, the women's race attracted considerable attention from the women who occupied the veranda of the clubhouse and from the 5,000 persons who lined the docks.

Crowd Cheers Little Girl.

The sympathy of the crowd was with little Mabel Donaldson, the 12 year old swimmer, a pupil of Tom Robinson, instructor at Northwestern university. The starters hit the water at practically the same time from the ten foot plunge. Miss Wilson, a much older and stronger swimmer than Miss Donaldson, went into the lead in the first fifteen yards.

Little Miss Donaldson, daughter of the golf professional at Glen View, fought hard to beat her opponent, but was unable to overcome the scant five yard lead which Miss Wilson gained early in the race.

She had to be content with second place, but she certainly won the applause from one of the largest crowds that has seen a woman's race in Chicago in years. Efforts will be made by Central A. A. U. officials to stage more events for women in connection with the championships.

River Swim Next Saturday.

There also were exhibitions of fancy diving and novelty events. The remaining championship events, water polo and relay race, will be held at the same place two weeks from yesterday. In the meantime, local swimmers will devote their time to training for the eighth annual river swim of the Illinois A. C., to be held next Saturday. Summaries:

110 yard swim, open—Won by Bennett, Hamilton club; M. Royal, Hamilton club, second; E. Royal, Hamilton club, third. Time, 1:06 2-5.

Mile swim—Central A. A. U. championship—Won by Perry McGillivray, I. A. C.; W. L. Wallen Jr., Hamilton club, second; Clement Browne, Hamilton club, third. Time, 25:50 1-5 (new record).

Plunge for distance, open—Won by B. H. Princell, Hamilton club; M. Olmstead, C. A. A., second; J. Miller, I. A. C., third. Distance, 60 feet in 1:00.

BOOK TITLE DIVE AT LOCAL CLUB

The South Shore Country club through efforts of President Everett C. Brown has scheduled a series of aquatic events on Aug. 12, 19, and 26. The most important probably will be the National A. A. U. high diving championship for men and women to be held Aug. 12.

For the first time in the history of swimming in Chicago will the mermaids have a chance to perform in high diving. Several swimming events have been held for women, but diving from a height of at least twenty-four feet never before has been attempted. An exact duplicate of the high diving tower that was used at Stockholm during the last Olympic meet is being erected off the breakwater, where there is a depth of twenty feet.

In addition to the high diving championships, two more events will be held. These are the 440 yard National A. A. U. championship for women and 100 yards interscholastic race, open to all high and prep school swimmers throughout the country.

In the championship events the National A. A. U. championship gold, silver, and bronze medals will be awarded, and for the interscholastic swim, South Shore medals of gold, silver, and bronze go to the winners. Entries for all events will close with Everett C. Brown, care Frank Sullivan, South Shore Country club., Aug. 5.

Need Right-Handed Batters; Influx of Southpaw Hurlers

BY I. E. SANBORN.

On top of a tough year, due to bad weather and other things, minor league club owners face the prospect of a narrow market for young talent this fall. Scouts have been combing the bushes for right handed batsmen of good promise and report that they are mighty scarce.

Proof of that is found in the search President Weeghman of Chicago's Cubs made for an outfielder who could hit from the north side of the plate, to strengthen his too left handed team. Weeghman's scouts went north, south, east, and west and came back with the statement that all the likely outfielders they saw were left handed hitters, with the exception of Joe Kelly of Indianapolis.

Third Trial for Kelly.

Weeghman outbid all the others and landed Kelly because he had to have him or else the Tinx would face nothing but southpaw pitchers practically all the rest of the season. This shows the state of things in the minors. Kelly is no youngster, by the way, and this is his third trip to the majors, but he is the pick of the minor league outfielders who swing right handed.

The coming fall will prove that a young player who bats left handed will be handicapped in his efforts to rise to major leaguedom. Club owners, who already possess left handed teams, like the White Sox and Cubs, won't take any more left handed swatters unless they are world beaters. Club owners who are not now troubled with too many south handed swingers at the plate will hang to their right handed batsmen for fear of getting into the undesirable fix of some of their competitors.

The best tip that a young player can follow is to keep right on batting right handed if he started that way, or to go back to that style if it came natural to him and he has changed under the advice of some friend or manager.

The craze for left handed hitters which developed a few years ago is responsible for the present situation in baseball. It resulted in a development of a long string of left handed hurlers. Only a few years ago a pitching staff which contained one good southpaw and half a dozen right handed pitchers was considered well balanced. Today the wise manager tries to divide his slab staff fifty-fifty between right and left handed men. In a recent series between the Cubs and Boston Braves Manager Stallings used nothing but left handers four days in succession.

Northpaw Teams in Demand.

Now club owners are trying to cope with the situation by converting their teams into right handed batsmen, and are finding it difficult, because every ambitious youngster who could negotiate a bat left handed has been for years trying to make himself a second Ty Cobb or Joe Jackson. That is only natural, because for several years the majority of the names which have been found in the .300 class in the tables of major league batsmen have belonged to men who hit left handed.

But there aren't many who can be as successful at that kind of hitting as Cobb and Jackson have been and cope about equally well with right and left handed pitchers. And the average left handed batsman, who can swat successfully only right handed curves, finds himself heavily handicapped unless he happens to land on a team composed largely of men who bat from the north side of the pan.

Southpaws Not Sluggers.

While the batting championship has been won many times by left handed batsmen, there really have been fewer hard hitting left handers than right handers. There never has been a southpaw batsman, for instance, to compare with Cap Anson or Dan Brouthers or Ed Delehanty. They were real sluggers with the bat. There never was any doubt about their base hits, for they were not fast enough to beat out little infield taps and when they hit a ball at an opponent it usually was either an out or a base hit, with no hair line decisions to make, for if the fielder did not handle the ball cleanly it usually was hit so hard that it would bound off the fielder's anatomy so far there was no play possible.

Of the present day players Wagner, Heine Zimmerman, and Lajoie are of the slugging type, and they bat right handed. Cobb is not in the slugger class with the bat, although he occasionally hits the ball hard. Jackson drives the ball harder than Cobb as a rule, but Sam Crawford was really the premier slugger of modern left handers. In the old timer class Jimmy Ryan of Anson's Colts, and later with Washington, was a hard hitting left hander.

Speed Helps Cobb's Average.

If Cobb batted right handed his batting average would suffer a great deal, and of course that is why he hits from the other side of the plate to get the advantage of his great speed in beating out little raps that would be sure outs if hit by a right handed batsman. Cobb is not a natural left hander like Crawford or Ryan. Neither was Willie Keeler, who used to lead the National league regularly with base hits, as wee as he was.

This does not mean that a man may not be a natural left handed batsman simply because he writes or feeds himself right handed. Many boys are naturally ambidexterous enough to learn to handle pen or pencil or cut their steaks with their right hands and yet they might chop wood better left handed than right. They can hit left handed and hit hard, but the man who started batting right handed because it was natural and turned around to emulate Cobb or Jackson is in for a long spell in the minors.

CELTS HOLD MEET TODAY.

United Celtic-American Societies of Chicago will hold their annual games this afternoon and evening at Gaelic park, Forty-seventh street and California avenue. The bike events have drawn 160 entries, and forty-six teams will contest in the ten mile race. The five mile relay has attracted thirty-six teams. Twenty-five young women are entered in a three mile walk. Other features will be a Gaelic football game, high jumping, hop, step, and jump, standing hop, step, and jump, fifty-six pound weight throw, twenty-seven pound shotput, and a series of races. Gov. Dunne will speak in the evening.

ALMA GIRL DISPLAYS SPEED IN PACE RACE OVER AUSTIN TRACK

Exciting finishes and split heats marked the matinée of the Chicago Riding and Driving club yesterday. The star event was the 2:20 pace, which brought about the meeting of the crack pacing filly Edith Merriman and Alma Girl. The former was the favorite and won the first heat as if it was all over. Tom Casey took the mount behind Alma Girl the second trip and, carrying Edith to a break near the quarter, was never in danger.

The 2:25 pace was a corker from start to finish and resulted in a big surprise, as Rockwell proved the victor. In the first heat Rudy Hal led all the way, but after that Rockwell was invincible.

An accident marred the 2:35 mixed event. Near the half in the second heat Ed Worthy, who was close up at the time, had the wheel of his bike break. Driver Stiernberg emerged uninjured, but the colt ran away two miles. Medallion won after a hot skirmish with Axbeth.

Mullin to Oppose American Giants.

George Mullin, who twirled for the Detroit Tigers when they won the American league championship, will make his first appearance as a semi-pro in Chicago when the Kokomo Red Sox face the American Giants this afternoon at Schorling's park. Rube Foster is slated to oppose Mullin.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

by A. R. Metcalfe

PLAYERS must acquire the ability to make rules for themselves during the progress of a deal. Some very shrewd reasoning from the bidding of the opponents is often possible, as the following deal bears witness. The hands:

North:
S—10.
H—K, Q, J, 9, 7.
C—6, 3, 2.
D—J, 9, 6, 2.

West:
S—A, 7, 4, 3, 2.
H—A, 2.
C—A, J, 10, 7.
D—A, 5.

East:
S—K, 5.
H—10, 5.
C—Q, 9, 5.
D—K, Q, 10, 8, 4, 3.

South:
S—Q, J, 9, 8, 6.
H—8, 6, 4, 3.
C—K, 8, 4.
D—7.

Score, 0—0. North dealt. The bidding:

First round—North, 1 heart; east, 2 diamonds; south, 2 hearts; west, 2 no trump.

Second round—North, pass; east, pass; south, pass.

North had the opening lead.

West secured a grand slam.

West apparently risked the loss of both game and contract during the progress of this deal, but really kept a tight grip on both throughout the play, while working for the greatest possible score.

The first proposition that confronted west was, "What did south have to warrant supporting his partner's bid?" The king of clubs was certainly with south, and the rest of the support a singleton in either diamonds or spades—probably the former.

As the club suit was handled by west the king would have been captured even had South held four of the suit, without using a reëntry in the east hand.

After trick eight, the chance that north throwing away good hearts to keep worthless diamonds, and that south had supported his partner on the doubtful king of clubs and no other possible trick, had ceased to be any chance at all, and west properly went after the grand slam

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—1. Dealer bids one, no trump. Second hand has: Diamonds, ace, king, jack, ten, nine, seven; hearts, queen, X X; clubs, X X X X; spades, . What should second hand do with the above holding after dealer has bid no trump?

2. Dealer bids one, no trump. Second hand bids two, spades. Third hand has the following hand: Spades, king, queen, jack, nine, X X X X; hearts, queen, X; diamonds, X; clubs, X X. What should third hand do with the above holding after second hand has bid two, spades? M. S.

Ans.—[1] Second hand should pass. His diamonds might be very effective against a no trump, but would be of little use if either opponent switched to spades or hearts.

[2] Third hand should pass. If the others passed would open with king of spades. Should dealer bid two no trump third hand should bid three spades.

The second hand probably held an established suit of clubs or diamonds and dealer the ace of spades.

Milwaukee.—[To the Editor.]—East dealt and north secured the bid, and after five cards from each hand was played it was discovered that east had one card too many, and west not enough by one card. What is the correct procedure and what penalty, if any, should be imposed upon east and west? C. W. B.

Ans.—The deal was void.

Hartland, Wis.—[To the Editor.]—1. We follow the rule that the dealer should not bid in first round unless he has a suit of five with either the ace or the king and queen at top of suit. Second man should follow the same rule if dealer passes. Is this correct?

2. If my partner passes in first round and bids in second this is supposed to be a forced bid and my partner does not want me to go up for him in case an opponent overbids him. Is this correct?

If both are correct how can I distinguish the difference if my partner has passed in first round and then in second round bids one heart after the opponent's bid of one diamond, next opponent bids two diamonds. I have two sure tricks if hearts are trump. Should I go up for my partner, figuring that he passed the first time only because he did not have ace or king at top of suit and may have queen, jack and three or four others.

Or should I pass and consider that a forced bid? J. B.

Ans.—1. The dealer should have either ace or king [not necessarily K—Q] to bid a suit originally, and same rule applies to second hand if dealer passes. After that there is no restriction. 2.—When a player passes on the first round of bidding and afterward bids any suit, his suit is not forced, although he probably holds neither ace nor king. Partner should support such a bid when holding two tricks.

In the Wake of the News

by RING W. LARDNER

THE DIARY OF A SIREN.

July 16.

Flora Parker and Myrtle Goetz wanted me to go with them over to St. Joe today, but I was afraid Lennie would call up during my absence, so I pleaded a headache and stayed home. No call came from Lennie and the day has passed terribly slow. This morning I spent in reading the paper. It gave the news of Will Orpet's acquittal and I was certainly glad that the poor boy has been exonerated. The article about the closing scenes of the trial was full of pathos and I felt blue after reading it, but found sollace in the comical section.

Once I had my mind all made up to go to the ball game, but I happened to think that Lennie might see me there and think that I was running after him and it would kill me to have him imagine anything like that, though I am sure he should know me well enough by this time to not misjudge my motives. But Oh diary how I long to see him again and hear his big manly voice though I and he can never be anything more than friends again.

July 17.

Diary my heart is beating so fast and I am so excited that I can hardly write, but I must write down this day's happenings before I go to bed. Lennie did not call up last night or this morning and at noon I swallowed my pride and phoned to his boarding house, but he had gone to the ball park. A little after noon I asked Mr. Weeghman to let me off. My intentions was to do some shopping, but before I realized it my feet were taking me in the direction of the elevated that runs out to the ball park. "Very good," I said to myself. "I will go but I will hide away in some far corner of the grandstand where there will be no chance of him seeing me and I will leave before the game is over so I will be far away from the park before he is dressed and ready to come out." But fate which wields our destiny when we least expect it caused me to change my plans. The game was so exciting that I forgot all about my intentions to leave before it was over and found myself up in the stand long after the rest of the crowd had left. And, fate again taking a hand, the very minute that I came to myself and walked down stairs toward the the street, Lennie came out of the dressing rooms and we all but ran into each other at the gate.

"Well," I stammered, "this is a surprise." And I am afraid I blushed furiously.

"What are you doing out here?" he said, and I noticed also that there was a flush under his dark tan.

"I had rather not tell you why I came," I replied.

"I bet I know," he said. "I bet you came out expecting to see Tanner."

"You wrong me, Lennie, if I still have the right to call you that," I replied. "I knew that Mr. Tanner had gone to Birmingham. Besides I am not interested in Mr. Tanner and never was."

"I heard different," he replied.

"I can not help what you heard," I said, "but if you heard that there was anything between Mr. Tanner and I, it was a lie." And with that the tears begun to choke my voice, though I struggled hard to keep them back.

"Well, it don't make any difference any way," Lennie said. "I'm glad to of seen you and now I got to beat it home."

"Are you sure it don't make any difference," I said.

"Sure I'm sure," he said.

"Lennie," said I, "it may not make any difference to you, but it makes a lot of difference to me and in fairness to me I think you ought to walk a little ways with me and give me a chance to explain."

"All right," he said, "but remember you can not make a fool out of me twice."

That cruel remark unloosened a well of tears and though I fought hard against it I could not help from crying and sobbing aloud. There was several more of the ball players coming out of the dressing room and before I knew it Lennie had lead me out of the park and down the street out of sight of those who might recognize us. At the elevated station he said he would now bid me goodbye.

"Is that a gentleman's act?" I asked him. "Are you going to let me go home alone after all this." And I begun sobbing again.

Well diary he escorted me all the way home and before he had left me he promised that he would come and see me before the nine go east again which will be in a few days. Oh diary how could I ever of thought that I cared more for Lou Tanner than he and how can I live till I see him again for one has only to see us together to know that he is wild over me or why should he always be trying to run away. Because he is afraid of me diary. Afraid of a little girl that loves him, that loves him with my whole heart.

JOIE RAY WINS FIVE MILE RACE; WOODS VICTOR

Sprint Gives Amateur Canadian Red Cross Cup; Longboat Beaten.

Little Joie Ray added another victory to his long string by winning the five mile race held under the auspices of the Canadian Red Cross society at Comiskey park. Ray, formerly of the I. A. C., running unattached was easily the class of the field of forty-eight runners that were sent around the 400 yard track by starter Peel. Ernie Woods, the English professional champion, defeated Tom Longboat, the Onandagara Indian star, in a match race of two and one-half miles.

For the first three laps of the five mile race a half dozen runners were bunched, with Ray running about ten yards behind the leaders. Sydney Hatch, the veteran local marathon star, and Black and Corkery of the Toronto Sportsmans club, were far back in the big field at the end of the first mile.

Ray Sprints to Victory.

Black soon dropped out and Hatch never threatened, but Corkery who gradually pulled up to within a hundred yards of Ray, was left far behind when the little Chicago man opened upon his final sprint. Ray's time for the distance was 26:27.

After the race there were two protests, neither of which was acted upon by the officials. When Black, the Toronto star dropped out after running a little over a mile his name was scratched. Later he returned to the track and acted as a pacemaker for his teammate Corkery, but was pulled off by the judges. The Canadian did not lose his second place standing. Bob Angier of the University of Chicago, claimed that he was sent an extra lap, relegating him from fifth place to thirteenth.

Heat Too Much for Some.

The intense heat caused a large part of the field to drop out between the first and third miles. All who were in the running at three miles went to the finish and the fifteen who completed the distance were awarded medals. Ray got a big cup for his performance.

The match race between Longboat and Woods demonstrated that the Indian star is not the runner that he once was. For one mile Longboat ran with his old stride, but after Woods once got the lead, Tom tired and was just able to jog across the finish, nearly 200 yards behind the English champion.

The heat and the fact that the Indian does his best over a longer distance may have affected his running, but his showing was a disappointment to the crowd, which gave him a great reception when he came onto the track. Woods' time for the distance, which was nearly two laps short of three miles, was 14:26.

Two Chicago Teams Victors.

Chicago carried off the honors in the lacrosse and soccer matches staged in connection with the Canadian Red Cross fund meet at Comiskey park yesterday. The local lacrosse team downed the Sportsmen's team of Toronto, 5 goals to 4, after a hard battle, while the Chicago District league soccer team defeated the Canadians, 3 to 1. The visitors expect to reverse matters this afternoon when they play lacrosse and soccer at Bricklayers' field.

Contrary to expectations, Chicago outplayed the Canadian lacrosse men in the opening period. Noble scored for the visitors after five minutes of play, but Chicago ran up a lead of 4 to 2 before the session closed. In the second period Bennett counted for Canada in the first four minutes, but the veteran, Rubidge, soon found the net for Chicago.

Win Fast Soccer Match.

The soccer teams were handicapped by a narrow field, whose hard surface caused numerous slips. There was a lot of hard play, but neither team was able to show much combination around goal. Chris Cartwright scored for Chicago after ten minutes, his shot hitting one of the opposing backs on the head and going through the goal after McMurray had reached it with his finger tips.

Three minutes later Russell scored for the Canadians in a somewhat similar manner. His shot just touched Bromley's head when he jumped for it and was turned into the goal. Nearing the end of the half Cartwright scored again. In the second period Roxborough scored for Chicago, and Russell twice got through the Chicago defense, but Holmes stopped his shots. Lineup:

LORNA DOONE

Every week The Sunday Tribune will reproduce in four colors on this page one of the world's most famously beautiful paintings. There will be a brief biography of the painter and a story of the painting. Herewith is reproduced another in the series.

BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

WONTNER'S artistic visualization of Lorna Doone is an ideal portrait of the famous heroine of Blackmore's novel and fits in perfectly with the description which her lover, John Ridd, gives on first seeing her:

"By the side of the stream she was coming to me among the primroses, and every flower looked the brighter as her eyes were upon them. I could not see her face at first, but when I did my heart awoke and trembled. To me it was a thing of terror to behold such beauty. Her hair was flowing from a wreath of white violets and the grace of her coming was like the first flower. The pale gleam over the western cliffs threw a shadow of light behind her as if the sun were still lingering. Never do I now see the light from the closing of the west without thinking of her. Ah me! If it comes to that, what do I see in heaven or earth without thinking of her?"

Portrait painting is one of the greatest tests of genius, since it demands the power to see the best in a face and set it forth that others may see it, too. And Wontner's conception of Lorna Doone achieves the dignity of a masterpiece in portraiture.

No one seems to be certain where it is now hanging. Perhaps in some valued old collection privately owned. Nor is there anything to be found concerning Wontner, his life, and his possible other works. He created a thing of genius in this portrait and it may be the first and last real work he ever did.

It would seem, however, as though he must have looked at Lorna through the same eyes as Blackmore did when he wrote of her, so satisfactory in every detail is the conception of her which he has put on the canvas. Behind the eyes and the mouth there is spirit and heart, and these two elements after all make up the touchstone of a portrait. She is beautiful with a rare infusion of regularity and strength into her features, is endowed with dignity and repose of expression and yet with a curve of the lips that is irresistibly appealing. About the face there is a freshness which gives the touch of radiant youth and in the texture of the skin there is a velvety softness which shows a master hand in the use of oils.

A real romance is the tale of Blackmore, with the incidents, the characters, the time, and the scenery all equally imbued with the spirit of old fashioned days. There is the excitement of the savage deeds by the Doones in the depths of the Bagworthy forest. There is the great love of the plain John Ridd for the hapless girl brought up in their midst. And there is her rescue by Ridd, their subsequent marriage, and the discovery later that the lovely Lorna is not the daughter of the outcast Doones, but the daughter of the Earl of Dugal and direct in heirship to the vast Dugal property.

And then comes her abduction to London and her enforced life of luxury there until she reaches the age of 21. Of age at last and her own mistress, she turns again to John Ridd, for she knows that he is the man she loves above all others, and that though she is the richest of women, life has no happiness away from him.

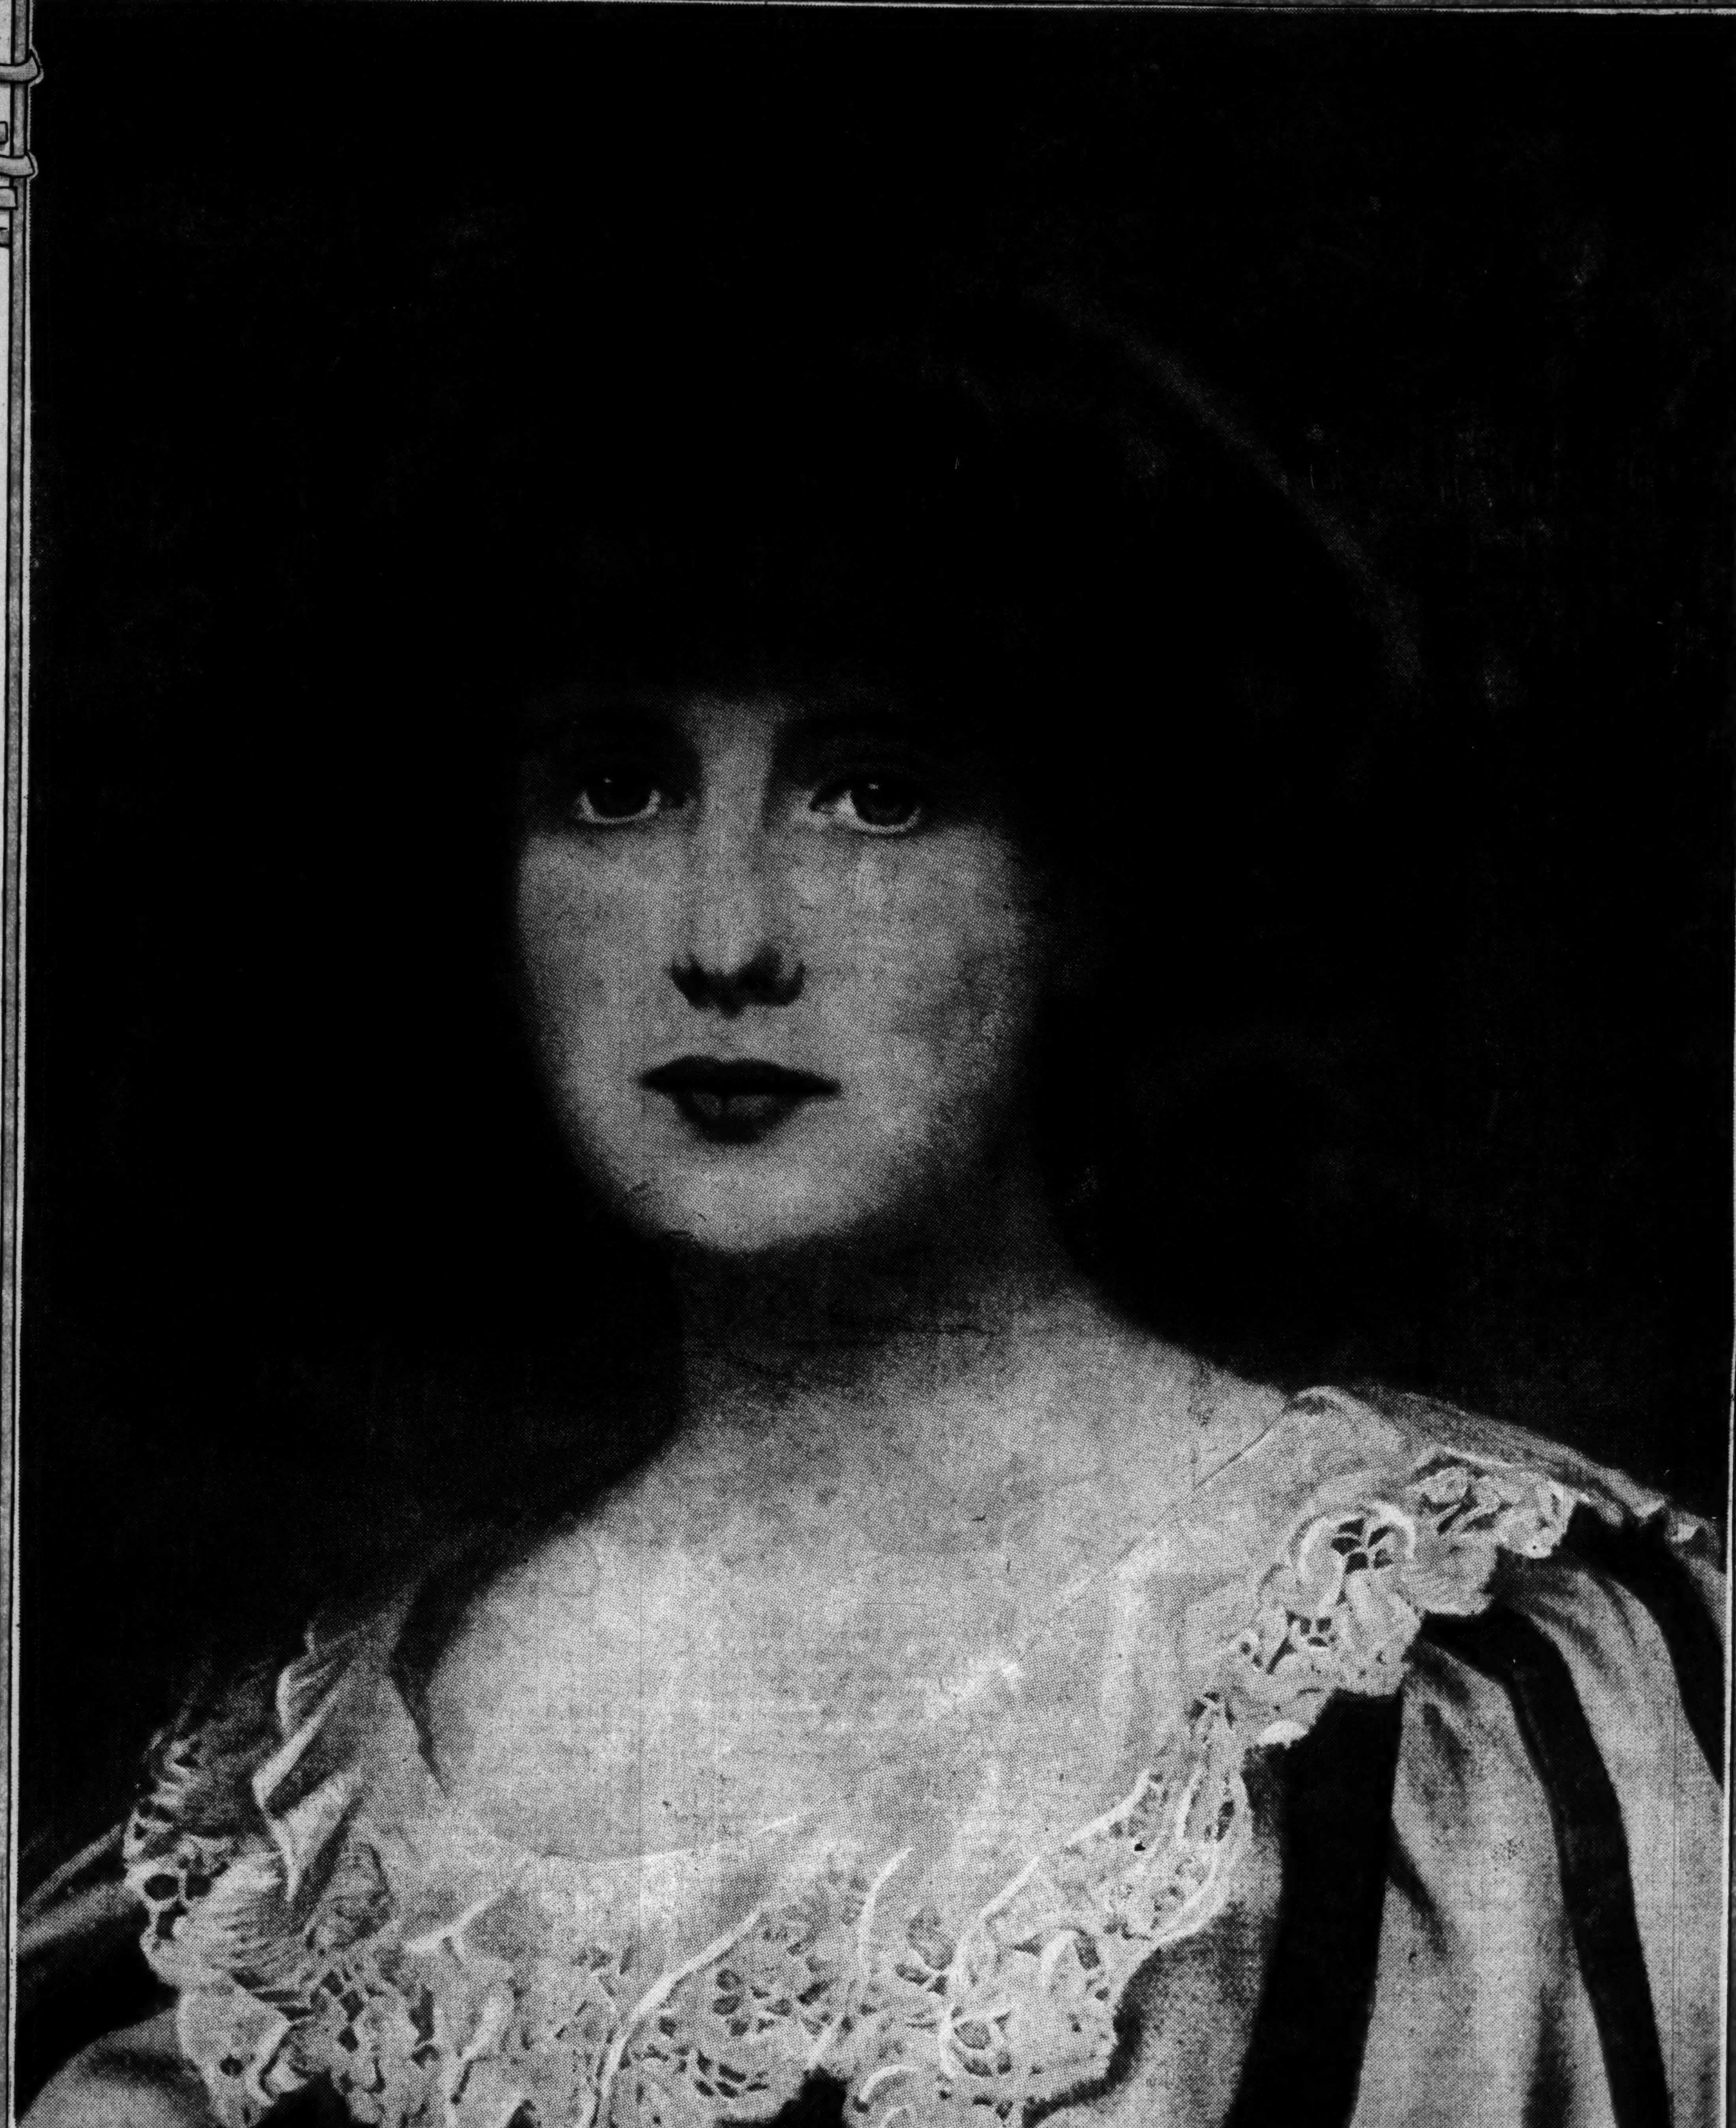
"Of Lorna, my life long darling, of my more and more loved wife, 1 will not talk. For it is not seemly that a man should exalt in his pride. Year by year her beauty grows with the growth of goodness, kindness, and true happiness, and above all with loving. For change she makes a joke of this and laughs at it and plays with it; and then when my slow nature marvels back she comes to earnest loving. And if I do wish to pay her out for something very dreadful — as may happen once or twice when we become too gladsome — I bring her to forgotten sadness and to me for cure of it by the last two words, 'Lorna Doone.'"

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.



GIRIBALA by Rabindranath Tagore

A Quaint Tale Involving the Eternal Triangle, Written by the Only Oriental Ever Awarded the Nobel Prize for Excellence in Literature.

ON the third and top floor of the mansion of Radhanath Seal lived Giribala, the wife of Gopinath Seal. At the front of the south door of her bedroom were several tubs of jasmines and roses. The roof was surrounded on all sides by walls. There were small windows to take views of the outside world. The bedroom was well furnished.

There were pictures of European beauties on the walls. But the picture of the young housewife that was reflected from the mirror at the entrance of the door was in no way inferior in beauty to the other pictures in the room. Giribala's beauty was like the onrush of a sudden flood of light—it was like a surprise itself. It struck one like consciousness at the end of sleep, and overpowered one in one stroke. Her beauty was of such a matchless character that on looking at her one felt that he was not prepared for such a startling surprise.

Giribala, too, was rippling all over with her own grace. She was simply overflowing with her adolescence and youthful beauty. The restless nervousness of youth was distinctly noticeable in her dress, jewels, in the waving of her hands, the curve in her neck, and in the rhythm of her steps, as also in the music of her ornaments, in the liquid laughter and wistful glance.

She was intoxicated with the wine of youth. She was wont to wrap the fullness of her body in a dress of fancy colored silk sari and restlessly walk to and fro, as if her entire being were dancing to a silent music that was emanating from within herself. She felt great joy in these random movements of her body, and immensely enjoyed floating herself in the pool of her own beauty. Now she would pluck a leaf from a plant, lift her arm and let it fly in the sky, consequently her bangles would jingle and the end of her sari would fall off; and the wave of her hand flew towards the cloud in the infinite sky like a bird just freed from the cage. All of a sudden she would take a ball of mud from a flower tub and throw it away at random; and then she would just look through a window on the outside world, and suddenly turn back in a roundabout way, and her bunch of keys would jingle.

And again, she would, at an unearthly hour, sit before a mirror, open her hair and begin to tie it as she would bite the ribbons between her ivory white teeth. And after this when she would find nothing else to do, so through sheer idleness, she would lay herself on the soft bed like a ray of moonbeam that shines through the leaves of a tree.

Giribala was the wife of a wealthy man. She had no children, and she had nothing to do either. She had been gathering herself within herself for a long time. She had come almost to a bursting point. She had a husband who was not under her control. Heaven only knew how such a young and pretty wife could escape the attention of her husband.

In her girlhood days Giribala's husband was attentively loving to her. Her husband then was wont to run away from school and cheat his sleeping guardians, only to have love confabs with his wife at noon. Even though they lived in the same house, they were in the habit of writing love letters to each other on fancy letter paper. At times he even showed these letters to some of his special friends in school and felt proud of the deed. They even indulged in lovers' quarrels for trifling or no cause.

Suddenly Gopinath's father died and he became the master of the house. As an unseasoned plank is apt to be soon eaten up by worms, similarly when in his early youth Gopinath came into an immense fortune, he was taken possession of by human worms of different kinds. And gradually his visits to the zenana became scarcer as his visits to somewhere else increased in frequency.

There is a kind of intoxication in leadership, and the intoxication of spreading one's influence over other men is simply great. As Napoleon was intoxicated with the desire of spreading his influence over innumerable peoples and history in general, the intoxication of this young man over his small group of parlor friends was of the same nature. It is exciting to create a band of worthless hangers on and then to receive their applause. And there are many who are willing to waste their estates, run into debt, and suffer all kinds of humiliation for this kind of thing.

Gopinath was really inflated with the pride of his new position. He began to win new laurels every day for his foolishly clever talks. He felt so proud and in the excitement thereof he became indifferent to his duties and began to whirl like a log in a whirlpool.

On the other hand, Giribala, with her world conquering beauty, was ruling over the empty throne of her bedroom in the subjectless kingdom of the zenana. She knew that providence had put in her hands the scepter of beauty, she knew that the outside world she saw through the windows could be conquered by a mere wink of her eyes. And yet she had not succeeded in captivating even one man.

Giribala had a humorous maid. Her name was Sudhamukhi. For shortness' sake she was called Sudho. She could sing, dance, and chant. She was wont to describe the beauty of Giribala and lament over the waste of such a beauty at the hands of a worthless man. Giribala could not do without Sudho for any length of time. She was wont to listen to Sudho describing at length her enchanting facial expression, the formation of her body, her excellence of complexion. At times she would most cheerfully rebuke Sudho and call her a story teller and a flatterer. And Sudho, on the other hand, was wont to make sworn statements to prove their genuineness, which Giribala did not find difficult to believe.

Sudho used to sing the song entitled, "I Am Thy Slave, Beloved, I Am Thy Slave." On listening to this song Giribala was in the habit of imagining a slave at her feet singing in praise of her charming feet. But such slaves never came near her feet. She had to listen to the music of her bangles all alone.

Gopinath had become the slave of another woman. Her name was Labanga. She was an actress. She could faint at a moment's notice, and cry just as quickly. The excellence of her acting elicited tremendous applause.

Giribala often heard the story of Labanga's extraordinary acting from her husband. In those days her husband was not such a complete fugitive. Even though she did not know a thing about her husband's fascination for the actress, yet she felt a little jealous at heart. She could not bear the idea that another woman had the power to conquer a man's heart which she did not have. Through sheer curiosity she wanted to go to that particular theater, but her husband would not allow her to go.

At last she once sent Sudho to that theater. On Sudho's return she spoke disparagingly of the actress, and much more so of the men who were stupid enough to fall in love with such counterfeit human beings. Giribala was somewhat consoled to hear this.

But when her husband tore asunder the tie of love altogether, she began to doubt the words of Sudho. But Sudho assured her that that woman was just as unattractive as she could be. Giribala could not think of the reason for her peculiar charm so as to be able to enthrall the heart of her husband. Her pride was hurt tremendously and she was burning with rage.

At last she once secretly went to the theater with Sudho. There is always an extra degree of excitement in doing forbidden deeds. Through this novel excitement and beating of her heart the theater that was well lighted, crowded, well decorated, and reverberating with music looked doubly charming to her. It was really a surprise for her to come from the wall-surrounded zenana to this dazzlingly furnished theater. It seemed like a dream to her.

The opera of "Winning Back of Radha" was being enacted that evening. The bell rang. The music stopped. The restless audience became quiet in a moment. The footlights were turned brighter and a group of well dressed dancers appeared as the maids of Brindaban, and they began to sing as they danced. The entire theater began almost to shake with the thundering applause of the audience. Giribala's youthful heart began to beat faster in excitement. The melody of music, the enchantment of the singing and acting made Giribala forget for a moment all about the world and society. And the thought that in a place like that there was not the least barrier to carefree and charming freedom.

At intervals Sudho would thus tremblingly whisper into her ears: "Come, let us go home now, Bowthakrone, if dadababu comes to know about our adventure there will be trouble." Giribala did not mind her maid. She was no longer afraid of her husband in the least.

The play advanced. Radha, the heroine, was exceedingly stubborn, and Krishna, the hero, was almost lost in the ocean of Radha's unyielding pride. Krishna was begging Radha for love, he was coaxing and he was crying, but nothing could make the least impression on Radha. Giribala's heart began to palpitate in pride to see this performance. In the discomfiture of Krishna she began to feel her own prowess as in imagination she placed herself in the position of Radha.

No one had ever courted her that way. She had been a neglected, insulted, and discarded wife, and yet she felt within herself that she, too, had the power to make some one cry just as bitterly. She had so long heard or imagined about the irresistible prowess of beauty. But that night in the glare of the light on the stage and amidst music, she clearly saw it with her own eyes. She soon became intoxicated with the idea.

At last the curtain fell. The gas lights became faint. The audience was about to depart. But Giribala sat quiet in her seat as if in a trance. She had forgotten that she had to return home. She thought that the curtain would rise again; in fact, she could not think of anything else but the signal triumph of Krishna. In the meantime Sudho said: "Bowthakrone, what are you doing? Please get up. They will put out all lights immediately."

Giribala returned to her bedroom at midnight. A lamp was burning low in a corner. There was no one in the room and it was quiet. The curtain on the lonely bed was playing with the gentle breeze. Every day life seemed awkward and insignificant to her. She was thinking of that beautifully lighted and decorated stage full of music where she could display the full glory of her beauty and be the observed of all observers, and then she would no longer remain a mere unknown and neglected woman.

From this time she was wont to go to theaters once a week. Gradually the first glamour began to fade and she began to notice the awkward but painted faces and the artificial acting of the actresses, and yet she was under the hypnotic spell of the stage.

Just as a warrior becomes impatient at the beat of war drums, even so Giribala felt excited the moment the curtain was raised. For a woman of her unparalleled beauty nothing but the stage with all its magnificent sceneries, melodious music, and thundering applause could have more attractiveness.

The first day she saw her husband in the audience he was showing uncommon enthusiasm at the acting of a certain actress. She felt nothing but contempt for him. She wished that it were possible that her husband should fall at her feet like a fly with its wings burnt, and she would kick him aside and run away only to win his love. Then, she thought, she could feel consoled for the waste of her youth and beauty.

But such a day did not come. She could hardly see Gopinath any more. He was being carried like a pillar of dust before the storm of his infatuation, and no trace of him could be found.

It was the night of full moon in late spring. Giribala was dressed in a pink colored sari as she was seated on the roof. The loose end of her sari was flying in the west wind. Even though her husband did not come to see her, yet she was in the habit of dressing herself in different clothes and in adorning herself with different ornaments. She liked to hear the music of her ornaments of pearls and diamonds. Sudho was seated near, and was engaged in massaging the beautiful feet of her mistress.

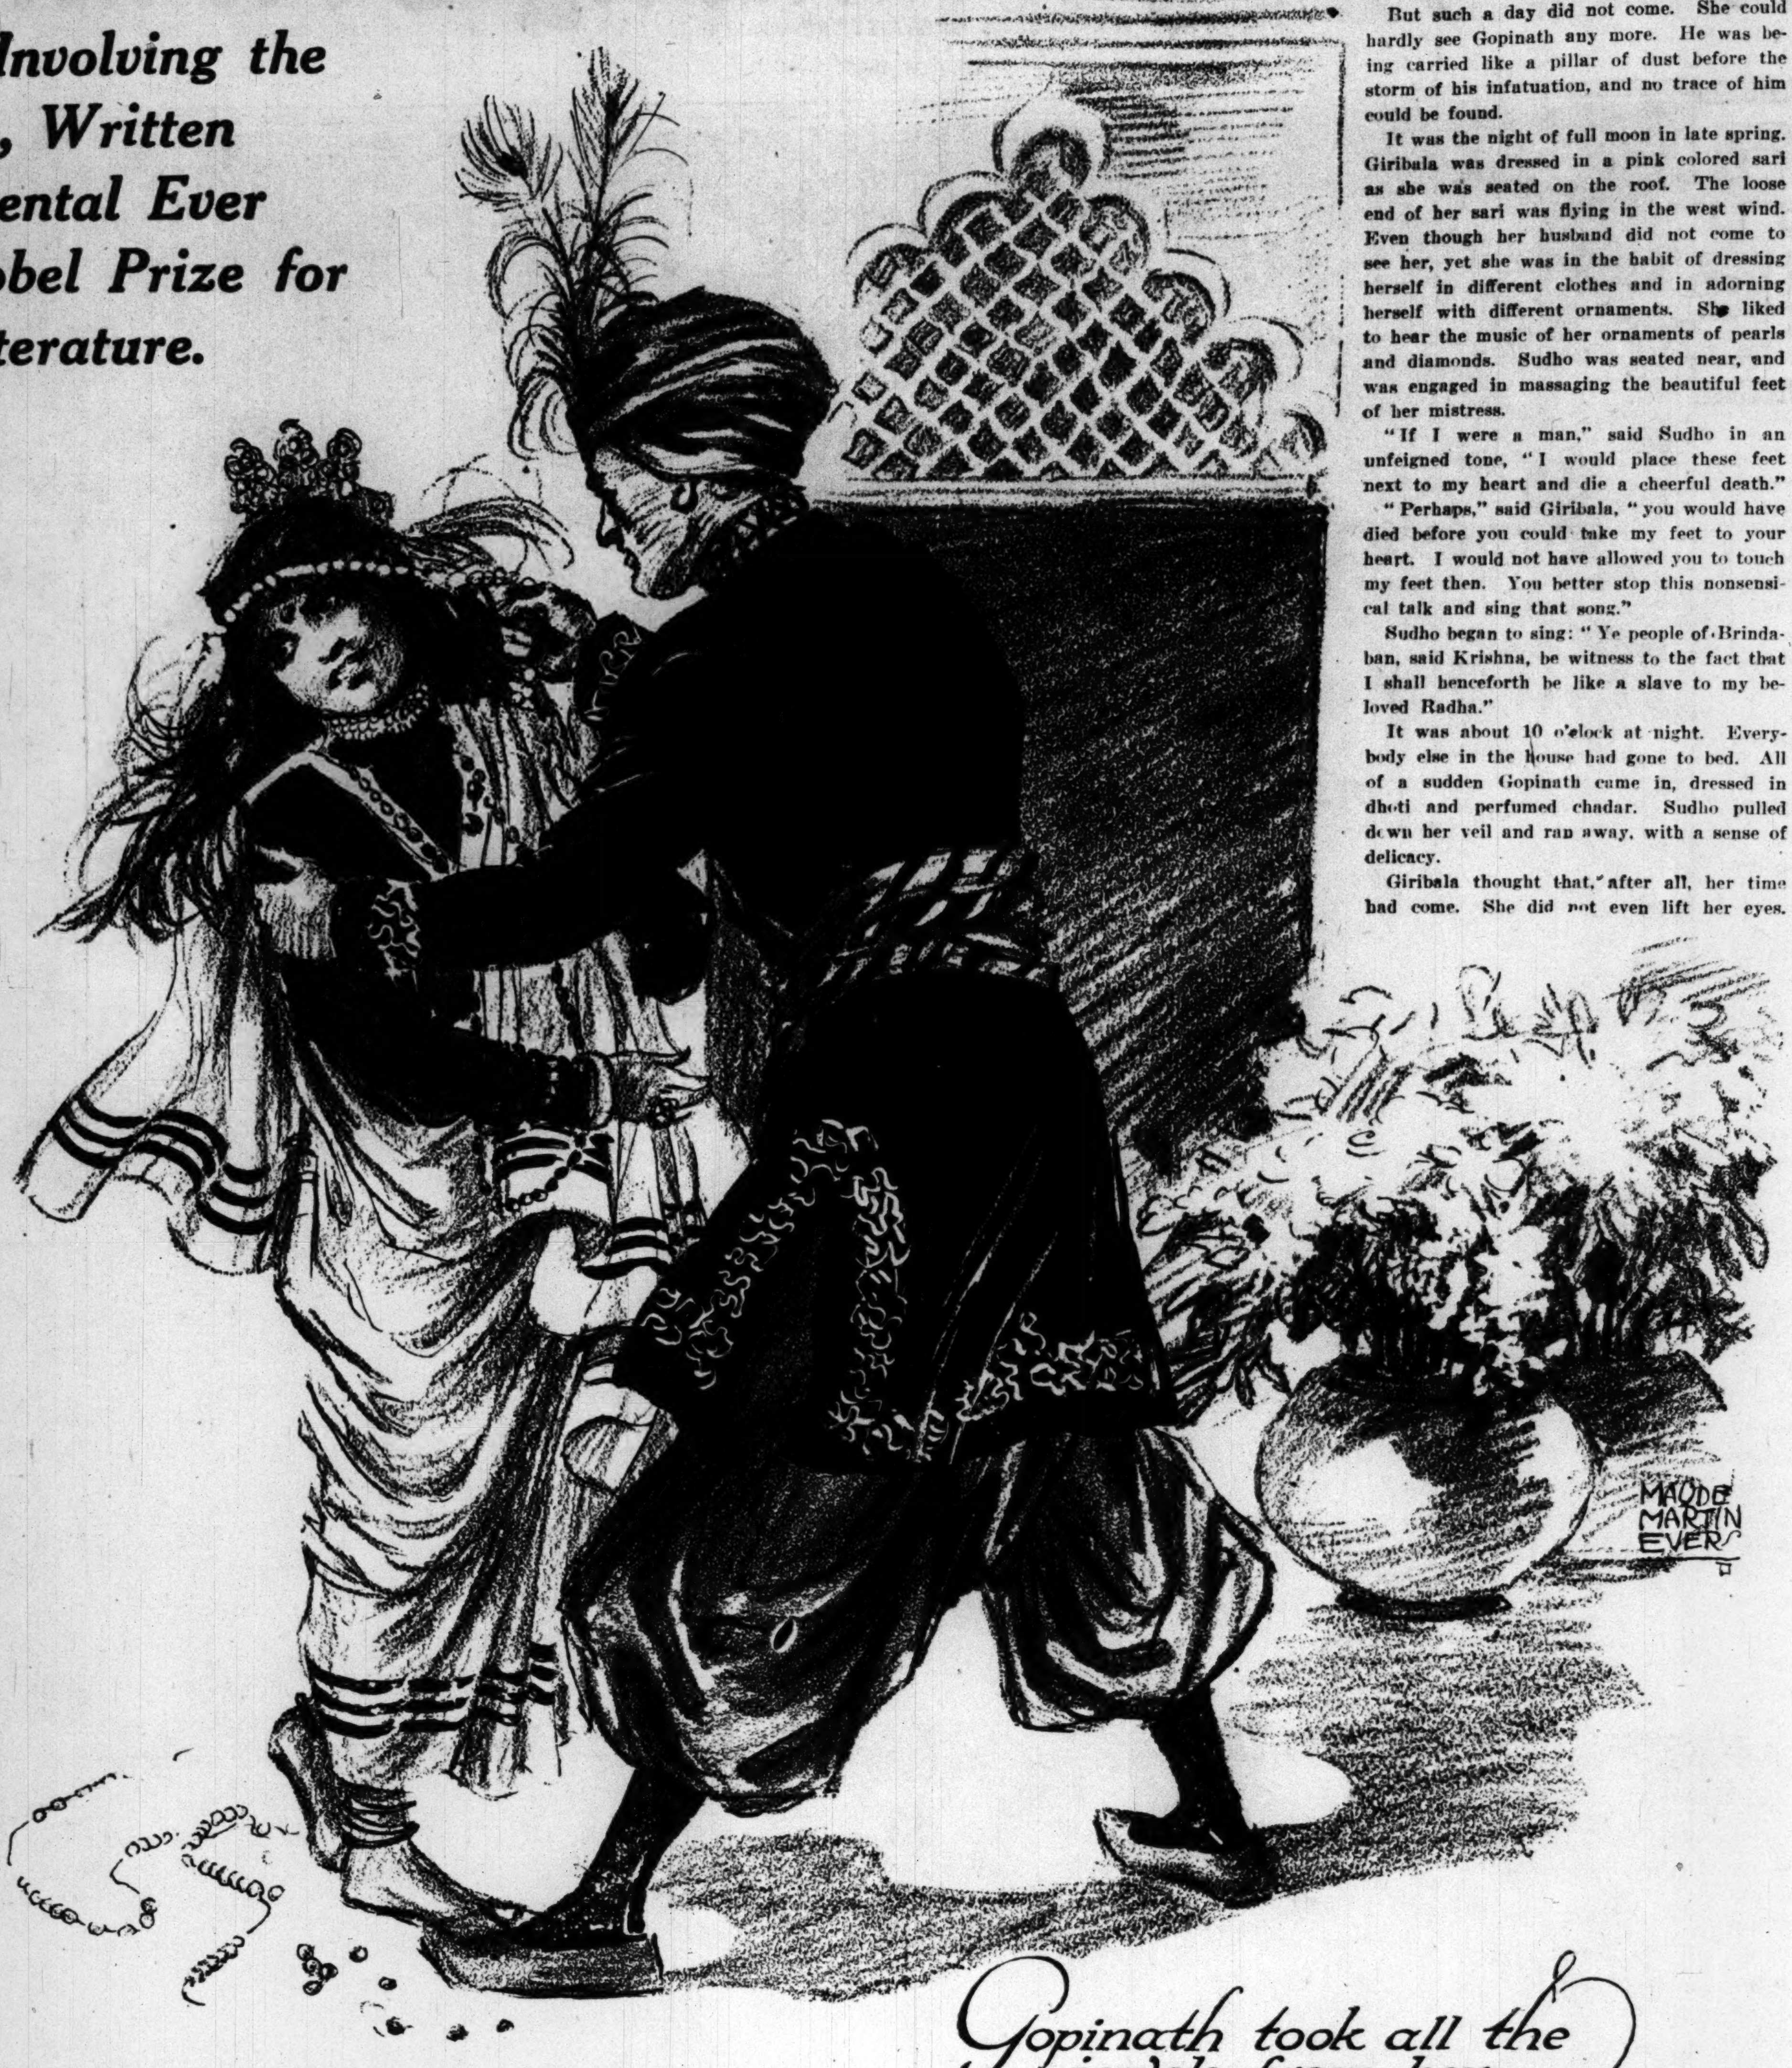
"If I were a man," said Sudho in an unfeigned tone, "I would place these feet next to my heart and die a cheerful death."

"Perhaps," said Giribala, "you would have died before you could take my feet to your heart. I would not have allowed you to touch my feet then. You better stop this nonsensical talk and sing that song."

Sudho began to sing: "Ye people of Brindaban, said Krishna, be witness to the fact that I shall henceforth be like a slave to my beloved Radha."

It was about 10 o'clock at night. Everybody else in the house had gone to bed. All of a sudden Gopinath came in, dressed in dhoti and perfumed chadar. Sudho pulled down her veil and ran away, with a sense of delicacy.

Giribala thought that, after all, her time had come. She did not even lift her eyes.



Gopinath took all the jewels from her body by force

She sat silent and motionless like Radha, in unbounden pride. But the curtain did not rise. The peacock feather cap of Krishna did not roll in dust at her feet. None sang in Kafi tune, "Why dost thou make the moonlit night dark by hiding your face?"

"Please give me the key," said Gopinath, in an unmusical tone.

Giribala had seen her husband after a long time, and on such a romantic night what a prosaic theme of conservation!

Everything that was written in novels and poems seemed false to Giribala from beginning to end. It was only on the stage that lovers fell at the feet of the beloved. And how strange that the same Gopinath that was wild in applauding the actress on the stage came to his young and pretty wife on such a spring night and simply asked for a key! There was no music, no melody, and certainly no feeling in the asking.

The gentle west wind blew over the roof like the sigh of neglected poesy. The perfume of jasmines enlivened the air on the roof. The powdered perfume flew on her face, and the end of her pink colored sari began carelessly to flutter in the air. Giribala bid adieu to her sense of pride and delicacy, stood up, caught hold of her husband's hand, and said: "I shall give you the key; come, let us go into the room." Tonight she promised to cry and make him cry; and she also promised to realize all her idle dreams by using all the tactics of love. She was really determined to win.

"You better give me the key," said Gopinath; "I can't wait any longer."

"I shall give you the key and all that it leads to, but you shan't be able to go anywhere tonight."

"That's impossible; I have an important piece of business to attend to."

"Then I shan't give you the key."

"You will have to. I shall see how you can make good your threat."

Gopinath searched Giribala for the key in vain. He searched the dressing bureau, but the key was not there. Then he broke open Giribala's box of toilet articles; but there was no key to be found. He broke open the almirrah and threw the bed topsy turvy, but all in vain.

Giribala stood like a statue with her hand on the door and looking out intently on the roof. Gopinath was trembling with rage as he said: "You must give me the key, else it will go hard with you."

Giribala spoke not a word, but Gopinath took all the jewels from her body by force and pushed her aside in anger as he left.

No one's sleep was disturbed in the house. The neighbors knew not a thing about it. The moonlit night was quiet as before. Peace reigned on all sides. But if the terrible cry of the heart could be heard outside, then even the beautiful night would have rent the sky with its bitter cry. It is in silence that such terrible tragedies of life are enacted.

Even such a terrible night dawned as usual. The story of such a defeat and discomfiture Giribala could not tell even Sudho. She thought of taking revenge for this insult by committing suicide. But she at once realized that no one in the world would be affected by her death, and that none would miss her. There was thus no happiness for Giribala in life and no consolation even in death.

So she thought of going to her father's home, which was far away from Calcutta. Every one in the family requested her not to go. But the mistress of the house did not mind them. She went to her father's home alone. Gopinath, on the other hand, mysteriously disappeared in a boat with his entire retinue.

II.

Gopinath was wont to attend almost every performance in the Gandharba theater. His mistress, Labanga, used to take the part of Mrinadini in the play of the same name. Gopinath sat in the front row with his friends, applauded loudly, and threw bouquets on the stage. He at times incurred the displeasure of the audience by rowdyism. But even the manager of the theater did not dare to prohibit him for behaving that way.

Once Gopinath entered the green room and was exceedingly boisterous. For an imagined insult he thrashed an actress. The cry of this abused actress and the indecent language of Gopinath startled the audience. The manager, unable to bear it any longer, put him out of the theater by the help of the police.

The insulted aristocrat promised himself to take revenge on the manager for this act. More than a month before the Durgapuja holidays the management of the theater had been advertising a new play, "Manorama." Advertisements of this play almost covered the entire city.

In the meantime Gopinath ran away with Labanga, the prominent actress of the play, in a boat, and no search could discover them. The management of the theater was in great trouble. They waited for Labanga for a considerable length of time, but at last were obliged to train a new actress for the part of Monorama. So the play was delayed.

But it was not much of a loss. The play was a tremendous success. The theater was overcrowded every night. Thousands were turned away from the door. The papers spoke highly of the play and the acting.

Gopinath came to know of the tremendous success of the play. He could not resist the temptation of seeing the play. So, filled both with curiosity and enmity, he came to see the play one night.

In the first part of the play Manorama was dressed in humble clothes and attended her household duties like a meek little girl. She did not speak much, and her face was veiled.

In the latter part Manorama's husband sent her to her father's home and was about to marry, through sheer greed of money, the only daughter of a millionaire. When after marriage the husband scrutinizingly looked at the face of his wife he discovered the same Manorama, his former wife. The only difference was that she was no longer dressed in poor costume, but was dressed in queenly raiments. The splendor of her physical attractiveness was highly enhanced by the jewels on her body. In her childhood Manorama was kidnaped and was raised in a poor man's home. Her father discovered her identity after a long time and so managed to bring her home and thus give her away in a second marriage of splendor to her husband. In the bridal chamber the husband was trying to win back the love of his discarded wife.

In the meantime great excitement was created in the audience. As long as Manorama was veiled and in a poor dress Gopinath sat quiet and patiently listened to Manorama's acting. But when she stood in her bridal chamber in right regal splendor with her veil off, and when she was looking at the audience with her neck little curved in pride, and when she cast a disdainful look on Gopinath, who was seated at the front, and when the entire audience was captivated by the singular charm of the actress and was applauding wildly, then suddenly Gopinath stood up and shouted, "Giribala, Giribala!" and ran to leap on the stage. The musicians in the orchestra stopped him.

The audience was terribly enraged at this ludicrous break in the play, and from different corners they began to shout both in English and Bengali: "Put him out. Throw him out at once!"

But Gopinath kept crying like a madman: "Giribala! My Giribala!"

Charles Ray

CHARLES RAY of Kay-Bee-Triangle is one of the youngest leading men in pictures. He was born March 15, 1891, in Jacksonville, Fla. He received his education in Illinois and California. He is not at all hard to look at, being six feet one inch in height and possessing dark brown eyes and dark brown hair. He tips the scales at 167. For three years Mr. Ray has been in pictures, having worked with various companies. He was on the stage before taking up screen work, playing with repertoire and stock companies. His automobile is his hobby. Says he: "I enjoy working on it and I have gained a fair knowledge. It's nice to know the carburetor from the spark plug." Golf, tennis, swimming, and water polo are the sports at which Mr. Ray is most proficient. A picture in which he was quite wonderful was "The Coward." He was featured with Frank Keenan.

THE CASE OF PARIS GREEN.
(Nutty Novel.)
BY GORDON SEAGROVE.
CONCLUSION.

Now there would be trouble. Mr. Whoosh, the director, she knew adored her. She had her career before her. Supposing in jealousy he should forbid her acting in his company! She resolved to tell him. Together she and Jasper told him all.

When he heard he wept bitterly. "If I had only known," he said brokenly, "I never would have given up my boyhood dream of being a teamster. But now—now it is too late."

"No," spoke up Jasper Seidlitz, "there is yet time." He spoke in French. "Why not let me be director of this joint and you take my place on the beer wagon?"

A look of unending gratitude came into Mr. Whoosh's eyes. His thanks was pitiful. With a sob he kissed the honest teamster's hands.

"Good-bby, Paris," he sobbed. "I hope you are happy."

Paris' eyes filled with tears. She could not bear to look at the bent figure as it trudged out of the studio gate. Weakly she turned to Jasper. "It is for the best," she sighed.

So, as the sun set that was setting, the veil closed on the life of Paris Green and Jasper; but we know from the screen that they have succeeded, and that sometimes, when they are thirsty, a beer wagon stops beside their mansion.

The driver is an old man. It is old Whoosh. When he drives away his eyes are filled with tears. Some say that he cries because he still loves Paris.

But they are wrong.

He has failed to collect the bill again.

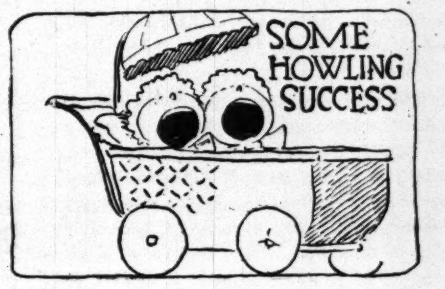
MAE TINEE'S ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS

"ASK ME! ASK ME!"

FRANCES A.: No, Frank Mayo and Ruth Roland are not married to each other. Frank Mayo is not the brother of Edna Mayo. It is not necessary to have stage experience to become a motion picture player. Better send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the printed information I have on the same.

MRS. R.: You say you're sure your six months old twins would do well in pictures? My dear Mrs. R. you may be right but I can hardly see just how you can determine their qualifications at so early an age. They would, however, undoubtedly be a howling success.



NATALIE: Thank you, my dear Natalie, for "admiring me oodles" and loving my "pep." I am glad you "dote on raving on," and I assure you that I know of no pleasanter diversion than reading your letters. I do not blame you for being "mad" about Marguerite Clarke. She is a great little screen artist. No, my child, I cannot tell you what you ask even though I do veil my language. It would not be fair. O, no doubt about it, Harold Lockwood's "a pet," and I agree with you that he has a "good look to his face" and certainly "a respectful attitude on the screen." Write again, Natalie. By-by.

A. S.: In "The Adventures of Kathlyn" Thomas Santschi took the part of Bruce.

ETHEL H.: I am told that Crane Wilbur was married again quite recently to a nonprofessional. Maybe you will write more frequently now that you have discovered that I do like to receive and answer letters. No, the picture of the actor you mentioned has not been in "The Frame of Public Favor." He didn't get votes enough, Ethel, dash why.

ETHEL: Sorry you missed your answer, Ethel. I sure do answer every query I get, though sometimes it does take some time to get every answer printed. Bessie Barriscale is in her 20's. She is married to Howard Hickman. Cleo Madison is not married. Donald Hall is in his 30's. O, yas'm, ah shuah think he am one han'som gem'man!

MATTIE: I am so glad you wrote to me, dear little "almost 13." Your letter was so interesting. Some time perhaps you will let me have a peep at the many books you have "made full of movie players." Yes, I like all the people you mention. I think probably that if you write, sending self-addressed envelope and 25 cents for pictures, they will be glad to mail their photographs to you. I do not think you are a bit silly, Mattie, and I do wish you would write again some time.

E. M.: Viola Dane is in her 20's. Yes, she vurr' pretty.

ANXIOUS: Be anxious no longer; it was a wig that was cut in "Poor Little Peppina." It is too bad that you are in such a fever of unrest to procure a lock of Mary Pickford's hair. Just think, Anxious, what an awful thing it would be to give a lock of her hair to every one of her admirers.

THIRTY-THREE: Send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the information I have on scenario writing and a list of firms that accept scenarios. Vurr' glad to accommodate you.

ART B.: Mighty glad to hear from you again, Art. Following is the cast of "A Man of Honor": Carter, George Marlo; banker, J. H. Gilmour; the twins, Madeline and Marion Fairbanks; pugilist, Bert Keyes.

WINNIE N.: Indeed, I am glad to answer questions. Just write and ask anything you want to know any time. Address Florence La Badie, care of the Thanhouser company, New Rochelle, N. Y.; Theda Bara, Fox Feature Film company, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York. Beverly Bayne is the young woman who plays most often with Mr. Bushman. Yes, he has five children. The last company Lottie Pickford was affiliated with was the American. She had a little new baby recently, and I suppose is out of pictures for the present. Clara Kimball Young has her own company now. It is called the Clara Kimball Young Feature Film company. Y'wekkum.

B. H.: Tell you what you do, dear lady, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and I will mail you the printed article I have on the subject which you say is so dear to your heart.

M. M. H.: Edna Mayo is with the Essanay company, 1333 Argyle street, Chicago. Creighton Hale is married. Harold Lockwood is with the Metro company. Pathé is not giving out the name of who it is that takes the part of "The Laughing Mask." Vurr', vurr' wekkum.

PEARL: You addressed it right, lady, but sometimes it takes a number of weeks before the answer goes into the paper. You see, I receive many questions daily and they must be answered in turn. You will probably get the photographs in time. I have no information regarding the other actors you mention. I am vurr', vurr' sorry.

FARMER: There is no reason why the plot you evolved while plowing the fields should not be quite as good as any plot conceived under other circumstances. Some of the biggest discoveries in the world have come from the minds of men while out in the open. I wish you luck.

PLOT! PLOT! PLOT!

DOROTHY M.: Methinks you have the name wrong, Dorothy, and mean J. Warren Kerrigan. He is not married. He is in his 20's and is with the Universal company, Universal City, Cal. No, the picture of the actress you mention has not been in "The Frame of Public Favor." Save your votes and put her in.

Grace Cunard received the highest number of votes last week. Her picture, therefore, will appear in The Frame of Public Favor next Sunday. Of the other players voted upon the following six are the leaders: Arthur Hoops, Harold Lockwood, Beverly Bayne, Marshall Neilan, Helen Holmes, and Anna Little.

EXTRAVAGANT NEW YORK

No. 2

by BURNS MANTLE

SPENDING a MILLION a NIGHT

The Typical New Yorker Is Comparatively a Tightwad; It Is the Outsider Who Throws Away the Coin.

This is the second of a series of four articles on extravagant New York's most extravagant year.

SPENDING a million dollars a night on a "good time" is perhaps the easiest and the hardest thing that New York does. Easy, because money so spent flows out of hand as the sands of the beach run through the fingers of children at play. Hard, because there is nothing more deadly than the search of a satiated public for a new diversion.

But the New York we speak of in this instance is not that localized community where 5,000,000 people are huddled together in a mess, but rather the New York that is the spenders' Mecca of America and, just now, the amusement capital of the whole wide world.

Crowds, they say, are still going to the theaters in London. There are still a few gay spots in Paris where joy, though muffled, is still more or less unconfined. Berlin, according to the optimists who have passed the censor, is as lively as though her prize regiments were maneuvering joyfully in place of fighting desperately. And there is enough gayety in Petrograd and Budapest and Vienna to keep the minds of the people from brooding too constantly.

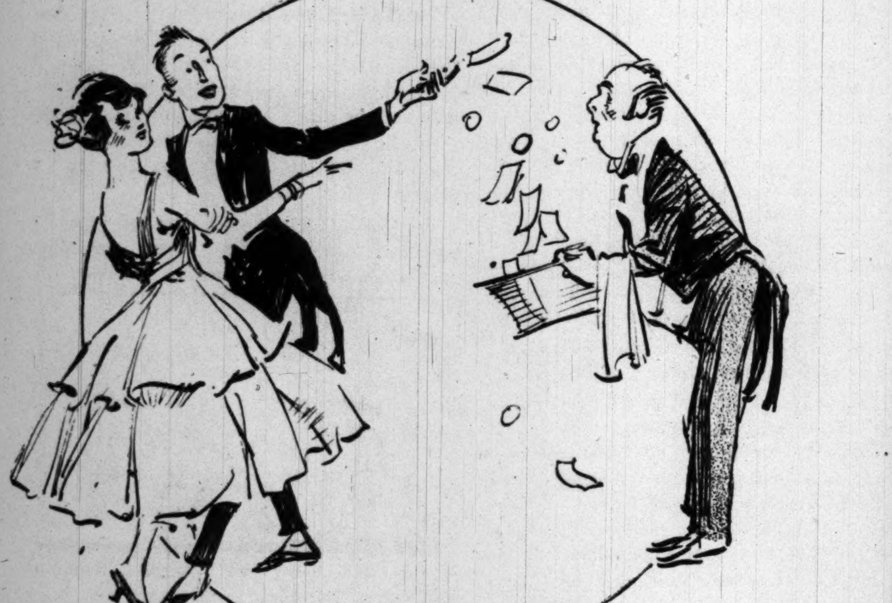
But in no other city in the world are the bars down as they are in New York. And in no other city probably in the history of the world has so much money been spent by so many people on amusements alone within the same limit of time as has been spent in New York this last winter.

There have been two angles to this orgy of extravagance. One represents the fools suddenly enriched by gambling on the stock market or by the sudden expansion of their war supply business; the other the natural spenders to whom a present prosperity has given a new sense of security. Speaking generally, there is less thought of the morrow and more of the day—and particularly the night—that is here.

By the record they have become expensive playfellows, these Knickerbockers. One can hear Columbia discussing them with Uncle Sam when her western children start east to visit.

"Sam, I am not going to have Rollo playing with those Knickerbockers. They are too rough and they spend too much money. I can't imagine what their parents are thinking of."

And Sam looks worried, but says nothing, though he probably seriously considers the advisability of writing a note about it.



For downright stupid wickedness, for the sort of thing that shines out as a naughty deed in the returning traveler's account of what he has seen and done in New York, we are strongly convinced the reports are as wildly exaggerated as they are when the subject is the wickedness of Paris before the war. And yet, compared with life in the average American center of trade, New York is undoubtedly a very sink of iniquitous possibilities.

* *

Riotous Display of Money Spending.

One cannot, for instance, take note of developing night life amusements without realizing the increasing lack of respect for decent sleeping hours and a clear head in the morning. It is no longer a question of a few show places for the expense account boys gathered from afar. And it is no longer a matter of occasional slumming parties organized among socially inclined natives. It is becoming a regularly accepted part of the day's diversion that entertainment shall commence soon after sundown and continue until shortly before sunup—if one hurries.

Midnight shows, yclept "frolics," have become as elaborate as early evening shows; midnight as crowded an hour on the streets surrounding the white light district as 8 o'clock; 2 and 3 o'clock as common hours for retiring as 11:30 used to be in the good old days.

There is no riotous display of money spending, but everybody appears to be doing a good job of it, or trying to. Whether it is because the $5,000 man has become a $10,000 man in these days of a prosperity we hear so much about or whether it merely reflects the imitative habits of the mob falling in behind the few thousands who have made war time fortunes we cannot say. But that there has been a change, and within the last few years, there can be not the least doubt. There are popular dancing places in New York today, frequented in the early morning hours by the high and the low, socially considered, that give as fine exhibitions of what one imagines the cheaper pagan revels were in the days of Rome's decline as may easily be imagined.

A painted, half drunken, garishly costumed mob of men and women locked in a varied assortment of emotional grips and keeping as good time to the rhythmic and barbaric beat of the music as the crowd and its condition permits! A sight for gods and unsuspecting men and women that must give the most reckless of us pause.

* *

Spenders Mostly Outsiders.

But your Uncle Samuel knows that all this cannot reasonably be charged to the account of the Knickerbocker children. They have a larger nursery and more playthings than the other children, and they live constantly in an atmosphere in which spending money is a part of the business day. Also they are naturally more nervous and more active, but——

Columbia should watch her little western and southern Rollos when they strike New York. More than that, she should try to keep up with them. Uncle Sam knows how they act. That is why he keeps so quiet. Probably four-fifths of the extravagant spending that is done in New York is done by outsiders or in the entertainment of outsiders. The native with money to spend goes to Palm Beach, as he has done this year, or to French Lick, or to Nassau to spend it. Yet there is easily a million a day spent at home.

How? You should see them in action, these spenders!

You should take a night to it, or two or three nights, and parade with the largest part of them from Thirty-fourth to Seventy-second street, and watch a quarter million dollars change hands in the theaters and cabarets, and you would have a pretty fair idea of how it is done.

You will then have to reckon in the cost of a thousand celebrations held more or less in private—gentlemen celebrating, for instance, the winnings of the day at Belmont, where betting is not permitted legally but still flourishes wonderfully; where those of honorable standing in the books of the bookies may bet anything from a hundred to a thousand by merely indicating the name of a horse and wiggling a finger or two or three, and be as sure of getting his money next day as he is of paying his loss should he lose.

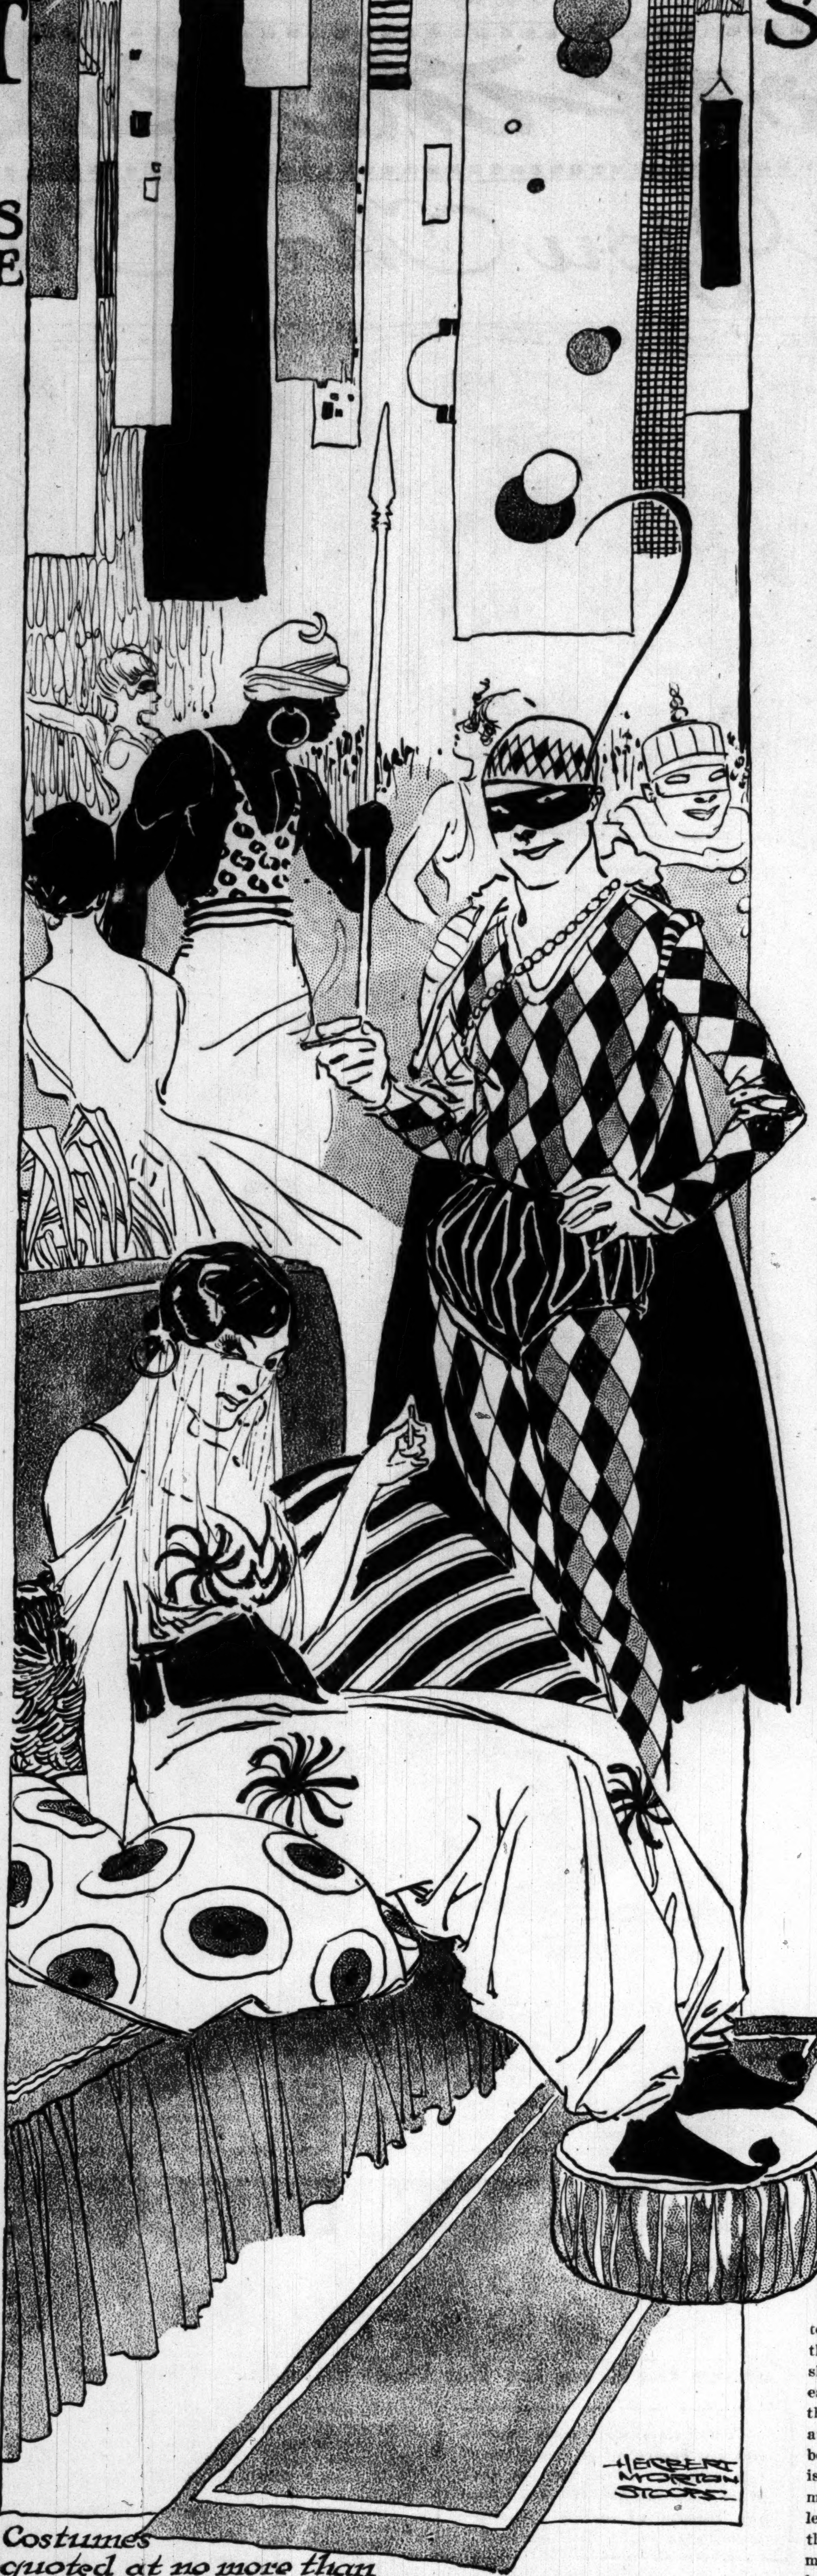
Besides which there are debutante parties, and dancing parties, and theater parties, and skating parties, and war benefits by the merry hundred, and wonderful musicals and plain celebrations of this deal and that deal in Wall street—until you will find the daily total spent on having a good time enormous beyond the computing.

* *

Cost of a "Good Show."

In the vast scheme of money spending in New York the theaters come first in the reckoning. They surround the hotel district like side shows run in connection with a monster circus, each with its flaring incandescent promise of impending joys inside—some freakish, some not. And out of the hotels there swarm at night a hundred thousand visitors and friends bent on seeing what they invariably ask for the first thing after the lad has put down the suitcase, raised the window shade, and accepted his quarter—"a good show." Normally there are fifty of these "good shows" close at hand and ready to oblige if one take them all at their published promises.

But theater going per se is not to be regarded as an extravagance. It is really the most logical diversion an amusement capital has to offer, and its cost is not excessive—excepting when the attractiveness of the bill or the occasion, such as the more important first nights provide, boosts the demand for seats far beyond the available supply. It is what goes with theater going these days that brings the cost of this diversion up near the head of the list of extravagances. A "good show" costs no more than it has for years; but who nowadays among those with money to spend would think of giving even a small theater party without a dinner before or a supper following—usually both?



Costumes quoted at no more than $200 or $300 were common.

And what does such an evening cost the host? For a party of four he can spend, without an effort, from $60 to $75 and still be perfectly unhappy when he realizes in the taxi on the way home that he forgot to send the ladies any flowers. The division of cost here is easy and reasonable to the present day entertainer—$25 to $35 for the dinner (with wine costing from $7 to $10 a bottle), $10 for seats to the theater from his broker, $8 for seats to the best of the midnight cabarets, another $10 or $15 for supper, and the rest for taxis.

The young man with any pride in his social standing—the same young man, that is to say, who used to feel that if he paid $4 for theater seats, $4 for carriage hire, and $5 for a modest supper after the theater he was doing the thing quite beautifully—now figures on $25 for the same evening's amusement.

Two young couples we know, nerve tired of the suburb in which they lived, tired of the neighbors, tired of dashing for the theater on the 7:32 and dashing out of the theater or away from a modest sandwich to catch the 12:13, determined to make an event of their next party in town. They would go to a hotel and stay over night. "I had rather go once a month and do it comfortably than every week and be so infernally rushed," declared one naturally economical young wife. And her husband agreed.

When the two husbands settled up their accounts after the party they discovered that, although a reasonable economy had been their watchword, they were out a lot of money. Their hotel bills approximated $20 for lodging and breakfasts. Their dinner, with a light wine, had made a fearful hole in another $20. Their theater seats had, because they wanted to see one of the hits, cost them $12. Their table at a midnight frolic $8, what they spent at table between dances $5, and the "early breakfast" they had before they retired $6.

Now these particular four have gone back to the inconvenience of catching theater trains. They have gone back, in fact, even farther than that. The wives, who are the real theatergoers, now edge in a matinée with their shopping. But where two such average upper middle class families have temporarily retrenched hundreds have accepted the new order as a reasonable custom of the times, and wherever the income will stand the strain such parties, from in town and out, are common. Hotels have hundreds of requests for such week end and one day accommodations.

* *

Willing to Pay High.

The opera season has been the most successful in the history of the Metropolitan. Ordinarily seats on Caruso nights have been held at $6 and by the speculators at $8 and $10. This season $15 has been a common price on these big nights. The Russian ballet was added to the regular season and included in the list of subscription nights. Otherwise it probably would have failed of at least a part of the financial success it won, for, truth to tell, it created nothing resembling a furore. When Nijinsky was added to the cast, however, curiosity to see him helped the season, and for his last few appearances he also had the honor of having speculators collect as high as $15 a seat from those eager to see him.

This fact may be taken as a free indication of the public's attitude toward amusements this year. Anything they (the people) have wanted to see they have been willing to pay what they had to for the privilege. In other years they would not have done so. Money has not been flung about more spectacularly than usual, but there has been much more of it in evidence. And not only the opera but all the theatrical attractions on Broadway have had the most prosperous year they have enjoyed in the last decade.

One thing that has helped considerably with the success of both the opera and theater seasons has been the fact that hundreds of society folk, held at home by their inability to travel and wearied by the crowd and their failure to get satisfactory accommodations at Palm Beach, have done much entertaining in town. And a favorite way of entertaining is to give a huge theater party, followed by supper and dancing at Sherry's or the Ritz, with the Vanderbilt and the Biltmore as second choice. Most of the supper dances, in fact, have followed theater parties of fifty or more.

During the skating craze of the early winter there were many large theater parties given at the Hippodrome, where the featured act of the bill was the spectacle "Skating at St. Moritz," in which a troupe of fancy skaters, headed by a delectable young fairy shod with steel and named Charlotte executed an ice ballet on the frozen surface of the Hippodrome tank. If they were made up of skating enthusiasts these parties went on to the Biltmore, where there also was skating in an Italian garden with an ice floor and where it was not the least bit difficult to add another hundred or two to the evening's bill. If they were dancing parties they adjourned to one of the other hotels, where the private ballrooms had good floors and the management provided the best of music.

Society, in fact, found skating rather difficult as a fad. It was not easy, for instance, to go to the theater in an evening gown and then to a skating party and effect a change of shoes and costume en route. Neither was it easy to send one's skating togs on ahead. And the thought of appearing at dinner or the theater in plain everyday clothes was quite unbearable. On the other hand, dancing was and is always possible. So there has been much more dancing than skating, and there seems no let down in enthusiasm. There is no longer the interest there was a year or two ago, and many of the numerous neighborhood pavilions have disappeared. But the social elect and their imitators are still at it. While skating lasted it provided a ready means by which to be rid of money. Costumes of real leather, costing as high as $400 and $500 each, were numerous enough to be almost common. They provided bindings for some of our rarest debutante editions—bindings the "editions" never will be able to wear out, unless they have them made over as bifurcated riding costumes.

Elaborate Functions for Younger Set.

There were a few spectacular home parties, but not many. The one that caused the most talk, perhaps, though it did not cost so much, was the celebration by Mr. and Mrs. Edwin B. Close at the Ritz-Carlton of their tenth (tin) wedding anniversary. Mrs. Close, daughter of the late C. W. Post of Battle Creek, came in for the most of the $30,000,000 estate he left so there's a reason for whatever minor extravagances she may wish to indulge.

For this tin party 400 invitations were sent out, and something like twice that number of tin presents came back. There was a huge tin bathtub filled with roses and rolled out upon the ballroom floor; half a dozen tin bread boxes filled with chrysanthemums and an ingenious cluster of kitchen things tied together as a bouquet. Mrs. Close wore a gown of cloth of silver which cost a heap of money and carried a specially constructed and painted bouquet of tin roses.

The three junior assemblies which are the events of the year for the younger set and are given in November, January, and February, have been somewhat more elaborate than usual, and the spirit of the time has entered into the dinners that preceded and the suppers that followed them. Again you will observe the significant new note among the spenders—the growing desire to do more and more and to be rid of more and more money in a never ending search for a diversion that will really divert.

A junior assembly, for instance, for many, many years was considered the one event of the season in the social lives of the young people. It was anticipated with enthusiasm and approached decorously and with dignity. If there were dinner parties preceding it they were comparatively modest, though formal home affairs, and if there were parties following, which was not often the case, they were simple little late lunch events on the way home or in the public dining room below stairs at Sherry's. Now they are veritable spreads, and a spread, even with the younger set, usually includes more or less polite drinking.

There have been stories, too, of slumming excuses that carried detached groups to those talked of eating, dancing, and drinking places that dent Broadway—to Bustanoby's domino room, where to enjoy the privileges of an all night license the patrons must join the club, pay a nominal initiation fee, and sign a register; to Claridge's, or Rector's, or Murray's, and even on to Healy's, which also has an all night license and where you can be sure of but one thing—that no matter how late you stay you will always meet some one coming in as you are going out; some one who not infrequently happens to be the very last one you expected to see. Even to Jack's, where the air is thick with smoke and hiccoughs till daylight and after and where they seem to serve enough Irish bacon and scrambled eggs between 4 and 6 a. m. to feed all the troops in Flanders.

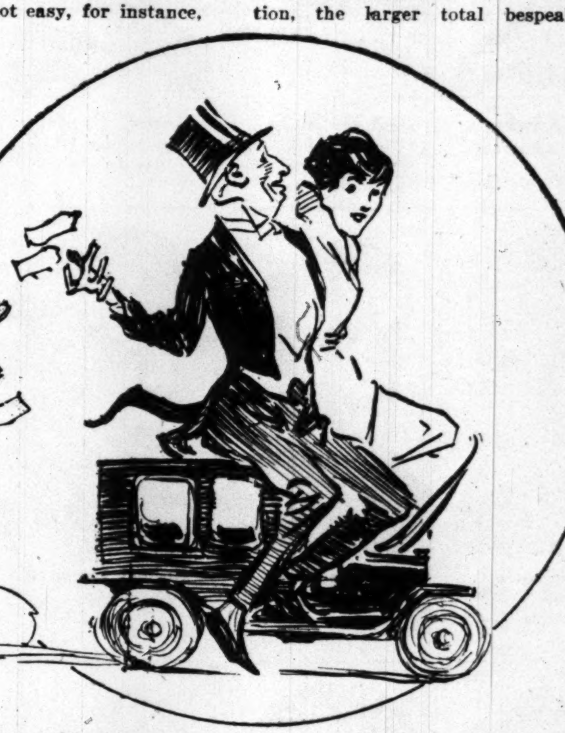
Charity Gets Benefit.

Society is only a fringe on this newly developed night life, and, be it said to society's credit, rather a clean fringe. It stays away rather consistently from the popular and common resorts, save at the beginning of the run of each new entertainment, when not to go is not to be informed of what is going on in the Broadway world. And it does its staying up late in the less frequented and reasonably decent places, dancing perhaps an hour after the theater and then going home.

Then there is another item to consider in this year of seemingly riotous extravagance—the money that has been given to charity and to the war funds. Twenty millions of dollars, by one estimate. And while society has accepted some of the affairs as excuses on which to spend other thousands in preparation, the larger total bespeaks an open handed, unselfish generosity that one day the whole world must acknowledge.



There was the Beaux Arts ball at the Astor, where the costumes worn represented an expenditure of $200,000, and one fancy gentleman alone admitted that what covered his aristocratic person had cost $2,500. Costumes quoted at no more than $200 and $300, although made especially for this event, were so common as to get no more than a single line of type in the society columns.

There has, in fact, been a vast amount of wild spending of this sort, which, we hold, is much to the credit of a city frequently accused of living its own life entirely to the glory of Satan and under the personally conducted direction of his imps.

But even then there is no overlooking that million a night spent for a "good time." What should we do about that?

Perhaps the conventional thing would be to inquire, significantly, how many troops that sum would outfit. Or how many hospitals. We might, were that our present purpose, suggest that if Germany can improve the health of its people so wonderfully by organizing a one meatless day a week campaign, New York might cut out its fun for one day in every seven and build a regular navy, or raze a few hundred tenements and build new ones. We might even go so far as to figure that if all that million was changed into dollar bills, and these bills were placed end to end, they would swath a considerable territory in a unique bandage or stack as high as the Woolworth tower. But at that sort of statistical flight you are quite as good as we are, so we leave it to you.

GLORIA'S ROMANCE

SYNOPSIS.

Dr. Stephen Royce and Dick Freneau, an adventurer, love Gloria Stafford, daughter of the multimillionaire. Gloria, lost in the Florida everglades, is really saved by Royce, but Freneau, who also searched, gets the credit by a mean trick of fate. Freneau proposes and is secretly accepted, but Stafford pere makes them promise to wait five years. Meanwhile Freneau pursues his affair with Lois Freeman Stafford, wife of David Stafford, Gloria's brother, and becomes partner to the broker, Mulry. When the five years end, Gloria, out of school, is so matured Freneau doesn't recognize her—a terrible slight. Freneau, however, re-establishes himself with her, and plans a hasty marriage, as he and Mulry need money badly. Lois learns of the intended marriage and threatens suicide rather than witness it. Freneau temporizes—declares he loves her (Lois) but must marry Gloria for financial reasons. Lois believes. David, her husband, by an anonymous letter, learns of Lois' infatuation for Freneau—whose name is synonymous with disgraceful affairs. In fact, Gideon Trask, father of Nell, one of his unfortunate victims, is on Freneau's trail swearing revenge. Planning to test her, David tells Lois he is to be out of town a week—but doesn't go. Meanwhile Lois promises to meet Freneau at the soldiers' monument, from where they will go to a Catskill village for a week. Each has damaging love letters in possession. Royce knows of the appointment. To deceive Gloria during his absence Freneau has written love letters, dating them from various cities. Mulry mails them. Freneau goes to the monument. There he is killed. Three men are seen near him. Gloria sees it all from her window. Royce thinks it is merely delirium. The fake love letters begin to arrive and add corroboration to this theory.

A PITIFUL joke fate played on Gloria. She had ordered her wedding gown while she was dangerously ill. But now her bridegroom would not appear. The newspapers said that he was drowned in the lower bay. She believed she had seen him throttled to death on Riverside drive, and her mourning was embittered with doubt.

At such an incongruous moment the little bridal gown came home from the dressmaker's to torture her with its beauty and its futile intent. Gloria was in her bedroom, looking out of her window at the fateful monument below, living over again the scene of the murder.

With the pathetic droop of her head, and her arms hanging at her sides, and the long lines of her gown sweeping about her inert, almost lifeless form, she stood like a Tanagra figurine of grief. Poor little soul, she was just entering the real world of womanhood when the grim arms of tragedy enfolded her! It was her first great sorrow.

Her old nurse came toward her. Gloria stirred, gave a little moan of horror, and ran to lay her head on the nurse's breast, sobbing out her pent-up agony.

"It can't be true! I can't bear it! It's too horrible. A week ago he was alive and happy. Now he—O, I'll go mad if I think about what he is now!"

"There, there, Miss Gloria," the nurse importuned her. "Try to keep your mind off your loss as much as you can. Think of your father and your brother and how much they need you. That will help you."

A knock was heard at the door and the nurse went to it to admit Dr. Royce. His heart contracted with quick pain at sight of his idolized patient's distress. Gloria sank into a chair and made a brave effort to stifle her cries, gritting her teeth together and wringing her hands, but in vain. The doctor prepared a sedative and held it out to her.

"Take this, dear child; it will quiet your nerves."

But before the words were finished she had brushed the glass from his hand.

"I don't want your opiates, Stephen; there is only one medicine for my pain, and that is revenge. Will you help me to that?'

He shook his head sadly. Struck with a sudden memory, Gloria pulled him towards the window.

"I saw him murdered and you told me it was delirium. Why?"

"You admitted it yourself when you received his letters and telegrams," Royce answered hastily.

"But I don't believe that now. And I don't believe that you do either."

Royce winced at this.

"It is too much of a coincidence," continued Gloria. "I am not a child any longer, Stephen, and though this tragedy has nearly unbalanced my mind, I am still able to think and reason. Why, if this had happened a little later I would have been his wife."

Her lips trembled like a hurt child's and Royce turned his head away in pity.

"If I were his wife I should not sit idly by and let the demon who took his precious life go scot free, should I? Should I, Stephen?"

Royce was silent. Gloria went on:

"I am going to act as though I were his widow in reality, as I am in heart. I shall go to the police." Royce started. "And tell them everything. Will you help me?"

"I will do anything I can, Gloria, but first we must consult your father."

Dr. Royce was dumfounded at the new Gloria he had to face, and to save from monsters she knew nothing of—the juggernauts of scandal and publicity. He determined to confer with Mr. Stafford at once, and descended the stairs to find Pierpont in his library.

Royce told Mr. Stafford things which amazed and horrified the old man; when he had finished he said: "I did not want you to know any of this as long as I could keep it from you, Mr. Stafford. There seemed to be nothing for you to do and I felt that you had enough on your shoulders as it was. I do not know if I acted wisely in keeping you in the dark so long, but now that Gloria wants to go to the police with the matter I had to tell you so that we could keep her from it and save an investigation that would ruin your son's wife and bring horrible notoriety to our innocent Gloria. Whoever it was that killed Freneau, he must have had his reasons. He has made good his escape. Incidentally he has saved Gloria from marrying a scoundrel. I could almost thank him for that. But we must never let Gloria know Freneau's unworthiness; it would leave too deep a scar on her fresh young heart, ruin all her ideals, and kill her faith in humanity.

Stafford gave Royce his hand. "How right you are, Stephen. You are a great and a noble friend to her and to my children. Gloria will get over her lover's death. She would never recover from the knowledge of his treachery. Yes, we must save her from that. May God help me to save David, too.

After Royce had left her Gloria went to her dressing room. Her maid and the nurse were unpacking a large box. They tried to conceal it as she came in, but she commanded them to give it to her. It was her wedding gown.

Clasping the soft shining robe to her heart with a little cry, she motioned them to leave her alone with it. Then she sank to the floor, clutching it in her arms. She pressed her lips to the satin folds and cuddled its beauty to her cheek. As she fondled the precious lace in her fingers, she visioned herself in the gown. She was standing at the altar with Freneau by her side; all the friends of her world were sitting in their pews behind her. To her rapt ears came the organ music swelling into the wedding march, as with her head low and her heart high she came back up the aisle on her husband's arms.

The dream crumbled and the girl woke to the truth with nothing left of her dream but the gown in her arms. She kissed it reverently, and laid it away in its box, as in a coffin. Then her tears vanished and her eyes hardened with resolution. She went down to the library, where she found her father pacing the floor in deep meditation. Gloria ran to him and put her arms about his neck.

"Daddy," she spoke determinedly. "Have you notified the police yet?"

Pierpont was fully prepared for this. He shook his head.

"Why not, father? You must, or I will, at once."

"Gloria, we can't tell the police anything. If they learned that you were engaged to Freneau the house would be besieged by detectives and reporters. What evidence have you? Nothing but the imagination of a delirious girl. If you told them of your delirium you would only stir up a scandal. Your evidence would have no value in court."

Gloria stared at him incredulously, but he went on vividly to convince her.

"We should be laid open to enormous publicity at once. There would be headlines in all the papers about you every day. 'Gloria Stafford Involved in Freneau Mystery'; 'Secret Engagement of Heiress Just Discovered'; 'Gloria Stafford Claims She Saw Freneau Murdered'; 'The Beautiful Daughter of Pierpont Stafford——'"

Gloria groaned. "O, don't, father; I can't bear it."

But Stafford continued inexorably: "You could never leave the house nor enter it without a dozen cameras being focused on you. The police would swarm the place, demand all your private correspondence with Freneau. If you refused them anything they would use force and I should be powerless to help you. And what the police get the reporters get.

Do you want your love and your sorrow given over to the gossips? Now do you see why we cannot set the machine in motion? I have only one desire, to protect your reputation. If you want to protect Freneau's, you will keep silence. Promise?"

Gloria was convinced, at least for the moment. She nodded her head in obedience, kissed her father's cheek, patted him absent mindedly, and left him. But once alone again she burned with resentment at the plan to shield the murderer of her lover. She respected her father's dread of publicity and she shared his hatred of it, but she would not relinquish her demand for justice. She realized, however, that she would have no help now in her hunt for the murderer. But this only strengthened her determination. Alone she would unravel the secret knot and bring the guilty to punishment.

Meanwhile Lois, in her own passionate way, was suffering also, but her suffering was tinged with a certain amount of horrible satisfaction. Death, instead of Gloria, had taken Freneau from her. Gloria could not claim one smallest part of him from her now. He had never cared one atom for Gloria; he had told her so. It was for financial reasons alone that he had intended to marry Gloria, but she could not buy him now. Freneau had been struck down in his youth and strength by some fiend, but he was hers, hers in death as he had been in life. Neither Gloria nor her own husband, David, could ever take him from her now.

Lois went to her dressing table, took from a locked drawer her opera bag, and drew from it the silver framed photograph of Freneau that she had stolen from Gloria. Staring at it longingly, she kissed it, then, pausing with anxious jealousy, lifted it from its frame and read the inscription on the back:

"To Gloria, my only love, with all my heart. Dick."

Lois recoiled from the words as if they struck in the face. Then, turning the photograph towards her again, she gazed at it searchingly, to read the soul of the man in his likeness. Suddenly she smote it with her clenched first and threw it from her. But at once, with swift revulsion of feeling, she knelt and clasped it to her bosom again, bursting into dry sobs and misery.

She was interrupted by a knock at the door and the warning voice of her maid: "Miss Stafford is calling, madame."

Lois was startled. She rose and slipped the photograph between two volumes in a book rack on a table and called to her maid, "Show Miss Stafford up here."

Rushing to her dressing table, she hastily ran a powder puff over her face and brushed back her hair.

When she turned it was to confront Gloria clad in heavy mourning. For a moment the sight of the crêpe stung Lois to jealous frenzy; next she determined to make some excuse and wear black herself. She felt that she had a better right to mourning than Gloria had.

Advancing, she kissed Gloria's cool cheek, mumbling: "How are you, dear? Do you think you ought to be out on such a cold day?"

"O, yes," answered Gloria listlessly. "I thought a drive would do me good. I just dropped in on you for a moment."

Putting up her furs, Gloria wandered aimlessly about the room, then sank into a chair by the table. The women eyed each other with constraint. Neither wished to speak first of Freneau. Gloria noted the haggard mien of Lois with wonderment. Casting about for something to say, she fumbled with the books on the rack. The picture of Freneau fell out.

The blood pounded in Gloria's heart and spread a quick flush over her face as she picked it up. She turned it over and read the inscription. She asked bewilderedly: "How did this come here?"

Lois, controlling herself with difficulty, tried to speak.

Gloria clad in mourning called on Lois

"Was it you, then, who stole it from my room?" Gloria hurled the question with set lips and glittering eyes.

With a desperate inspiration Lois explained.

"Yes, I stole it. I was going to have a miniature made of it for you. I had meant to surprise you with it. And then—he died."

Gloria was touched, and believed as impulsively as she had suspected.

Throwing her arms about Lois, she embraced her. "Thank you, dear; it was wonderful of you to think of that. But don't take the trouble. I must go now." She slipped into her fur coat in spite of the protests of Lois, and left her. She took the photograph with her, and Lois dared not protest.

Far away in a Colorado town lived a woman who after all was most affected by Richard Freneau's death, for she had given him more than Gloria with her young girl's heart or Lois with her guilty passion. She had given him birth.

In a quaint, old fashioned sitting room the venerable, sweet woman was sitting in a rocking chair before the fire. On her mantel were portraits of Freneau as a child and as a man. She put down her knitting and rose with some difficulty. Clinging to the mantel she took down one of the photographs and turning it, read in the beloved handwriting: "To my darling mother from her adoring son, Dick." She kissed the photograph and carried it back to her chair.

An elderly maid brought in the morning paper and a few letters, which the mother ran through eagerly. Finding none from Dick she shook her finger reprovingly but affectionately at the photograph; she then leaned back in her chair to glance carelessly over the paper.

Almost immediately her eyes lighted on the headlines announcing her son's death, with a hint of suicide. The shock of the news almost killed the mother; for she was old and Dick was her only child and she knew only the good side of him. The evil that he wrought in the world was mercifully kept from her.

The maid, hearing her moan, ran out of the house and fetched the doctor who was caring for her. He saw that her disease was the incurable one that mothers are prey to, the loss of their children. There was no remedy for this in the doctor's books and the only help he could give was to answer her one remaining wish that her son's body should be brought home to be buried in the family plot where his father lay and where she hoped soon to rest.

The doctor telegraphed the mother's request to Freneau's partner, Frank Mulry, and he took steps at once to comply.

Thus it was that Gloria was deprived even of the sad satisfaction of following her lover to the grave. When she learned of his mother's wishes her first impulse was to go to Colorado herself, but that impulse she quickly put aside; for her most important duty was to find his murderer, and that search she must start at once. Her chief enemies were those who loved her best, Stephen Royce and her own father. They would do everything they could to thwart her.

Pierpont Stafford felt a deep resentment against the world for its treatment of his children. He had won and held a position of power in the financial world. He had made millions of dollars and he controlled more, yet his son was married to a worthless woman and his daughter mourned the death of a blackguard.

He could not buy happiness for his children and his own success was therefore worthless. His whole soul rose in revolt. His son would have to win his own way out of the mesh; he was a man. But his daughter, his Gloria, must be helped out of the shadows and back into the light.

Stafford could hardly think of Freneau without wishing to kill him over again with his own hands. It was unthinkable that Gloria should be allowed to wear his engagement ring and mourn for him. Yet it was a delicate matter for a father to handle. He could not bear to blast the fresh innocence of his daughter by a recital of Freneau's wickedness. He felt also that her loyalty would not permit her to believe evil of the dead man who was now unable to defend himself. The whole situation was intolerable.

He went to Gloria's room, finding her as he had expected, brooding by the window. He took her in his arms and clasping her hands found they enfolded a picture of Freneau. Anger mastered him; he took the photograph from her, saying: "I wish you would put that out of my sight and out of your life."

Gloria stared up at him in amazement, tears trembling on her eyelashes. Then she gently disengaged the picture from his grasp and hugged it to her breast.

"Why do you hate him now? What do you know against him? How can you be so cruel, so unjust?"

Gloria put her hands pleadingly on his shoulders and he tried to take her in his arms again, but noting the engagement ring on her hand, he froze. Then with determination in his tone he commanded: "Take that off!"

Terrified, Gloria snatched her hand from his arm and shook her head, moving swiftly away from him. Pierpont followed and clasped her hand, pointing to the photograph accusingly, he said:

"Every one will ask who it is you are engaged to. You are not engaged to him any longer. I insist on your removing that ring."

Gloria protested, Pierpont stood firm. She studied him anxiously. He reiterated his demand. She refused. Baffled in his coercion, the old man began to plead. She was all he had. He was old and heartbroken. He could not endure the sight of her in black. He was jealous of the dead man's hold on her heart. Pity moved her as fear could not. To comfort him she yielded. She drew the ring from her finger dropping it into his outstretched palm.

He clutched it with a sigh of relief and put it in his waistcoat pocket.

At this moment Burroughs entered with a black dinner gown on her arms for Gloria. Pierpont motioned it away.

"No, not that, Burroughs! Bring Miss Gloria a bright gown. Black is not becoming to her at any time. You understand me, Burroughs?"

The maid nodded a respectful "Yes, sir," and withdrew to the dressing room. She presently reëntered bearing a gown of brilliant turquoise blue festooned with garlands of vari-colored flowers. Gloria shuddered. But her father nodded his head approvingly.

"That's it, now I shall have my own little beautiful girl to dine with me.

Gloria studied the blue gown for a moment, then snatched it from Burroughs, threw it on the floor in wrath, and burst into tears.

The maid was at a loss. She pondered, then went again to the dressing room and brought forth another gown. "Here, Miss Gloria, dear, here's your little black tulle dress with the gold and black brocade bodice. Mr. Stafford won't mind that and you'll feel better in it, too."

Gloria patted Burroughs on the shoulder tenderly. "Yes, that will have to do," she murmured sorrowfully, and let the maid dress her.

Then she went slowly down the stairway. Her father met her and they entered the dining room together.

The table laden with its lace and silver was alight with candles; the butler was waiting, a man stood behind each chair. Seating themselves, Pierpont took up his cocktail glass and lifted it to drink to Gloria, who picked up her own glass with a far-away look.

Suddenly, it was as if Freneau stood beside her. She imagined he was putting his cheek close to hers to sip from the same brim. So vividly did she feel his presence that she gave a startled gasp and put down her glass.

Her father half rose: "What is it, honey? You look as pale as a ghost."

Gloria shivered at the word "ghost," but summoned a smile to reassure him. "It's nothing, dad. I'll be all right in a minute." And raising her glass again she put it to her lips.

The butler at the serving table handed the soup plates to the second man, who conveyed them to Gloria's side.

Pierpont chatted jovially to entice Gloria to a cheerful mood. She tried to be gay with him, but her heart would not respond. She tried to eat, but food was distasteful to her, and, dropping into a reverie again, she seemed to see Freneau as she had so often seen him, enter the room and greet her.

Again the vision became almost real; it was as if he put his arms about her and embraced her, then her eyes fell to her left hand, which their engagement ring had adorned, and its nakedness rebuked her. She seemed to see the look of anguish and reproach on Freneau's face as he took account of its absence.

She put her hands before her face. Pierpont looked up anxiously, then went to her side. She shivered with a chill. "I'm so sorry, daddy, to spoil your dinner. Please let me go to my room. I'll pull myself together after a bit. It's just a fit of nerves. No, don't come with me; I'm all right. Finish your dinner, dear; don't mind at all. I'll be all right."

She dragged herself wearily away from him and on up to her own room. She threw herself down upon the bed moaning: "They've even taken your ring from me. O, Dick, Dick, come back and help me."

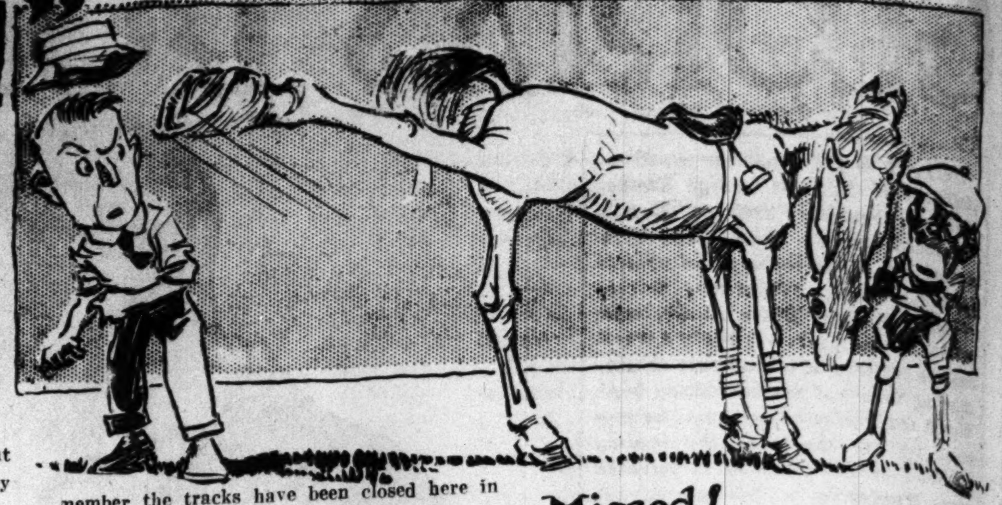
"WHOA, PATRICIA!"

SOOTHED ONEY FRED SWEET, TRYING TO BE A JOCKEY JUST FOR A DAY..



Missed!

FOR twelve summers the weeds had been given a chance to grow about the stables. For twelve summers the grand stand had been practically unoccupied. Morning glory vines were twining themselves across the doorway of the judges' stand. The Hawthorne track that had once furnished the setting for scenes of wild excitement was like a neglected grave.

Up in one corner of the grandstand I came across Louie Peters. He was leaning against a pillar whose paint had crackled beneath the sun many summers back. A bit of the cornice work on the pillar sagged, but still clung by a rusty nail. Mr. Peters was gazing off over the track. By following his gaze I knew that I could not see what he could see, for he had been a jockey at Hawthorne in its palmy days. He could remember Hawthorne when the middle west came by the forty thousand on a Derby day—came in tallyhos and fancy horse driven vehicles. He had worn the colors of his stables on those gala days so full of life and color. As the weeds were now choking up the track, so I felt they must also be causing a choke in the veteran jockey's throat.

Yet there was a light in Louie's eyes that had not altogether to do with the days gone by. In the other corner of the grand stand carpenters were replacing worn out boards, and down on the three-quarter stretch teamsters were working with a drag.

"Yes, we're getting ready for another American Derby," Louie finally commented, a series of inquiries from me bringing him out of his reverie. "It never was the horseman who killed racing in the first place here; it was just a lot of guys that wanted to get rich quick. You can't tell me the king of sports is dead in Chicago. Why, Chicago is the natural center for it! She can be brought back under a new system with the old faults done away with. Tell me, what is there finer than a thoroughbred and what is there in all the world that beats a good horse race?"

"You used to ride on this track?" I ventured.

Mr. Peters turned a glance toward me that was full of disdain and pity. "Why, boy, it seems only yesterday that I took a bad fall from Wood Ranger right down there at that three-quarter pole and I went clean through the fence. When they picked me up they thought I was done for. To tell the truth, my back was hurt pretty bad. I was wearing Sam Robinson's colors then and they got me out a back gate—in my colors and all—and hustled me in a cab to a drug store. Wasn't any autos then—seems funny, don't it? Yes, I was laid up all summer."

* *

Old Hawthorne Fast Track.

"Do I remember this track?" continued Louie. "I guess I do. I've raced on every track in this country and Canada and Cuba, but I believe old Hawthorne is the fastest of them all. Sure, we will get her back in shape and you'll see the crowds out here again. Society will be here, too, just as it used to be, but of course the styles in 'glad rags' have changed since twelve years ago. And then, of course, the bookmakers will be missing this time. Do you know what's become of all the bookmakers' stands that used to be here? Why, the neighborhood's using 'em for front porches and chicken coops. I was just wondering in my mind how Fair Reveille was getting along."

"Huh," I says blankly.

"Do you mean to say," snapped Louie, "that you never heard of that long distance mare? I was just figuring it out—she must be 24 years old now. You know I sold her to the government down in Cuba. I ran across a fellow two years ago who told me that she still looked like a colt. I sure hope she doesn't get mixed up with any of them Mexican bullets. Boy, there was a mare that had human sense and she sure pulled me out of some awful places. I'd known her since she was a baby and I finally got hold of her for myself, but she got rheumatism down in Cuba and I let go of her to the government. It was Spanish-American war time—'98."

"And the other riders—you remember them?" I encouraged.

Mr. Peters eyed me narrowly and rather disgustedly.

* *

Remembers Old Timers.

"Remember them?" he echoed. "Didn't I give Grover Fuller his first mount on a favorite and he won the last derby run in Chicago on High Ball. Poor Grover—he fell and was crippled for life in New York after he'd won every prominent stake in the country. Remember them—'Smoky' Taylor and 'Alec' Covington and Willie Dean and all the rest of 'em?

"And don't I remember the ones, too, that was just gradually weeded out 'cause they couldn't make the weight any more? You know a boy starting in this game oughtn't to be over eighty-five pounds for his own good. You can always make up weight, but a 'jock' can't cut his leg off. I only weighed fifty-two pounds when I started in the game, but then I was only 9 years old.

"Don't I remember when I ran away from home here in Chicago and went to St. Paul and rode under another name for a year without the folks knowing where I was? Think of it; that was way back in '94! The first race I ever won was on Red Ribbon at Minnehaha. In '97 I came to this very track here with Savannah Boy. The crowds were big here at Hawthorne then; there were a lot of 'books' on and this stand we're sitting in was a double decker. We wintered that year in New Orleans, and intended to come back up to Lexington, but ended up over in Austria.

"I suppose you remember the first derby run in Indianapolis, don't you?" Louie went on. "I came under the wire first on Hattie June. Say, that was a crazy horse. They were backing her from 30 to 1 to 4 to 1. Well I kept the bunch at the post for an hour and forty-five minutes in the boiling sun, but finally we were off. Hattie June had a habit of running out in the stretch, but I got her off good after the long delay of starting and I sandwiched her in between the other horses. At the eighth pole I clucked to her and she started to step away. Once clear from the bunch she went back to her old trick and hit for the opposite side of the track. They only beat me by a nose at that, and there were seventeen starters, but I thought Hattie June was going to run straight into the grand stand."

* *

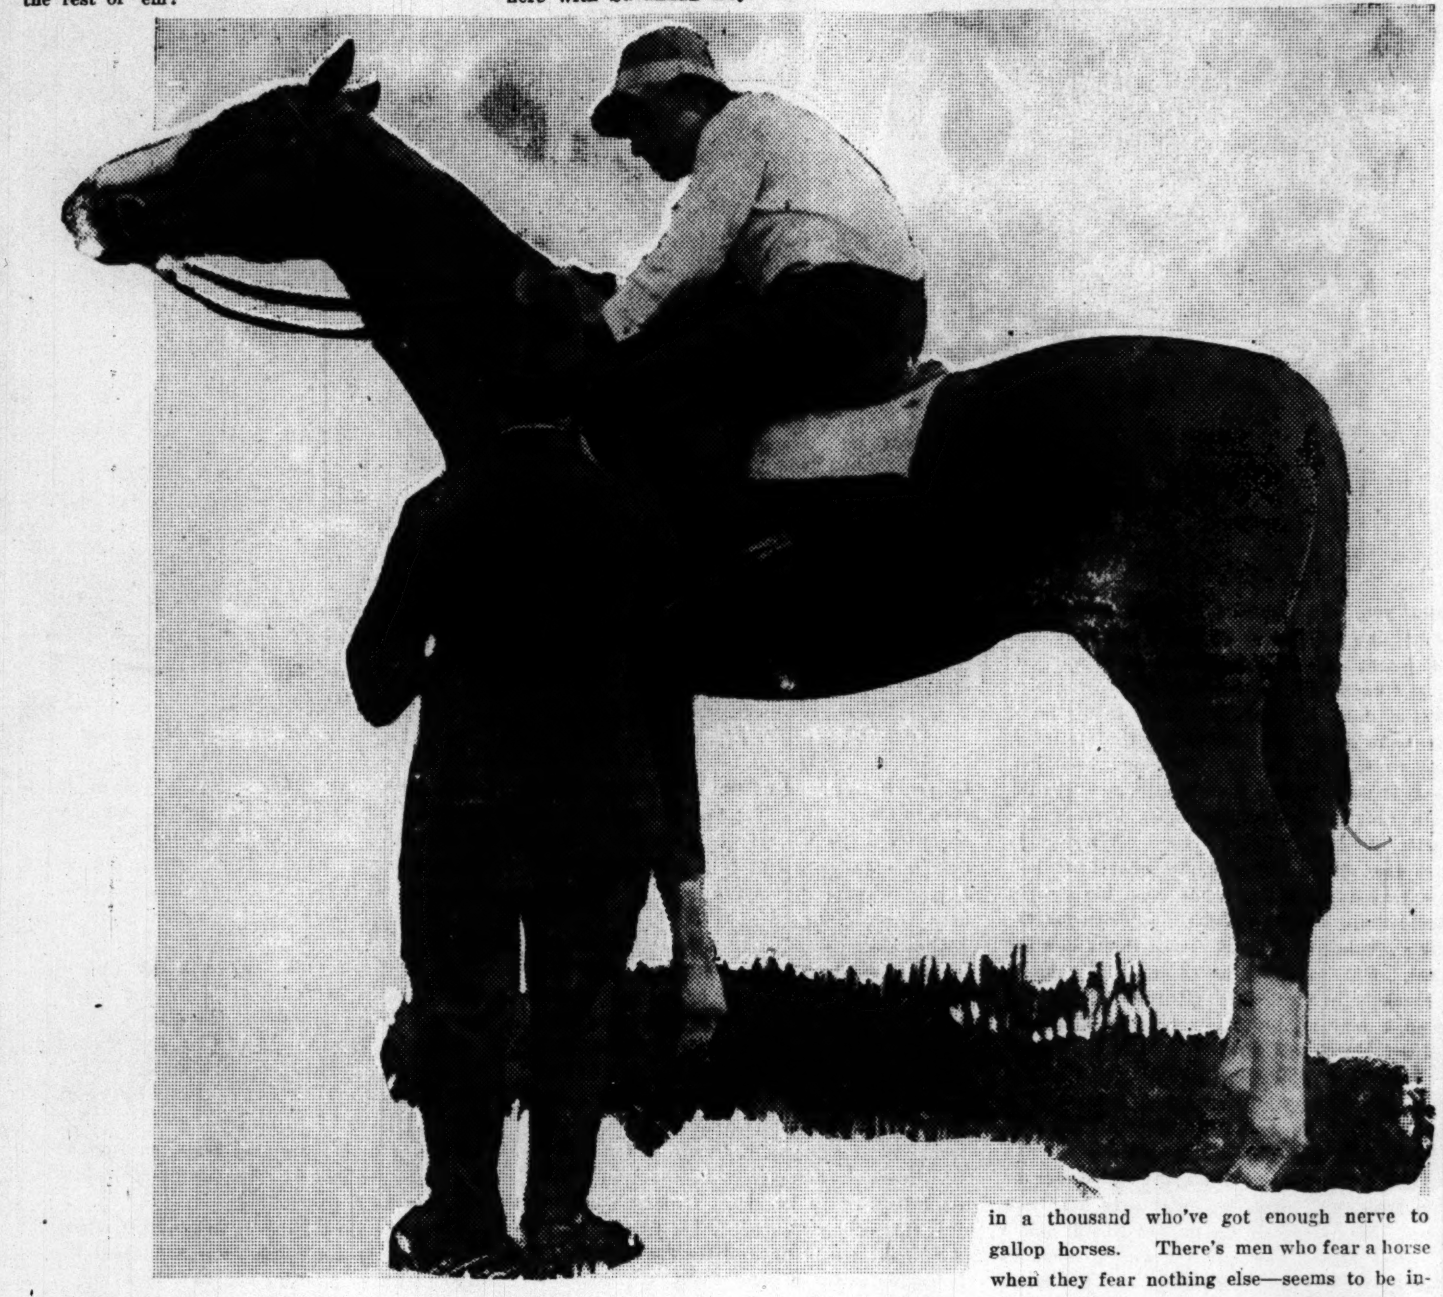
Racing a Life Study.

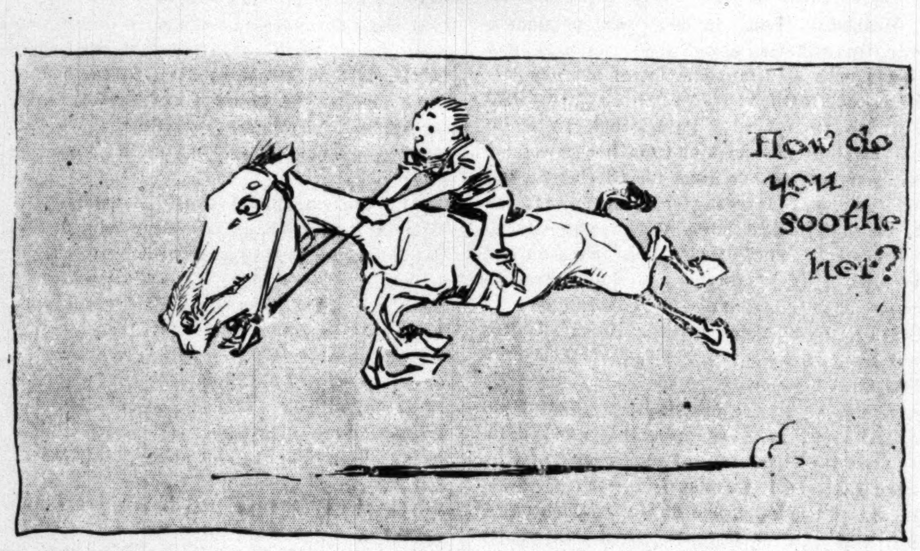
For some time we sat, Mr. Peters consumed with his memories, a sudden ambition stirring my own breast.

"Do you know, I'd like to ride myself," I suggested after a time. "I've never been around horses much. Ever since I can remember the tracks have been closed here in Chicago, but with another derby coming off soon do you know I'd like to be in on it."

Mr. Peters arose with a sigh and, picking up his coat, threw it over his arm.

"Come on," he encouraged. "Never yet have I stood in the way of an ambitious youth. You may be another Tod Sloan for all I know, but I have an idea you'd get the consumption getting down to weight. O, it's a tragedy, boy, when you find yourself getting over weight in the jockey game, and like as not you'll find yourself scared to death when you get on the back of one of these thoroughbreds. There's about five boys in a thousand who've got enough nerve to gallop horses. There's men who fear a horse when they fear nothing else—seems to be instinct. Racing's a lifetime study—a lifetime study—and horsemanship's an art of its own."





How do you soothe her?

It was down at the stables that I met Cap. Cap was a Lexington, Ky., darkey who could hark back to the days when he was "owned by Majah Brad Thomas, yas, sah, and wasn't feared of losin' his job." Cap was rubbing down Patricia, a sleek, brown animal belonging to Stanley Kuntz, and Mr. Kuntz—gray suited and carrying a cane, was standing about idolizing the racer and giving orders to the colored stable boys.

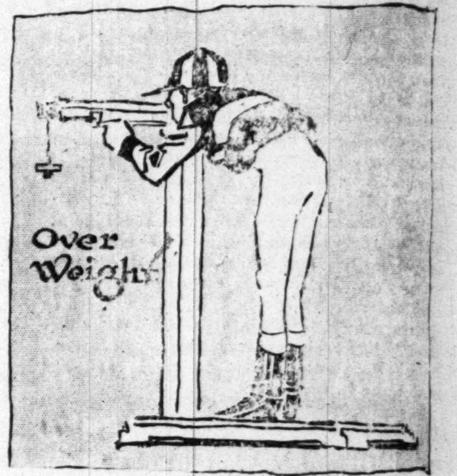
Too Amateurish for Cap.

I recall Cap now as he tightened the saddle with his teeth, the while he hummed, "Down Where the Sweet Magnolias Grow." I recall him also as he exclaimed: "Ma goodness, look at dat boy sprawl all ovah dat hoss' back gettin' on."

I didn't relish this remark; I hadn't counted on my amateurishness being detected so early, but Cap kept it up.

"Takes hol' of de reins jes' like he was goin' buggy ridin'. Heah, boy—put jes' three fingers 'roun' that rein and kotch it heah. Keep yo' hands down! You all 'minds me of a mounted p'leeceman."

There was a trick about keeping one's hands in a certain position; I discovered that. Louie Peters had explained to me on the way over to the faded red stables that while I might appear as if bearing all my weight on the high stirrups, in reality, with my knees against the horse at "the weathers," I should bear no more than two pounds' weight. But Louie had failed to explain to me that an attempt to stop the horse by pulling up on the reins would have the opposite effect of setting him crazy.



"I'll simply jog a half, gallop a mile, break at the quarter, and work at the seven-eighths pole,' I announced, repeating an order that I had heard Mr. Kuntz give Willie Brown, who was already coming down the track in a cloud of dust. I'll simply——"

But Patricia, trained for breaking ahead in a straight line like mad under professional guidance, apparently could not understand what sort of infliction was wildly manipulating the reins. Patricia made for the race track fence with the intention of either jumping it or shaving me as close to it as possible.

Cap, who had been shuffling in uncertain fashion along beside me after my clumsy mount, proved the hero of the occasion. He saved Patricia from getting hurt.

"Ma goodness," I heard Cap sympathize as he began quieting the high strung animal on the way back to the stable. "Ma goodness, ah's seen my share of low down, good for nothing, no account ridahs, but nevah in all my days has ah seen such a shiftless exhibishun. Don't you mind, Patricia, don' you mind. I wanted to see him land up against dat fence jes' as bad as you all did, but I grabbed ya' kase I didn't want to see you take no chances—I'se takin' care o' you too long. I'se had my heart almos' broke the way hoss racin' has decline, an' me around stables since I rode for Majah Brad Thomas down in old Kaintuck, but nevah did I dream dat such a no account ridah lived."

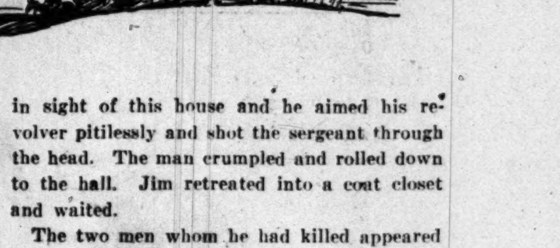
by EDWIN BALMER



Herewith is presented the twenty-first installment of a fiction serial dealing with what might happen should European powers, after they had settled their own differences, wage war upon the United States. The author, one of the best fiction writers in the country, has based his story upon a thorough understanding of military, naval, and internal conditions in the United States and upon a sound knowledge of military and economic history. The story will cause you to realize the critical situation in which this country and you, your neighbors, and your family are placed by the let-well-enough-alone attitude of the pacifists.

SYNOPSIS

In Elgin, Ill., live the Ashby family, consisting of Nathan Ashby, owner of the Ashby Brass company, and his wife; a daughter, Nellie, married to Bob Wendell, a navy lieutenant; and Jim Ashby, a son, engaged to Agnes Ware. Nathan Ashby is the archetype of pacifist, deaf to the warnings of impending danger to America. Out of a clear sky a league of former European enemies gives cause of war by sinking an American scout cruiser and then proceeds against unprepared United States. The country is honeycombed with league spies. The Arizona, Bob's ship, is sunk in a terrific battle, and Bob narrowly escapes death by swimming ashore. Jim, against Agnes' wishes, enlists and goes to New York after training. That city, after a gallant resistance, is taken by the enemy. In the fight Jim is wounded. A beautiful girl rescues him and gets him aboard a raft which the tide takes up the river. The two land at the foot of the Palisades up the river and come upon thousands of starving refugees. In the night the girl, Beatrice Logan, of Utica, is lost from Jim. Mart Ware, Agnes' brother, changes his commanding officer's report, thinking the latter's estimate of the enemy's numbers is false. A terrific battle is in progress.

[Copyright: 1916: By The Chicago Tribune.]

"ILLINOIS! Illinois!" The cry could not hold them more than the cries of the officers of the Yale battalions, the Harvard and Michigan and Wisconsin battalions were holding their men. All along the line they had stopped before the curtain of fire; they were falling back; they could not cross. The regular battalions were rushing on up the slope alone.

So the regent's line at the top of the hill rose against the regulars, stormed down the slope, and killed them all. More men came after them, and more.

"Turn, boys; turn! They're charging us! Turn; turn!"

Machine guns were firing and mowing down the recruits; but the shrapnel had stopped. Now the machine guns had stopped, too, for the regent's men were coming too close. Some of the recruits turned when they reached the woods; but others kept on. The regent's men entered the woods now. "Bayonets!"

Thrust, stab, stumble! Thrust up at a man's groin as you lay on the ground; now stab, get up, fall down, thrust, and stab again!

Jim Ashby, sticky with blood not his own, rolled down into a ravine; there were many dead there—Americans and some of the enemy's soldiers; but no living person saw him or challenged him. He got to his feet and ran. The ravine turned into a long defile beside a little stream; other men were fleeing down this same defile—Americans all, capless, coatless, without rifle or pack. Jim joined them. He was an officer and wearing officer's insignia, but they paid no attention to him. It was hopeless to cry to them, to appeal to them to stand and try to rejoin their commands. Where were their commands? They were dead out there under the shell on the side of the hill or they were in flight further on.

ROUT.

The army was beaten; the whole line had collapsed. It was not a local rout before Serrel's hill; for miles along the front the American brigades were beaten back, regiments annihilated or cut to companies and those scattered to squads, which were slaughtered where they stood or had scattered again and scurried, fugitives, from the field. They scrambled between trees, over boulders, and across fields; then, herded by the hills into a road, they ran wild-eyed, shameless, pushing and pulling each other, yelling and gasping for breath while shrapnel, which played over the road lashed them on and slaughtered more of them.

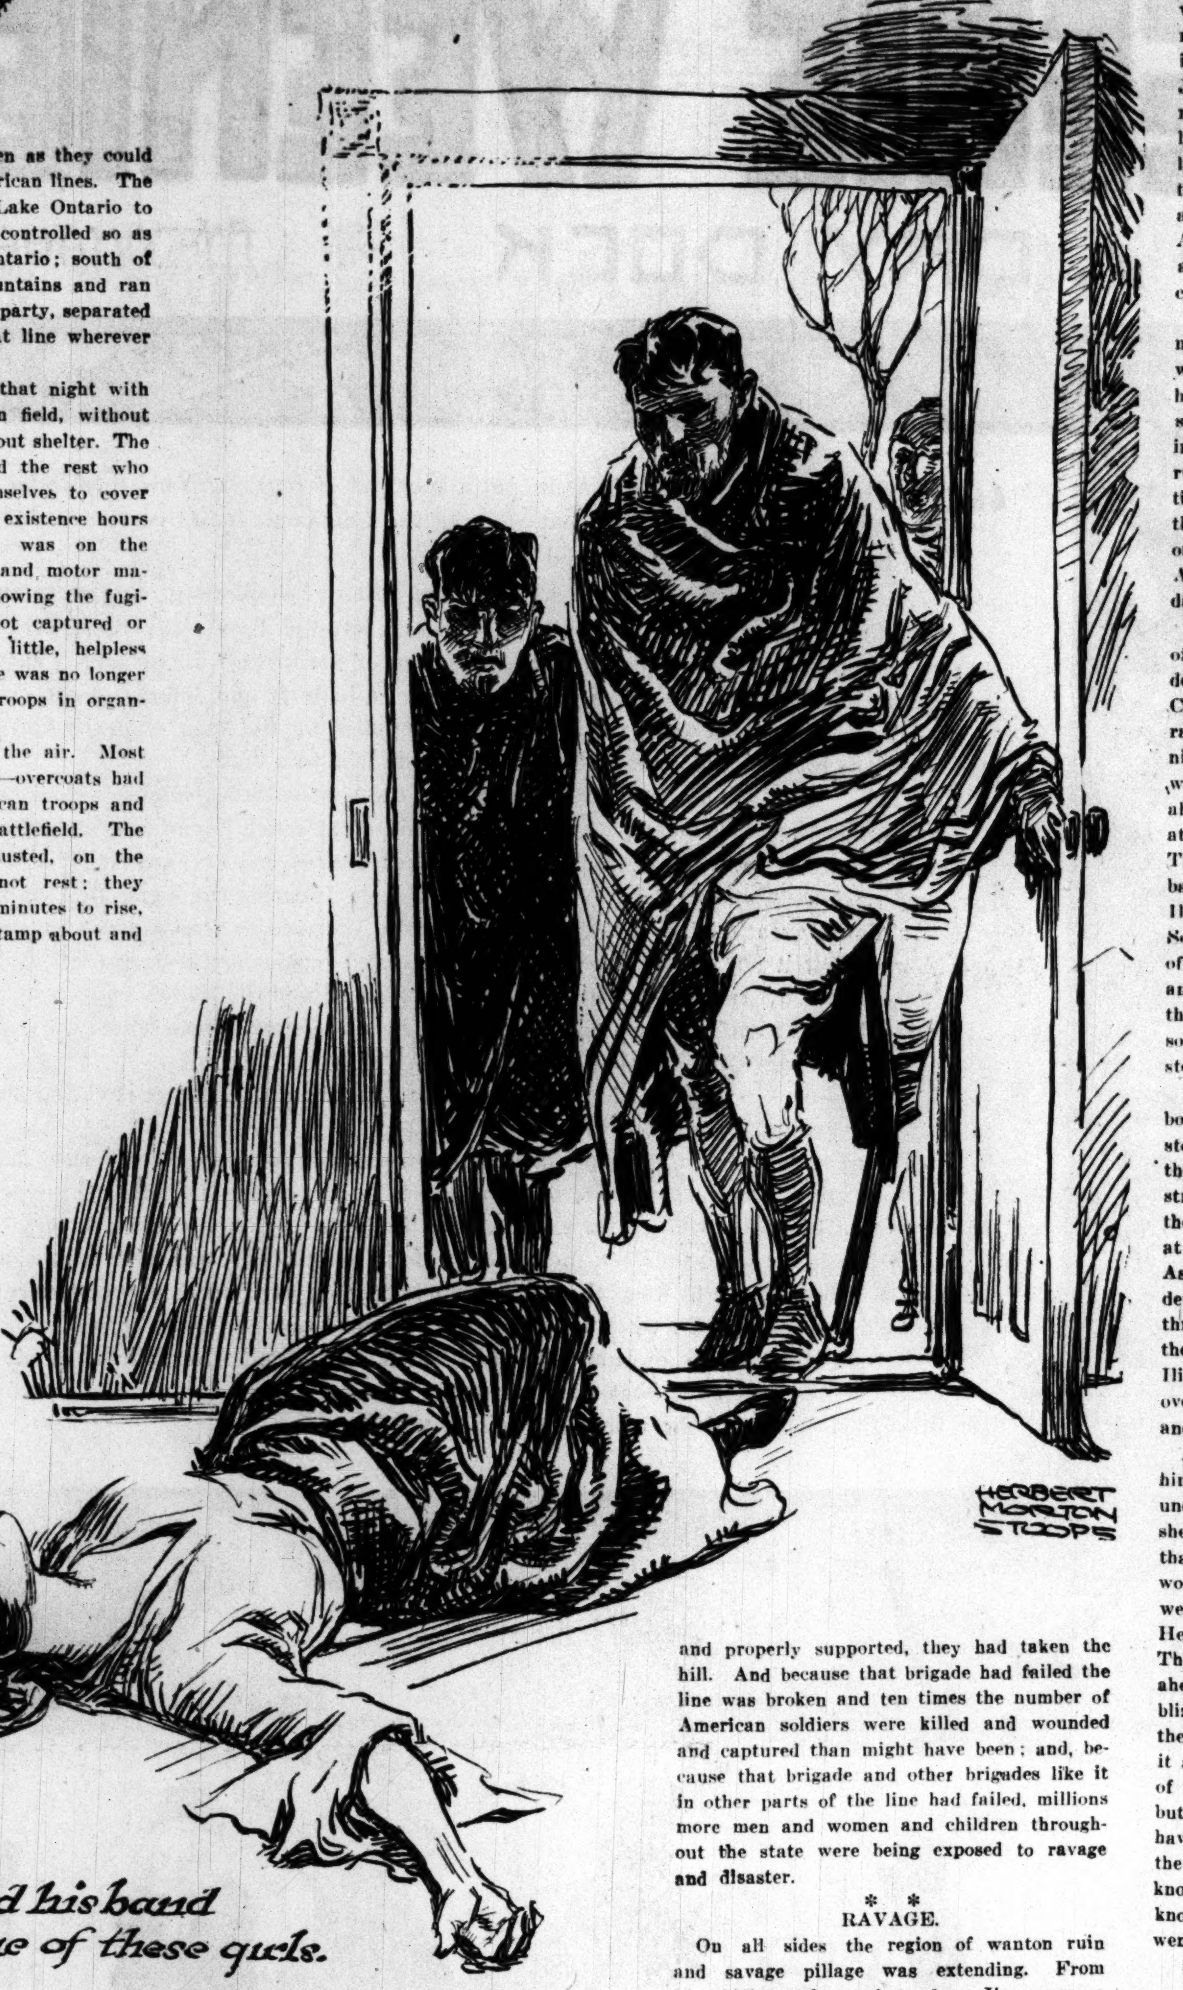
Battalions of a fresh regiment, which had not yet been in the fighting, were trying to advance up this road. The fugitives flung themselves into these battalions and bore them back. The battalions were untrained men, Jim Ashby saw, like those herding into their ranks in rout; the beaten men screamed that they were beaten, every one was running, everything was lost; the shells bursting above them and slaughtering them told that the men screamed the truth. The battalions of their brothers believed them and bore back, and more fugitives, running from the hills, herded among them. All again was rout along the road—rout and panic.

Then the shrapnel no longer reached them; it was breaking behind; but still, like harried sheep, the fugitives from the battle ran on. Jim Ashby, with others who had been officers, tried to block the road and turn the men; but the rout had gone too far. Officers of the staff rode up and gave their commands. It was no use to attempt to drive those fugitives back to battle. Retreat was ordered. Regiments of the regulars and the best of the militia were being thrown across the chief roads of retreat to cover the rout. Officers of the demoralized regiments could best serve the army by bringing as many men as they could in good order to the new American lines. The lines would be formed from Lake Ontario to Cayuga lake, which could be controlled so as to flood the valley toward Ontario; south of Cayuga the line met the mountains and ran along the Susquehanna. Any party, separated from the rest, would gain that line wherever it could.

Jim Ashby halted for rest that night with a dozen followers in an open field, without fire and without food and without shelter. The regiments of the regulars and the rest who had stood and sacrificed themselves to cover the rout had been swept from existence hours before; the regent's cavalry was on the roads, his armed motor cars and motor machine gun companies were following the fugitives, and those who were not captured or shot down were broken into little, helpless bands. Upon those roads there was no longer any large body of American troops in organized retreat.

It was cold; frost was in the air. Most of the men were without caps—overcoats had not been issued to the American troops and blankets were back on the battlefield. The men threw themselves, exhausted, on the frosty ground. They could not rest; they could only lie still for a few minutes to rise, stiff and chilled through, and stamp about and throw themselves down again.

The houses near by were the homes of their people—Americans for whom they had fought, or, at least, tried to fight. But the fugitives dared not go to the houses. The regent's cavalrymen were billeted all about; their horses were in the barns, under guard; their motor patrols were in the yards; they had guards on all the roads with rifles and machine guns.



Jim and his band found one of these girls.

The fugitives, most of them, had no weapons at all. Two of the men, who had been privates, had rifles and a few cartridges; the rest cut cudgels from the woods. Jim Ashby had his pistol and sword. He forced the men on, after an hour's halt. They were scarcely less exhausted than when they had stopped, but they must make all the distance they could in the dark. Travel by day was going to be impossible.

Jim guided himself and his men as well as he could by a pocket compass, across fields, through orchards, through forests, always working to the west. To the north the sky showed signs that the Americans there had made more opposition to the regent's advance. The clouds were red and flaring with the reflection of burning farms, villages, or towns. They might have been fired either by American troops in retreat or by the regent's men in retaliation for defense of the towns by their citizens.

After midnight Jim found a farmhouse which he dared approach. He begged food for his band and he also got blankets. The men ate and tried to crawl into the barn or lie down on the ground in the blankets, but Jim drove them on till dawn; then, hidden in a clump of trees, he let them sleep. Jim took the first watch himself, but later, after he had made another man relieve him, he could not sleep. He was too spent, not in muscle and nerve alone but in mind.

Agony and disaster such as he had seen in New York—and about New York as he worked his way toward the American lines—were more than he had imagined might exist; yet men and women and children by the million had suffered the agony as part of the first defense of the nation, to win time to assemble and make ready an army. Now the army, assembled at that overwhelming sacrifice, had fought, or tried to fight, and—disaster added to disaster.

He had said, when he had joined the army after the capture of Manhattan, that the recruits which made up its regiments knew nothing of what it meant to face fire; he had told them that only because a wooden legged man with a revolver had stood behind him and his squad and was certain to shoot the first man who failed had he and the men with him stood against the first shell fire on the water front of New York. These men who made up the regiment which now was in utter rout in little, hiding bands had been men like himself—his friends and classmates.

He had not stood under fire, except by Houston's strength and in stark terror of the wooden legged man, yet Jim had come to believe that the regiment and the brigade and the army made up of men like him, with a couple of months' more drilling, somehow would stand.

Illinois university men, Michigan men, and the men of Yale and Harvard and Princeton! Surely they would do and endure anything which men might be called upon to do and to endure. But they had not, for they could not. The staff had put them side by side in the battalions to vie with each other, to shame each other on. That had carried some of the battalion into the shrapnel, so that perhaps more of them died than might have fallen had they not been in each other's sight. But charging through curtain fire of shrapnel shells against machine guns and rifle fire from a hill was quite different from charging into a row of soft, padded bodies who could only tackle you and throw you hard upon the ground. That was all that even the best and bravest of the university men had been trained to do.

Shrapnel and steel! Well, college had prepared and trained them to face that no better than other men; this was a totally different thing from any other demand in life. The regulars were not college men, but they had been trained to this; and the college men had fallen back and fled while the regulars went on. Determination, character—they did no good. For Jim had had them in New York, and only Houston, the wooden legged soldier, had kept him to his post; the men in Jim's platoon had had character, but they had broken and fled.

If he had been Houston, could he have held them? Might he have driven them on up the hill through the shrapnel and the shells? In drills the men had obeyed him; but, facing death, he had had no authority at all. When he cried orders at them they had disregarded him entirely or had cried back what they believed they ought to do, and then had done that. He had had, not subordinates obeying him, but equals agreeing with him when they seemed to obey. As one of the regulars had told him, he—Lieut. Ashby—had had not a platoon but a staff. He had not gained authority over men—such authority as drove them on to death because he commanded—by having straps sewed to his shoulders and by having some one tell his men that he was an officer. Houston had had no shoulder straps; he was not an officer in name at all—but he had made men stay and die because he had made men fear and respect him, because he had shown authority and enforced it.

Discipline, obedience—they did not mean greater danger of death for men in an army; they meant greater security. More men of the brigade had fallen in the rout, certainly, than would have fallen if, resolutely charging and properly supported, they had taken the hill. And because that brigade had failed the line was broken and ten times the number of American soldiers were killed and wounded and captured than might have been; and, because that brigade and other brigades like it in other parts of the line had failed, millions more men and women and children throughout the state were being exposed to ravage and disaster.

RAVAGE.

On all sides the region of wanton ruin and savage pillage was extending. From his hiding place that day Jim saw a troop of lancers ride to a farmhouse; some of the men entered and came out, their arms full of loot; others drove the inhabitants before them; others ran off the cattle and sheep and killed the chickens; then, when everything was taken, they burned house and barns and rode away, leaving the homeless family in a little, huddled group on the hillside. All day parties of horsemen galloped past in every direction; all day great columns of smoke billowed up to the sky from behind the hills ahead and on both sides. After dark Jim led his men on.

It was cold that night and a snowstorm had begun. It made concealment easier for the fugitive soldiers. In the smoldering ruins of a house on the outskirts of a burned village they found blankets which had not been consumed; they wrapped these about them and went on. They passed a little crossroads store, which had been looted and then burned, but under the coals there were some boxes of crackers and meal. Women, with children, and old men were picking over the hot ashes and sharing their finds together. They gave supper to the soldiers. Jim asked of the men only direction of the roads, but he heard other things:

"Where's Mabel, Ed?"

"Mabel! O God, O God!"

"You mean they got her?"

". . . But she'll fool 'em; she has poison. She'll kill herself before . . ."

"O, so you heard of Walt Granger's girl. Yes; and Fred Downs—he was going to marry her next week—he shot the damned officer, so they nailed him through his hands to the door and let him watch while the rest of 'em . . ."

Jim went back to his men and led them on. He and his little band were helpless to aid these people; protection was impossible; if his party of fugitives showed themselves they simply would be slaughtered and bring only more cruel and pitiless outrage on the victims they tried to aid.

They must find the American army and make it—make it defeat and punish, make it annihilate these burners of homes, these murderers of children and outragers of girls. Not even the women of the Red Cross who were taking care of the wounded of both sides—not even those nurses, if they were young and pretty, were safe. Jim and his band had found one of those girls; she had been taken to a house and later left there alone; then some one had shot her. Jim buried her, horror in his heart such as he had never known before. She was about Agnes' age. Indeed, at that moment Agnes might be as that girl had been. Agnes!

For the thousandth time Jim read and reread the letter which Mart had left with him when the boy was called away for duty on the night before the battle. It was just an anxious, sisterly letter to Mart and mentioned Jim only in exhortation to Mart to try to get news of him in any way possible; when Agnes had written she had not heard from Jim, nor had his family in Elgin received any of the letters he wrote after reaching the American army after the fall of Manhattan; but in the letter Agnes told that she was learning army nursing and was coming east to service as soon as she could.

Jim wasted no wonder now on what that move indicated as to Agnes' understanding of war. Had she come east already and, if she had, where was she? Was she in the sections still safe from the invader or had she come into these counties given over to ravage and ruin? Might she be among the women captives in those lighted houses, surrounded by the regent's cavalrymen, where the enemy's officers drank and sang and reveled while the American refugees stole silently past in the dark, crouching low over the snow?

They were keeping a mile or so to the south of the frozen course of the Erie canal and the deserted, trainless tracks of the New York Central. The regent's patrols and cavalry raiders kept pretty close to the towns after nightfall, particularly on such a night as this, with a blizzard blowing out of the north. Snow above boot tops had fallen during the day, and at 9 o'clock the drifts were up to one's knees. The fugitives had slept during the day in a barn a mile or so to the west of the ruins of Ilion, which had been burned the day before. Some one had shot at and wounded a member of the regent's cavalry patrol, Jim had heard, and for that the six thousand inhabitants of the town and the miserable refugees who had sought asylum there were driven out into the storm.

Jim and his men stumbled sometimes against bodies under the snow. They had ceased to stop to make hopeless efforts to revive life in the icy forms. The people seemed to have struggled through the storm toward Utica; the enemy's cavalry were in Utica, too, but at least that city had not yet been burned. As he approached it Jim led his party in a detour, as he usually did, to avoid passing through towns. Others who had preceded them through the blizzard down that road from Ilion also had made a detour. Jim stumbled over something under a drift and—he was cold and stiff—he fell on his face.

A cry—a weak little cry of a child came to him. Jim did not try to arise; he burrowed under the snow. A woman was lying there; she was frozen; there could be no doubt of that; but, bundled within her arms and wound within a blanket was a baby, who cried weakly once more as Jim lifted the bundle. He got to his feet again and stumbled on. There was one house in sight a hundred yards ahead; its lights glowed dimly through the blizzard. Jim, bearing the bundle, went up to the house; he circled the house and examined it as well as he could. There were no traces of any one having gone in or out recently; but, of course, the snow and the wind would have quickly obliterated any marks before the doors. Jim went to a back door and knocked. No one answered, so he tried the knob; it turned and he opened the door and went in.

AN AMERICAN'S HOME.

It was the kitchen into which he stepped—a large, well lighted kitchen with a stove upon which several pots were simmering; the table, with its confusion of pans and spoons, told also that there was in preparation a meal for many persons. There was no one in the kitchen now, but the floor was wet and muddied with the marks of men's boots. These marks alarmed Jim and, laying the baby on the table as he heard a heavy step approaching, he drew his revolver and stepped behind a pantry door. A large man, in the uniform of the regent's cavalry, strode in unsteadily; he was flushed with liquor, but he was clear headed enough to have suspected that some one had entered; he stared about the room and then went to the outside door and opened it and looked out. He observed nothing but the snow, at which he swore, and he reclosed the door and turned and went to the stove. He took the cover from a pot in which meat was cooking and picked out a great chunk which he ate; licking his fingers, he turned to the table and saw the bundle of blankets there.

He swore and then, picking up the bundle, examined it curiously; he unwrapped the blankets and, discovering the infant, he swore coarsely and dropped it, without further interest, amid the litter on the table and returned to the pot of meat. But now, as he ate, his eyes rolled to right and left; suddenly he dropped his chunk of meat and, crouching, started toward the pantry.

Jim, waiting, shifted his revolver to his left hand, still keeping the man covered through the crack of the door, and drew his sword with his right. He crouched, too, and, as the man came round the end of the door, Jim lunged. His point caught flesh and went through it; there was a horrible gasp and a gurgle, but no other sound. The man, run through the neck, fell without his finger contracting so as to fire his revolver. Jim did not have to fire; nor did he have to thrust again. He stepped over the body and wiped his point; with his revolver ready he stole now toward the front of the house.

"Derrin!" a man's voice was calling, obviously for the man whom Jim had just killed. "Derrin!"

The man who called—he wore the same uniform with the chevrons of a sergeant—was coming down the stairs. He was excited, obviously, about something which he had discovered there; he seemed not to suspect that anything had happened to the man who had been below. The feeling of the ominous, which had seized Jim upon his entering that silent house with the big meal cooking in the kitchen, came stronger to Jim than previously. He thought of the woman frozen under the snow in sight of this house and he aimed his revolver pitilessly and shot the sergeant through the head. The man crumpled and rolled down to the hall. Jim retreated into a coat closet and waited.

The two men whom he had killed appeared to have been alone or the only active persons in the house. Following the shot and the fall of the body there was no sound at all but the wind about the old house; but there was a strange smell. It seemed to be coming from upstairs and, after waiting a minute more, Jim went up. The smell was gas escaping; it was coming from a room in front on the second floor; the door of the room was locked; the key was not in the lock, either inside or outside the room. Jim not only could smell the gas coming from the cracks about the door but he could hear the sound of it escaping from a pipe. He knocked and called, but got no answer; he went downstairs and swiftly searched the pockets of the sergeant and then Derrin's. Neither had keys. Jim seized a chair and beat down the door. He rushed in, holding his breath, and, locating the gas pipe from the sound, he turned off the gas and tried to fling open the windows. They were fastened down, so he smashed the glass; outside shutters were closed and, apparently, they had been nailed. Jim could not open them; he rushed back into the hall for breath.

He went back then and, feeling for the bed—he dared not strike a light in that room—he found one form, another, a third, all girls. He seized one and carried her out of the room into a rear chamber; he ran back and brought out the other two; then he found a fourth girl and brought her out. He searched the room as well as he could; there seemed to be no more. He went to the rear room where he had carried them and, after drawing the blinds, he lit the gas.

The light showed him four pallid faces with lips blue, with bosoms breathless. He shuddered as he saw them before he realized that one face he had seen before—the second one in the row he had laid on the bed—she was Beatrice Logan.

He cried her name gently as he bent over her. So she had reached the American lines, after he had lost her on the Hudson, to come to this! Here or somewhere near was the home of which she told him during the night through which they lay on the raft together. To this home—or to a home like this near by then "safe" behind the American lines—she had been bound. Jim bent over her and loosened the collar of her waist; seizing her arms and working them up and down, he strove desperately to make her breathe. At every sound he had to stop and listen, and while he worked with one the others beside her might be passing beyond all chance of life. He stepped to the light and turned it out; he opened the windows to let fresh air into the room; he went down and away from the house to the shed where he had left the five men who still were journeying with him. He led them into the house; armed those who had no pistols from the weapons there.

He had hastened as fast as he could, for the cooking meal meant that those who were to eat it soon were to return. He ran upstairs with one man and saw that everything there was still the same, when a call from below summoned him down. A number of men were riding up to the house; four of them leaped from their horses before the porch; other men took the horses and began leading them away. The four stamped upon the porch; one kicked open the door and led the others in. Five revolvers emptied and four of the regent's officers fell to the floor. There were six men outside, who had started with the horses to the barn. Some of them seemed to have heard the shots inside the house; others seemed to doubt, but they all came back. The revolvers emptied again; four of the six outside fell; two started to run; three pursued them through the snow and shot them both. How far the sound of the firing would carry in the storm Jim could not say; nor could he more than guess whether more of the regent's officers and men were to come to that house that night.

It was certain that there was no time to waste. Jim left a man downstairs to watch and to give what care he could to the child brought in from the snow; he left another man behind the house with the horses; with the others he returned upstairs to the work of restoring life to the four forms in the rear room.

The front room had cleared of gas so that Jim dared use a light to search it. The light discovered no one else, but made it plain what had happened. The girls had been locked in the room after every object which they might have used for their destruction had been removed; the shutters over the windows had been nailed, as Jim had guessed; only the gas had been overlooked.

Jim went to the rear room. One of the girls was beginning to revive; she was able to understand only that a man was trying to bring back life to her; she was not yet able to see or hear when she was told that the man working over her was of her own people, that he meant her no harm. Desperately, despairingly, with her slight strength she fought; now another girl began coming to consciousness; Beatrice Logan was the next. Jim was working with her and as she struggled against him he spoke her name and his over and over again. At last the tone of his voice, rather than any sense of his words, seemed to reach her.

"It's—it's you!" she murmured at last. "You——you were . . ."

"Yes, it's I," Jim assured.

"Then—then where am I?"

Gradually he got the sense to her. "We came and found you and we have killed them all who were here; we have killed them all!"

"Killed them!" she cried "Killed them! You have killed them all here! O, God, our poor people! O, help our poor people!"

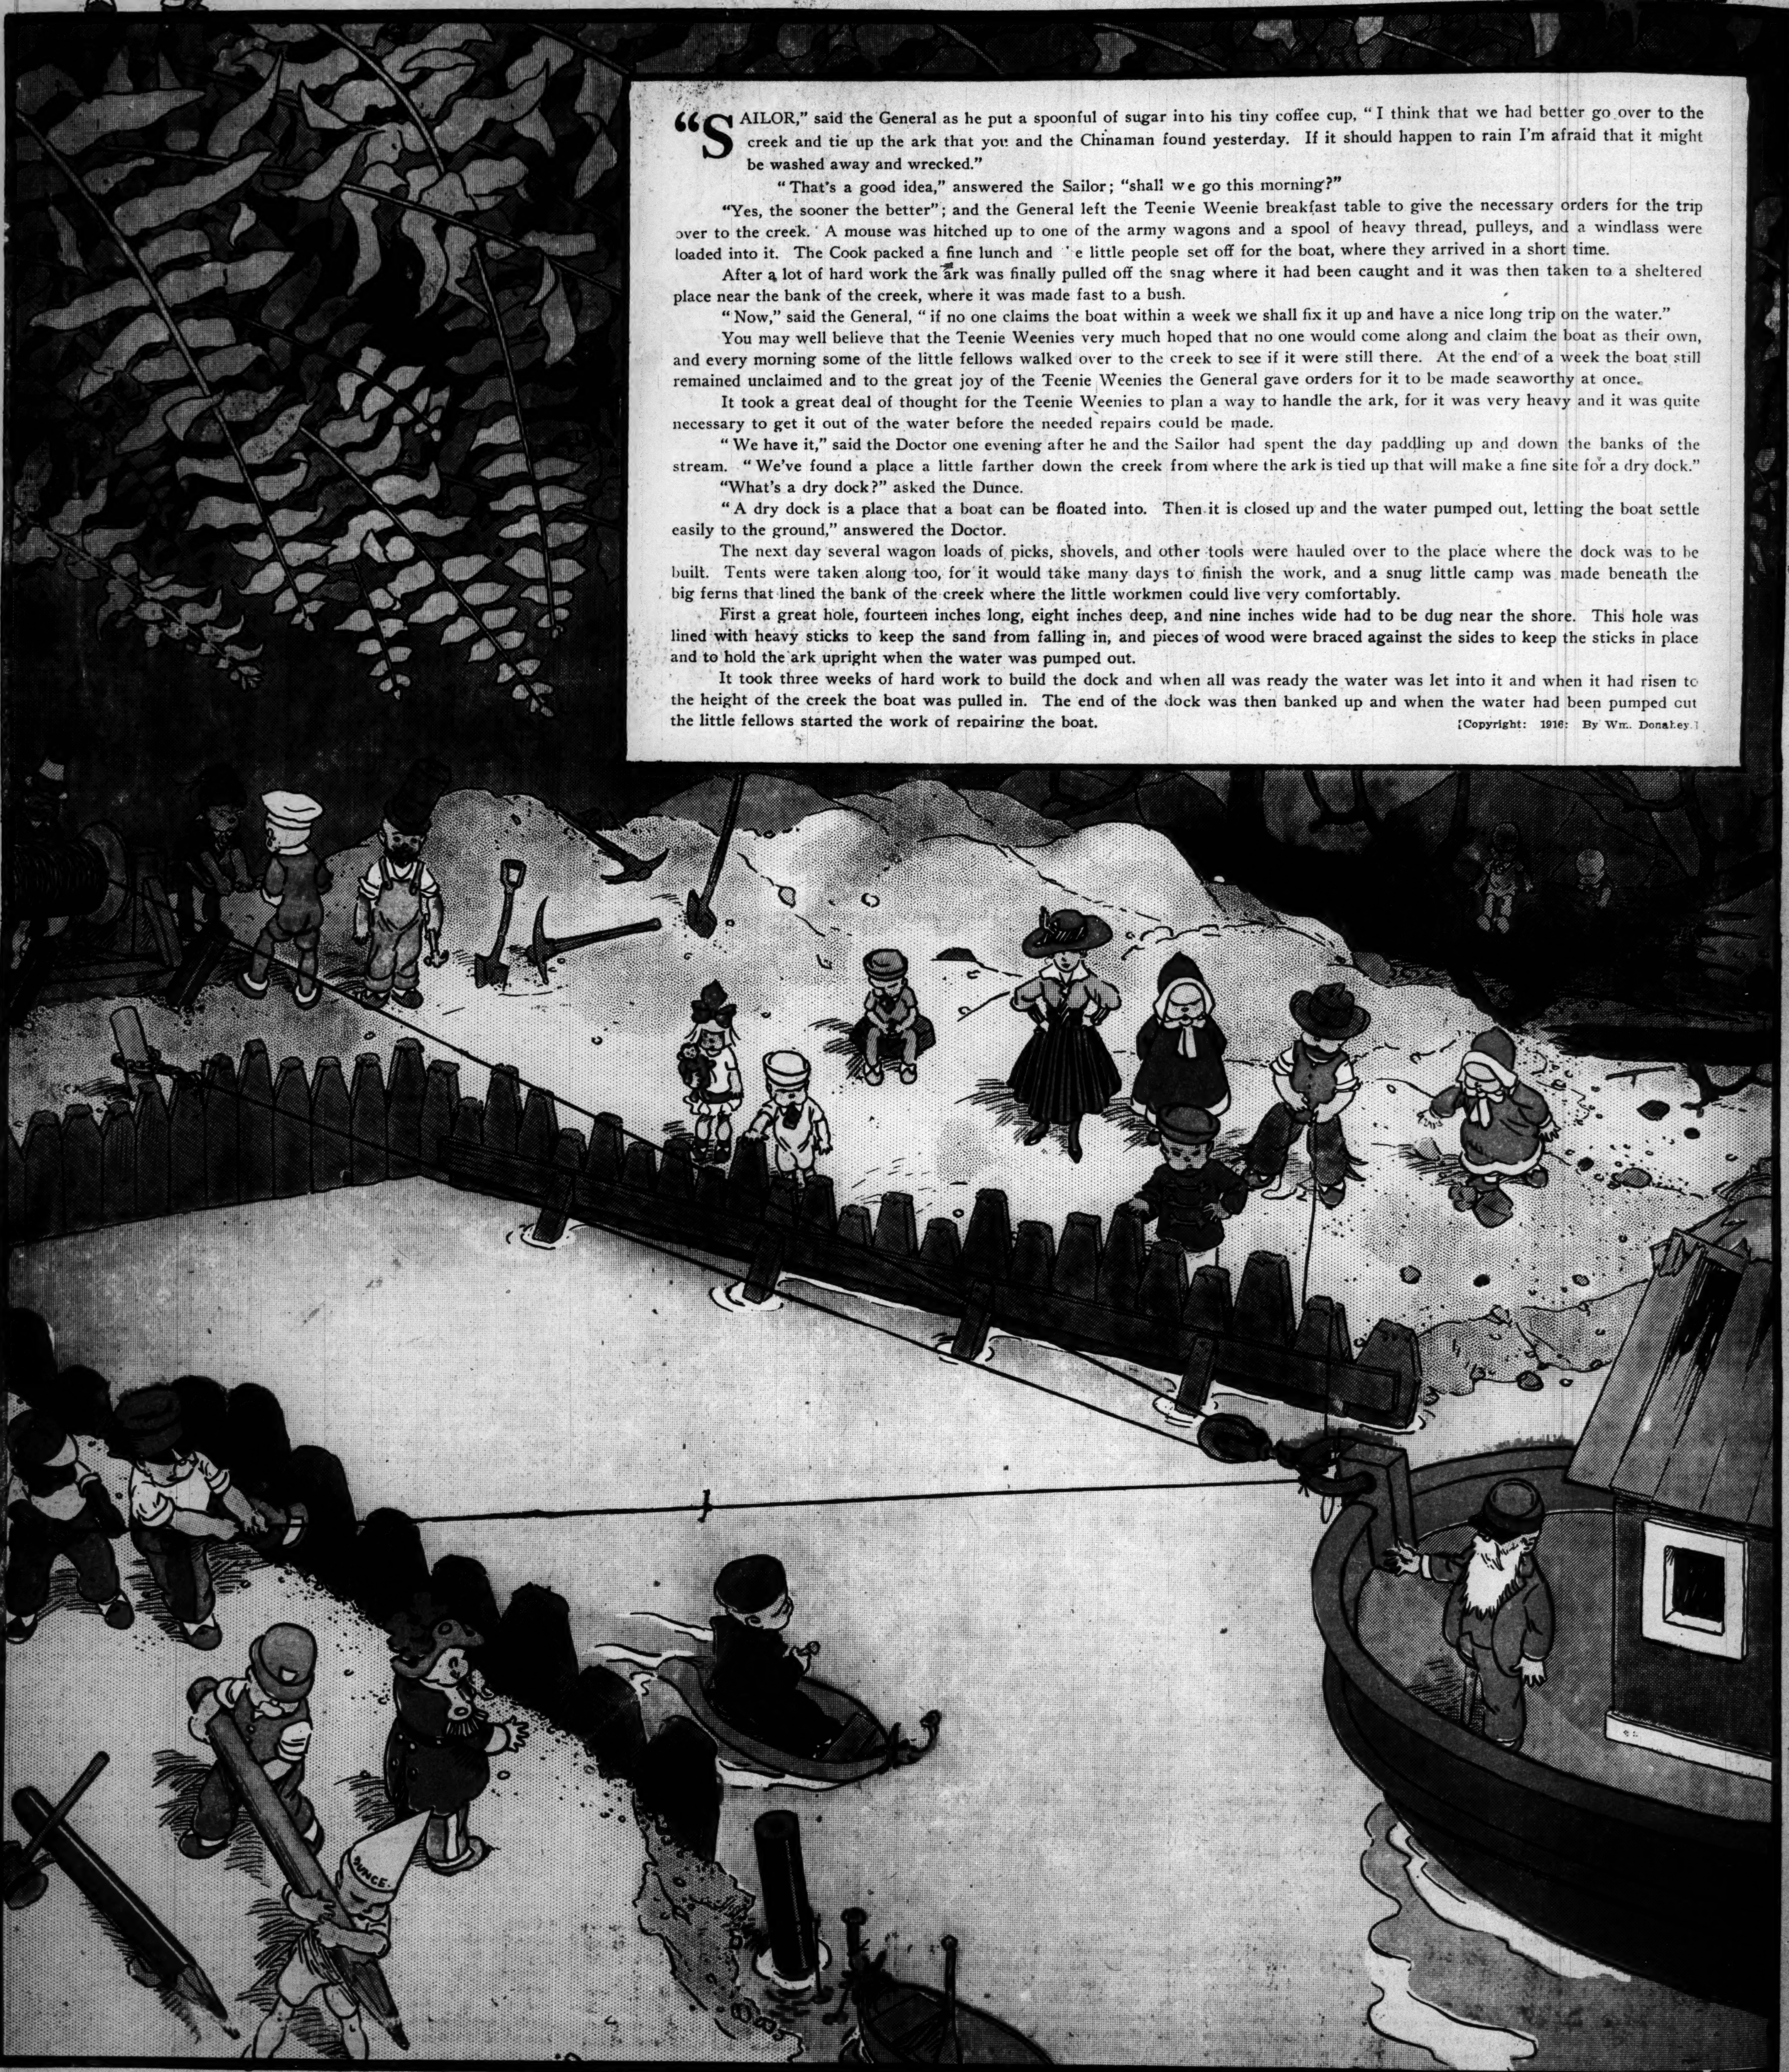
The TEENIE WEENIES

BUILD A DRY DOCK

By WM. DONAHEY.



"SAILOR," said the General as he put a spoonful of sugar into his tiny coffee cup, "I think that we had better go over to the creek and tie up the ark that you and the Chinaman found yesterday. If it should happen to rain I'm afraid that it might be washed away and wrecked."

"That's a good idea," answered the Sailor; "shall we go this morning?"

"Yes, the sooner the better"; and the General left the Teenie Weenie breakfast table to give the necessary orders for the trip over to the creek. A mouse was hitched up to one of the army wagons and a spool of heavy thread, pulleys, and a windlass were loaded into it. The Cook packed a fine lunch and the little people set off for the boat, where they arrived in a short time.

After a lot of hard work the ark was finally pulled off the snag where it had been caught and it was then taken to a sheltered place near the bank of the creek, where it was made fast to a bush.

"Now," said the General, "if no one claims the boat within a week we shall fix it up and have a nice long trip on the water."

You may well believe that the Teenie Weenies very much hoped that no one would come along and claim the boat as their own, and every morning some of the little fellows walked over to the creek to see if it were still there. At the end of a week the boat still remained unclaimed and to the great joy of the Teenie Weenies the General gave orders for it to be made seaworthy at once.

It took a great deal of thought for the Teenie Weenies to plan a way to handle the ark, for it was very heavy and it was quite necessary to get it out of the water before the needed repairs could be made.

"We have it," said the Doctor one evening after he and the Sailor had spent the day paddling up and down the banks of the stream. "We've found a place a little farther down the creek from where the ark is tied up that will make a fine site for a dry dock."

"What's a dry dock?" asked the Dunce.

"A dry dock is a place that a boat can be floated into. Then it is closed up and the water pumped out, letting the boat settle easily to the ground," answered the Doctor.

The next day several wagon loads of picks, shovels, and other tools were hauled over to the place where the dock was to be built. Tents were taken along too, for it would take many days to finish the work, and a snug little camp was made beneath the big ferns that lined the bank of the creek where the little workmen could live very comfortably.

First a great hole, fourteen inches long, eight inches deep, and nine inches wide had to be dug near the shore. This hole was lined with heavy sticks to keep the sand from falling in, and pieces of wood were braced against the sides to keep the sticks in place and to hold the ark upright when the water was pumped out.

It took three weeks of hard work to build the dock and when all was ready the water was let into it and when it had risen to the height of the creek the boat was pulled in. The end of the dock was then banked up and when the water had been pumped out the little fellows started the work of repairing the boat.

The Gown without a back startles even Paris

Sometimes even Paris can draw back with a gasp when a particularly daring model is proffered by some sensation loving couturier. Such was the case when one of her most eccentric dancers came forth one night in a gown that had not the slightest suggestion of a back. Nor was Paris more enthusiastic when other reckless fashion celebrities took up the fad and vied with one another as to which variety of jewel they should use about the shoulder to hold up the diminutive jetted front..

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

(Center headdress)—Jet cap with double pompon of crosse with aigrettes.

TO those in search of novel ideas in dress, the Paris stage offers many an interesting mode, and frequently their piquancy is greatly accentuated by the actress who introduces these originations. One is an audacious variety artiste who is responsible for many new ideas in the modes, as she is original and can carry off anything with vim. In her role she wears several things worth remarking, perhaps the most striking being the gowns with no backs and headdresses with high plumes.

Several of her daring models are depicted in the accompanying illustration, and while few would care to affect these styles, yet in modified form they would prove quite acceptable to the more conservative dresser. And even the most exaggerated mode sometimes possesses sufficient originality to prove the inspiration for a fascinating gown, wrap, or hat.

At the left of the page is pictured a dancing costume fashioned from panels of tulle and jet. The back is devoid of drapery, but several bands of brilliants serve as the slender support of the jetted front, which is cut straight across. The bonnet, which fits the head quite snugly, is made of the sparkling jet, and its security is assured by the precious little bow which is tied beneath the chin. Towering high above this somber head covering are three beautiful pink ostrich plumes, whose long, graceful flues sway lightly from side to side with every movement of the dancer.

To the right of this illustration a beautiful gown of white tulle, elaborated with spangled bands, is pictured. The skirt is cleverly designed, so that it is exceedingly full about the hem. Slightly below the point where the trumpet like frills originate, a band of pale green ribbon is threaded beneath the silver spangled bands. The waist is cut straight across the front, while the shoulder straps, a-sparkle with spangles, are multiplied at the point where they meet the corsage and become important features of the quaintly cut bodice. A touch of color is also found at the waist line, where the green ribbon is partly hidden by the tulle before it emerges toward the back in a big looped bow. The hat is characterized by extreme breadth, while the crown is really a negligible quantity. This interesting chapeau is evolved from white tulle, shirred in several different sections, and from the left ear to the extreme edge of the crown a spray of roses is prettily affixed to the filmy fabric.

A lovely coat of white satin accompanies this attractive creation. Cut on simple lines, it possesses a pleasing quality, for it may be worn with the reverse side, which is of cerise satin, turned outwards.

In the upper right hand corner is an 1860 ballet costume. Decidedly picturesque, its most interesting feature to those who are in quest of fashion news is the new material which is used in the coat. This is a lovely white satin, with black velvet motifs in futurist designs. White fur edges the wrap, and this is also favored for the collar and cuffs of the wide and somewhat short sleeves. Another novelty is noted in the wrist length gloves with their scalloped cuffs, while the tiny, box like black velvet hat is adorned with a gayly nodding plume of white ostrich.

In the center of the picture another dashing headdress is depicted. Made of jet, the severity of the close fitting cap is completely forgotten as one gazes at the double pompon of crosse aigrettes that rears upwards, as if the heavens were its goal.

While the gem besprinkled dress is seen to perfection on the stage, yet dress affected by private individuals is frequently less glittering in appearance, the sparkling touch in the costume being achieved by the jewels that are worn. In spite of the war, Parisian jewelers have originated many lovely new settings. The wrist watch has evolved from the useful leather strapped affair into wonderful bracelets set with precious stones. One new design is entirely of pearls and diamonds, with the delicately fashioned watch and clasps of platinum. Frequently platinum brooches and pendants are made in delicately woven patterns, studded with diamonds and brilliants so that they resemble cobwebby laces.

A rare necklace of all diamonds is set in this fashion to resemble a narrow lace collar, festooned at intervals, and falling in little frills of diamonds. This treasure, of course, is not, however, for the average woman, for such eccentricities in jewelry are almost priceless.

Some patriotic Frenchwomen are wearing narrow bracelets, three in a set, made from tiny squares of sapphires, garnets, and brilliants set in platinum. Others are showing their patriotism by selling their jewelry and donating the proceeds to the hospitals.

There are also odd, although it must be admitted attractive, enamel rings, which bear the colors of the allies. Of course, one finds quite a variety of souvenir jewelry—rings made from bullets, bearing various seals and regimental emblems, or set with red, white, and blue stones. Dainty medallions, whose subjects range from French saints to Gen. Joffre, are shown in round and oval designs in old gold, bronze, and Roman gold. These latter souvenirs, while interesting because of their association, are not the choice of the well groomed woman for proclaiming her patriotism.

MEN AND WOMEN

At the International Sunday School association training school the Rev. E. Morris Ferguson of Philadelphia fixed 24 as the right marrying age. "It is generally admitted by psychologists," Dr. Ferguson said, "that persons do not fully become men and women until they are 24. Twenty-four, therefore, is the age at which a person should marry. Before that time they have not come to themselves."

Divorce statistics argue strongly against the 'teens as a marrying age.

The Marrying Age.

They support Dr. Ferguson's theory that "coming to themselves" is a necessary factor in the permanent happiness of a couple.

Fifty years ago girls got married when they were 14 to 16. Not to be married at 20 spelled spinsterhood. Twenty-five years ago 25 was the border line beyond which hope of finding a mate was not entertained. Today, while they marry at 18, at 20, at 22, the average girl is only beginning to think seriously about marriage at 24 or 25. As for abandoning hope, even 30 is not now thought a matrimonial zero.

Conditions relative to womankind have changed remarkably in every direction. In the matrimonial scheme the note of her independence is sounded in the desire to "look around" a bit to choose one man from many, rather than to choose the first and only one who crosses her path.

Twenty-four does not seem an ideal age for matrimony. By that time puppy love illusions have been replaced by a more common sensible point of view, and there still remains enough of youth to breed sweet and wholesome sentiment. With years and experience a bigger sympathy and a better patience with others' faults are the resultant virtues, which in turn retard the grind of the divorce mill.

Few persons have arrived at 24 without having known some disappointments, heartaches, and broken illusions—all excellent character builders and insurance against much domestic discord.

At 24 a man's earning capacity, generally speaking, is infinitely better adapted to domestic comfort and harmony than it is at an earlier age, and his prospects for future improvement lend a happy influence.

In Time of Calamity.

On the grounds of a fashionable eastern golf club a week ago a young caddy was struck and killed by lightning within a few feet of a score of society women who were playing the game. As the body of the caddy was carried from the field, it is reported, all the women in the party fell on their knees and prayed.

In the presence of calamity or disaster, how often our minds turn back to the simple teachings of our childhood. No matter how we grope for power and succeed, there are few of us who in a moment of a big calamity fail to feel the presence of a power more omnipotent.

As I heard a woman magazine writer say recently: "Somehow or other when a stroke of ill luck happens me I wonder if the Lord has not suddenly become aware of my presence. But no matter what luck I have, I forget to attribute to Him any part of it."

* *

Too Much Temperament.

It is a commonplace that the marriages of men of genius are more often unfortunate than otherwise. Particularly is it true that men of musical genius are rarely crowned with the common blessings that life brings to meaner mortals.

It has been proved by statistics that an attempt at enduring affection where one mate is afflicted with genius is a difficult thing. But when both husband and wife are so afflicted harmony becomes well nigh impossible. Such is the status of a musical alliance in Chicago, recently arrived at the court of sorrows—the divorce court.

We have the authority of the national bureau of census that from a study of divorces, musicians contribute lavishly to the business of the divorce courts.

Perhaps to musicians the excuse of temperament is more generously applied than elsewhere. The legitimacy of their high handed appropriation of the excuse is open to question. For temperament is nothing more or less than moods. Moods are mere states of feeling. When certain ugly moods are allowed to recur at short intervals, with no attempt at control, is it legitimate to set up temperament as a shield to dodge responsibility?

Possession, however, being nine points of the law, eternity will probably find the genius—especially the musical genius—using this shield and being easily excused thereby for his irresponsibilities.

HOW I'M MAKING INEZ HAHN'S SICK HAIR WELL

By Antoinette Donnelly

If you missed the Antoinette Donnelly series telling how she reduced Mrs. Eva Lane 36 pounds in six weeks, or how she added 20 pounds in five weeks to Miss Helene Barnett's weight, send a stamped, addressed envelope and complete instructions as to diet and exercise will be mailed to you. Any other questions on either reducing flesh or gaining will be gladly answered. Address Antoinette Donnelly, Chicago Tribune.

Last week I introduced my model, Miss Inez Hahn, to my readers, and today we shall go on with the subject of how to treat sick hair, using Miss Hahn as a concrete example of what should be done to oily hair and dandruff disturbances.

Dandruff is a most frequent condition of hair disturbance. It is said to be one scalp disease at whose door a great part of baldness is laid. It forms on the scalp in an abundance of fine scales which become loose in the hair and are apt to be shed upon the clothing.

As a general rule, the scaly condition is more frequent among oily haired people, although it is quite frequently found with dryness of the hair. Especially with the oily hair, it causes an itching of the scalp. If dandruff is allowed to go on neglected the scales will collect in dark colored, greasy crusts which adhere closely to the scalp, and annoying irritation and intense itching result.

Miss Hahn had let the condition of her scalp run down until in three months she lost about half of her hair. Her hair was excessively oily and she had a great deal of dandruff. I started her right in with massaging her scalp twice daily, morning and night, to work out the diseased oil in the sebaceous glands and to reduce the swollen condition of these glands, as it was necessary, before attempting any dandruff cure, to start a healthy circulation in the scalp. It proved to be killing two birds with one stone, however, for the tonic which I gave her to massage her scalp with also served as a dandruff remedy.

I will repeat the formula here: Resorcin, forty grains; water, one and one-half ounces; alcohol, one and one-half ounces; witch hazel, one and one-half ounces. The witch hazel and alcohol in the tonic, being astringents, help reduce the pores to normal size and also have a drying effect.

Shampooing often enough to keep the scalp clean is the best means of preventing and overcoming dandruff. Because of the oily condition and the dandruff in Miss Hahn's scalp I had her shampoo her hair twice a week. At the end of a month there was a truly amazing improvement in her scalp. Her hair no longer came out in handfuls, as it did at first, when she was afraid to brush or comb it. In fact, a slight shedding of hair—a normal shedding—was the reward of her faithful adherance to the semi-daily scalp massage with the application of the tonic and the frequently shampooed scalp.

An additional measure of cleanliness and as an antiseptic the frequent application of alcohol to the scalp is useful in combating dandruff. It dissolves some of the oil from the hair and dries both hair and scalp. Apply it by parting the hair in various places and rubbing on the alcohol with a small sponge.

There is a good deal of a bogey about the frequent washing of the hair. If there is a tendency to dandruff it must be washed frequently. Once a week is not too often and even twice a week is recommended, provided you dry the hair thoroughly. Castile soap with a pinch of borax added to the water is the safest cleansing measure.

I do not recommend a vigorous brushing of the hair in cases of excessive oiliness. It simply distributes the oil. Until Miss Hahn's scalp began to be freed of dandruff and oiliness I had her use the comb only. Now she brushes her hair in the evening before going to bed to rid it of the dust accumulation of the day. A further cleansing measure is the use of a rough Turkish bath towel. Part the hair in the center and rub downward to the extreme end of the hair, first one side and then the other. The back hair is done in the same way. This treatment helps absorb the oil in the scalp and hair.

Dandruff is contagious. It frequently happens that husband or wife has contracted dandruff after marriage, he or she having been free before. And in families of any size one member is likely to have enough of the disease to spread it throughout the rest of the household.

Each member of the household should have his own comb and brush and under no circumstances let another use it. And the first requisite of these toilet articles is that they be kept scrupulously clean. By frequent washing with water and soap or ammonia and drying in the sun whenever possible the combs and brushes will be kept clean. In addition, they frequently need sterilizing, particularly when used by persons troubled with dandruff. Do this by wetting them in a solution of formalin, a teaspoonful to a pint of water. This solution will not damage comb or brush any more than water will. In sterilizing the hair brush be sure to wet the bristles up to their bed at least. Better, of course, if you can immerse the brush completely.

Next week I shall continue with my experiment in making sick hair well.

Answers to Beauty Seekers.

BLONDIE: Puffiness under the eyes is usually due to kidney trouble. Drinking water frequently remedies the condition. It is necessary also to build up your general health with plenty of fresh air and exercise. Walk as much as you can, not less than three miles a day, and make it a point to get eight or more hours' sleep each night. If there is no decided improvement within a reasonable length of time it might be well for you to consult a physician about the condition.

* *

F. G.: Don't commit suicide because your legs are fat. A well proportioned, shapely leg is infinitely more attractive than a thin, bony one. I really think you can have the laugh on all the girls because you are so fortunate. I am sure it is nothing but pure jealousy on their part. Don't stay at home any more on Sundays and cry, but just go out and have a good time. Graduation time is no time to be thinking of your legs; you should be happy in the thought that you have successfully completed your school work and will now be able to do something worth while in the world. In a class of fifty or even less no one in the audience would pay any particular attention to the details of one person's appearance when going up on the stage to receive her diploma. They usually think what a pretty sight it is to see the girls in their spotless white dresses. Your stamped, addressed envelope never reached me. I am sure if it had you would have had a nice little letter of reproof long ere this.

* *

JOHANNA W.: A good tonic will overcome the oily condition of your hair. It will not then be necessary to wash it so often. I shall be glad to send you my tonic for oily hair if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

* *

B. Z.: I am printing my formula for shampoo for blonde hair for you, as I am sure you will be able to keep your hair in good condition after using it. It is not a bleach. Shave a small cake of pure white castile soap into a pint of boiling water and let it stand until thick. Add a few drops of rosewater just before it thickens. Wet your hair so that the jelly will adhere. Then rub until a lather forms. To the first water add a raw egg well beaten and the juice of half a lemon. Rinse your hair thoroughly. The lemon juice gives the golden tint that is so desirable in blonde locks. Shampoo your hair with this lotion about once in three weeks. If your hair is excessively oily I shall be glad to send you my tonic for oily hair if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

* *

PETTY: No, it won't harm your hair to put it up in kid curlers. You may have some discomfort in resting your head on the curlers. You could moisten your hair with a curling fluid before using the kid curlers and then it would not be necessary to put it up so often, as the fluid will keep it pretty and wavy sometimes four days at a time. I shall be glad to send you my formula for hair curling fluid if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

* *

X. Y. Z.: Hot vinegar will remove vermin from the hair. Hold the head in vinegar just as hot as can be borne for five minutes, then wash your hair thoroughly. The first treatment usually eliminates the trouble. Tincture of larkspur is also good. It can be procured at any drug or department store with directions for using.

* *

DOTTIE: Styes are a painful species of small boils that generally form on the edges of the eyelids. They are apt to appear in succession. They usually are caused from a rundown condition of health. Hot applications of boric acid solution will sometimes check them. If pus has formed the stye must be opened by an incision parallel to the edge of the lid. This should not be attempted by any one except a physician.

* *

KING: The best remedy for removing facial blemishes is plenty of fresh air, sunshine, and a careful diet. Do not eat rich or spicy foods, oily meats such as pork and veal, pastries and sweets. Exercise in the open air. Eat lots of fresh vegetables and fruit and guard against constipation. I shall be glad to send you my treatment for pimples if you will send me a stamped, addressed esevelope.

* *

BELLE: Do not worry because you perspire. It is not an unnatural condition in warm weather. There is practically nothing that can be done for it, and you should not try to check the perspiration, as the impurities remaining in the skin poison the system and often cause disease. Put a few drops of alcohol in the water when bathing your face. Use warm water and dry the face thoroughly. Dust with a good grade of rice powder.

* *

WORRIED: This is an excellent tonic for oily hair: Carbonate of ammonia, twenty grains; tincture of cantharides, one dram; alcohol, one-half ounce, and of bay rum a sufficient quantity to make four ounces. Mix well and apply at night, rubbing thoroughly into the scalp while massaging it. Do this for two weeks, then wash the hair with the following shampoo, and repeat until the desired results are obtained: Green soap, two ounces; alcohol, one ounce. Mix well and make shampoo. One ounce of the green soap mixture should be diluted with twice as much water and applied to the scalp with the tips of the fingers. Add sufficient water to make a good lather. Rub this well into the scalp with an old tooth brush, going over the whole scalp thoroughly. After the scalp is cleansed the soap must be well rinsed out of the hair. This requires many changes of water, but the rinsing has everything to do with a successful shampoo—a fact not always appreciated.

* *

MYRTLE: Greasy hair is objectionable and unsightly. It is almost impossible to dress it smartly, and even after it is shampooed it will return to its greasy state in a couple of days. Even the dry shampoos afford but temporary relief. The only real and permanent cure is massage of the scalp every night with the fingers dipped in a little bay rum. This, if persevered in, will effect a cure in a few months.

* *

IDA: Water is one of the first aids to a good complexion. It keeps the body in good condition. Three pints of water should be consumed each day. It should be taken in generous quantities before retiring, as well as in the morning and between meals. For constipation and biliousness two glasses of cold water should be taken before breakfast, with an interval of twenty minutes between, the last glass being taken a half hour before breakfast. I shall be glad to send you my treatment for pimples if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

* *

S. I. B.: Castile soap is best for a shampoo. I see no reason, however, why the occasional use of coarse soap should affect the texture of the hair. The soap should not be rubbed on the hair anyway, you know; it should be made into a lather. Try my formula for soap jelly, which is a small cake of pure castile soap shaved into a pint of boiling water. Let it stand until thick. Then add one ounce of alcohol and a few drops of rose water. The hair must be wet enough so that the jelly will adhere.

Reading the Ads.

I am a girl of 19 and tomorrow marks the fourth month I have been married to the best of husbands. Before marriage I had occasion to see Eddie only occasionally, as he was one of those travelling salesmen famous for the girl in every town. Finally I awoke to the fact that I cared for him and one evening while sitting close together on a couch looking at a paper I spied an advertisement beginning: "Would you?" I showed it to him and he accepted without the least bit of hesitation or embarrassment.

A couple of days later I had the ring, a week later I was married, and still a week later I told. It was fun keeping it quiet, too.

About "before and after marriage" I have this to say: My husband is my partner, lover, and husband in every way. Nothing is too good for me, and he just loves to fuss around the kitchen and concoct the lightest of cakes and best of meals. Believe me, girls, I struck a gold mine—and here's good luck to those who use their wits in leap year. E. J. A.

Over the Phone.

One Sunday afternoon recently I telephoned my girl friend's house, but was informed by a member of her family that she wasn't home. Sometime later when she came in she was told that I had been calling for her so she then called me. Taking down the receiver I said: "Hello.' 'Then I heard a sweet voice say, "Hello! Do you want me?" I said: "Well, I should say I do; I've wanted you for a long time." Although this is leap year, she says she didn't mean it that way. J. S. B.

Now a Happy War Bride.

One day I was out at the camp grounds to say good-by to my brother, for his regiment was to leave for Mexico the next day. It was there I met my true love.

My brother was nowhere in sight so I asked a soldier of his company whom I knew slightly to find him for me, explaining that I wished to say farewell.

The soldier came up and said: "Everybody is sending farewells to their friends and family, but I haven't any family so I have to get out of the way," then, turning away abruptly, "the best of us even break down sometimes."

I was deeply moved and quickly ran after him crying: "O, let me be your family!" meaning merely to write to him. He acquiesced and now I am a happy war bride. A. J.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Generous.

Although those whose birthday falls during the week beginning today are of the sign Leo, meaning "the lion," fortunately you do not partake to any great extent of this ferocious beast's disposition. But you are daring and assertive, and love to be in the limelight. You may be impetuous and rash, but withal, you are so lovable that you escape the censure that others less fortunately endowed would receive. Always generous, sympathetic, and magnetic, you have hosts of friends who sometimes impose upon your good nature.

Man or woman, you are a splendid cook, one of those rare ones who know just how a dish will taste without sampling it in the process of compounding. But you don't skimp on the ingredients, not you! And you know where the best of everything can be bought! With this culinary ability goes an almost inordinate sense of neatness, so that people say of your kitchen floor, "Why, I wouldn't mind eating off of it!"

You have a great love for your own and will not yield to advice or dictation in the management of your children. In fact, you will fight like a tigress for your children if you think they are threatened with harm. A fault found with them, a complaint made by any one, will arouse you to the highest pitch of excitearouse you to the highest pitch of excitewell be, "Love me, love my dog."

Neglect or unkindness on the part of those near and dear to you is apt to result in complete estrangement. But you will stick by a true friend through thick and thin. An occasional disappointment in your estimate of a person does not in the least affect your faith in humanity. On the contrary, you get up all the stronger from this experience, perhaps with less fury, but with more determination.

All you fire people are active to the point of restlessness and are in danger of burning out your own vitality. This, combined with an exceedingly sensitive disposition, results in one of those fiery tempers that expends itself in a single explosion, then you are your former lovable self again. In your calm moods you are a most enjoyable companion, bright, cheerful, and in every way likable. Your bearing is always perfectly natural and you aren't afraid of any one. You readily adapt yourself to people and circumstances and are born communists, borrowing inordinately and lending just as freely.

Whatever you undertake, you get out of it all there is in it. And you do everything well that you put your hand to, but when you have time to be lazy, no one can be lazier. Always your heart leads, for with you love is the mainspring. Whatever becomes a conviction with you will have to appeal to your heart. You may perhaps reason it out in your own way afterwards, but that you know a thing is enough.

You fire people possess a remarkable amount of intuition, which helps you to make farseeing conclusions. This gives you the reputation of being philosophical, whereas, in reality, you don't deserve such credit at all. For, if people are attractive and plausible, you don't stop to analyze their character. You accept them trustfully and sometimes follow them blindly to your own financial destruction. This is where the weakness of your love nature shows itself.

Inharmony in your daily life is ruinous to your health and is apt to result in nervous irritability. Harmony is the only medicine needed and if you can obtain the peace you crave, all the warmth and sunniness of your nature immediately beam forth.

"How a thing will look" is your law; too much so, for many a Leo person has married on the strength of appearances and been dreadfully unhappy as a result. You should not marry until you are sure of your heart and you should try to look farther than the externals for real worth. A marriage with Sagittarius, Nov. 23-Dec. 22, is generally sympathetic and harmonious, also one with Aries, March 22-April 20. Gemini, May 22-June 22, and Libra, Sept. 24-Oct. 23, are both congenial. But perhaps Aquarius, Jan. 21-Feb. 19, would make you the happiest mate of them all, because of its quiet negative strength and unexcitable nature.

You will be most fortunate during your own sign and the week beginning Jan. 27. Your birthstones are the ruby and the diamond; colors, yellow, red, and green. Professions, decorator, milliner, dressmaker, cook, physician, musician, actor, and florist.

Now, Doris—Answer!

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a daily reader of your column and would like you to give me your reason of a certain subject. What is your objection to a boy kissing a girl? If a boy goes with a girl a certain length of time, I see no objection to him or her kissing. H. C. AND J. A. D."

You evidently have your mind made up and I have a feeling that my opinion isn't going to count for much, but here goes. Kisses are, or should be, sacred, to be conferred only upon those to whom you are closely related. Don't you see how they lose all their sacredness when you pass them around promiscuously? Intimacies of this kind, when you are not engaged, tend to lessen you in the eyes of the one whose good opinion means most to you, for respect, you know, must form the basis for the right sort of love.

Her Mother Objects.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a stenographer and keeping company with a young man three years my senior. He is employed with the same firm. I love him and know he loves me in return. However, my mother objects to my going with him, and tells me that he will never treat me right. It makes me feel bad to hear her talk in such way, since I have gone with him three months and do not think she is thoroughly acquainted with him. What should I do? I am at a loss to understand what she means by such a talk. WORRIED."

As a general thing I am inclined to think that a mother's judgment in the matter of a man is to be relied upon. However, sometimes, I am sorry to say, a selfish motive is the basis of a parent's objection. I have observed this to be true where the daughter was the mother's sole companion and support. It is not a fair state of things and I think a girl should look out sufficiently for her own future to be unwilling to sacrifice everything for the parent. Of course, you have not been going with the young man very long. Suppose you ask your mother to give him a year's time before condemning him as she has done and together maybe you and he can win her over during that time.

His Frau Grows Fat.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been married four years, and I love my wife, but I have a kick coming just the same. When I married her she was slim and pretty. But now she is so fat and untidy I get mad all over when I look at her. I want her to go to take physical exercises to reduce, but she won't. She won't play golf or tennis or do anything but sit around the house and eat candies all the time. I am small in stature, and that's why I feel queer about her getting so heavy. JIM."

That is discouraging, Jim! I don't know of anything much more hopelessly discouraging than a wife who just refuses to keep herself up. Keep on hammering at her until she is made to realize that you don't approve. If she hasn't pride enough in herself then she shouldn't be spared. In this age of competition the best thing a wife can realize is that one of the easiest things a man does is to cast his eyes in directions away from a slovenly wife. There is no excuse for the excess pounds nowadays, either. If a woman wills, she may be without them.

* *

About Marrying Cousins.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are two girls of 16 and 17, and are desperately in love with two brothers, one of the brothers being a cousin to one of us. Is it proper for cousins to marry? The boys are 21 and 24. Are they too much older than we? We will watch for your answer in the paper. S. H. AND E. M."

Girls of 16 shouldn't be thinking of marriage at all. That's my first shot. Second, write immediately to the Eugenics Record bureau, Cold Springs Harbor, Long Island, N. Y., telling them of your family history, and asking their opinion in this serious matter, for such it is. You'll be a long time married, even if you wait until you are of age, so why bother your pretty heads with such dreadfully serious thoughts when you should be enjoying the most carefree time in your life?

* *

She's So Lonely.

"Dear Miss Blake: Could you tell me how I could meet a good man? I am all alone and am lonesome. I have a small rooming house, but would marry if I could find some good man willing to be a companion as well as a husband, a man about 40 or 50 years of age. I feel so lonesome and long for a good pal. Please answer. M. L."

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

I am extremely sorry, M. L., that I cannot be of service to you in helping you find a husband. You can see what a tremendous responsibility it would be if I were to attempt anything in the matrimonial bureau line. I could not undertake it. Is it not possible that among your acquaintances there is some widower or bachelor who would appreciate a woman with the home qualities you have? You understand that some effort must be made on the woman's part in the matter of securing a husband. Perhaps if you join some organization in connection with your church you might meet a desirable man. I hope that your lonesomeness will be of short duration.

What Do You Think?

"Dear Miss Blake: Will you please advise me what I should have done in this emergency? A few weeks ago I was invited to join a boating party given by a half dozen young men. The young men all live on the north side of a large city, while I live away out on the south side. One of the young men had an automobile.

"In spite of this, when it came time to come home the young man who had paid me attention all evening and had invited me slipped away into oblivion, while his pal, when I asked how I was going to get home alone at 1 a. m., shook me forcibly by the arm and said: 'Why don't you go home alone? You only live a half block from the elevated. If I take you home I'll not get back to my home before 4, and I have to be at work at 7.' I had to go home alone. They are all nice young men—not the kind you'd expect rough treatment from. "DOROTHY."

Well, Dorothy, the age of chivalry surely must be vanishing. I wouldn't call them nice young men—wouldn't even give them the benefit of the doubt. I'd hate to print here what I think of such disrespectful, unforgivable ill bred males as must have constituted that party. Type is far too cold to register my indignation.

Have Him for Friend.

"Dear Miss Blake: You have helped so many others who have had trouble that I have finally decided to come to you for advice. I am 15. While in a nearby town not long ago I was introduced to a nice young man about my own age. He asked me if I would answer his letter if he wrote to me. I did not promise for fear my parents might object. I would like to have this young man for a friend. Please tell me if you think it wrong if I answer his letter. ANXIOUS."

Please, please, little girl, do as your parents think best about this matter. You are so young to be getting sentimental and I fear that's where this early correspondence may lead. If you could carry on a strictly friendly exchange of notes then all right, but before you answer his first get the family O. K.

Real Love Stories

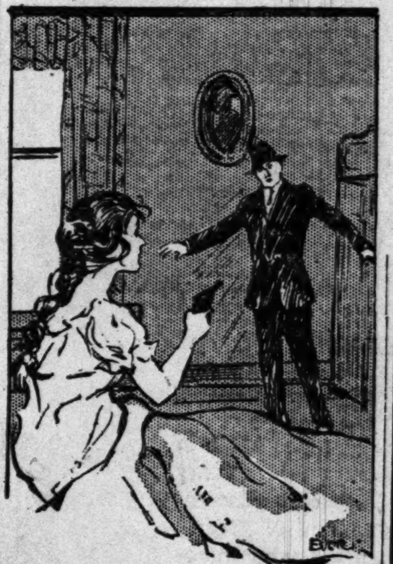
A Man in the House.

Three years ago this summer I lived in one of a long row of houses. I came back from a vacation trip a little earlier than I had planned to and found that the rest of my family were away, so I would have to stay alone in the house. I put my brother's revolver under my pillow, locked up everything tight and slept soundly till about 1:30 o'clock.



The presence of some one in my dark room wakened me, and after listening, frightened almost to death, I got my revolver and turned on the light. I found a young man feeling along the opposite wall for a light switch. The fact that he was, if anything, more frightened than I gave me courage and I would have none of his explanations about accidentally getting into the wrong house and that he was a new boarder at a house two doors away. I was determined to see the matter through, so without waiting to dress I walked him right over and found he had told the truth.

If he had proved a murderer I might have been a heroine to the end, but when it all proved a ghastly joke I broke down and cried and then verged on to hysterics.

This may seem a queer start for a romance, but he only seemed to remember how brave I was at first and not how I cried till I looked a fright. Within a year we were married.

In the two years of our married life he has had two sick friends and late work at the office, but he has always found the right house and before 10 o'clock. EMMA.

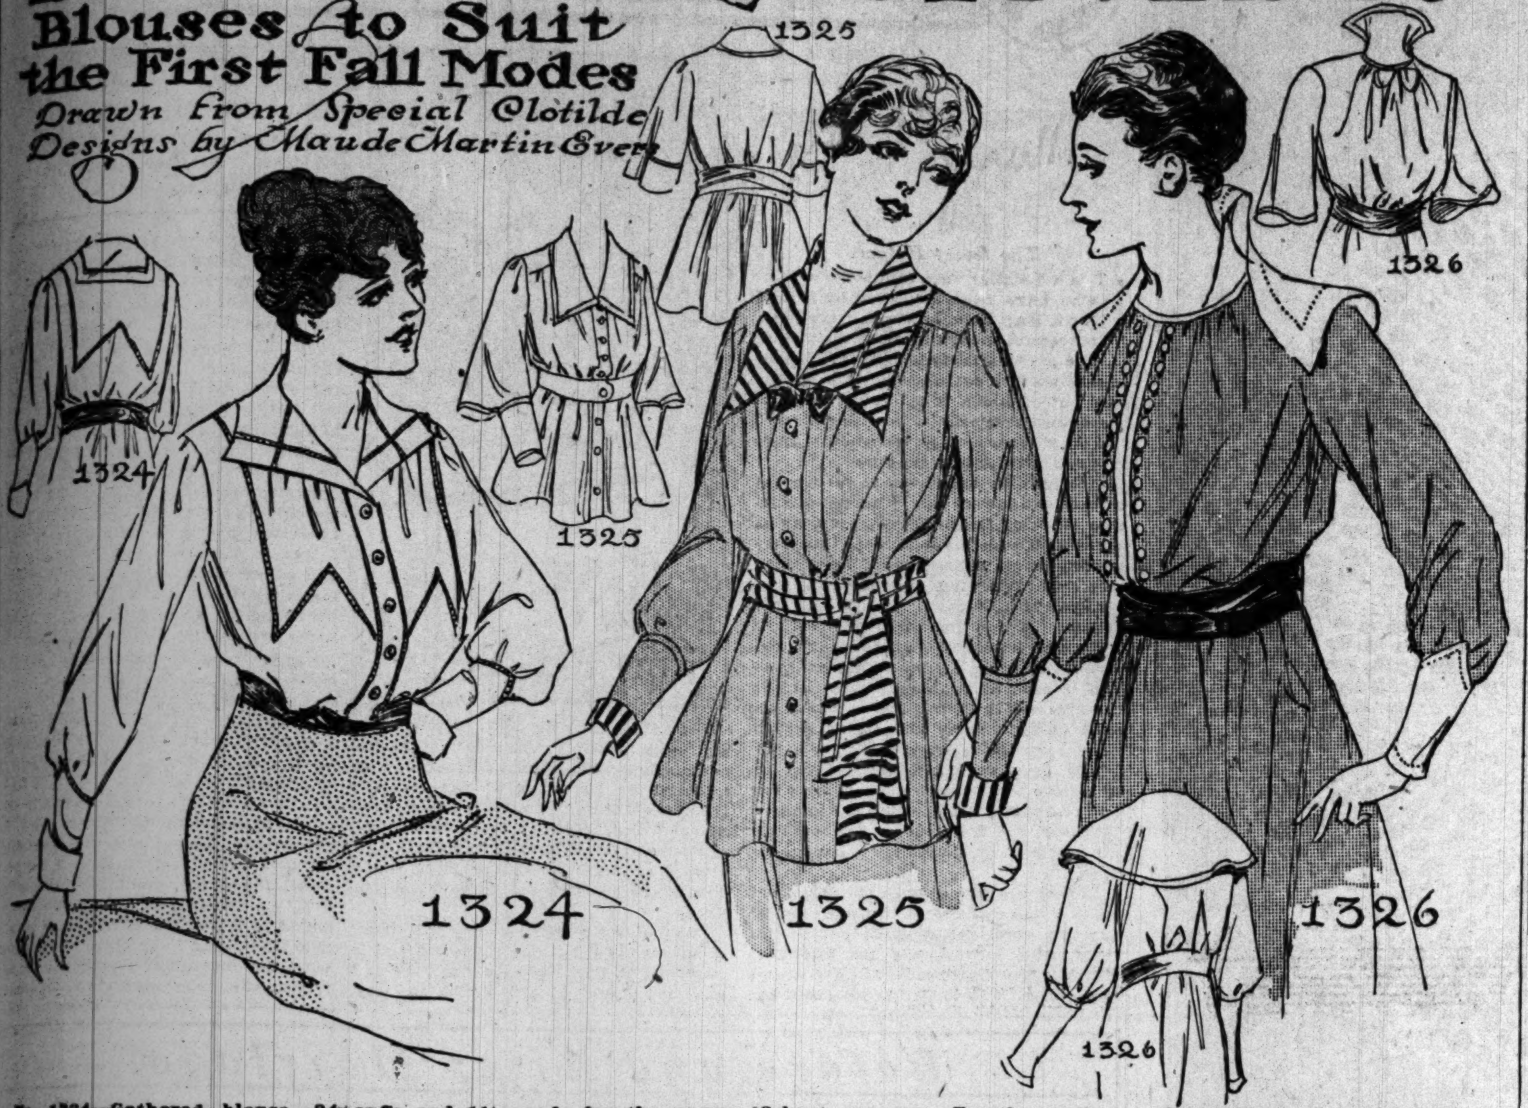
Blouses to Suit the First Fall Modes

Drawn from Special Clotilde Designs by Maude Martin Evers



No. 1324—Gathered blouse, 34 to 42 bust measure. For the medium size will be needed 1⅝ yards of material 36 inches wide for the lower portion of the blouse and cuffs and 1⅛ yards for the upper portion, sleeves, and collar, or 2⅞ yards 36, 1¾ yards 44, to make of one material.

No. 1325—Russian blouse, 34 to 42 bust measure. For the medium size will be needed 3¼ yards of material 36 inches wide, 2⅞ yards 44, with 1 yard 36 inches wide for the collar, cuffs, and sash.

No. 1326—Gathered blouse, 34 to 42 bust measure. For the medium size will be needed 2⅞ yards of material 36 inches wide, 2¼ yards 44, with ⅝ yard 36 inches wide for the collar and cuffs.

NOW is distinctly the time to consider what one is going to wear this fall. For fall is not so far off. Indeed, fall apparel is already in and fall styles are growing more settled and dependable every day.

These three blouses which I have shown today are all blouses which can be depended upon.

No. 1324 is an effective gathered blouse which would look well made up in soft materials. The silks and crêpes and even the heavier materials which will come in as soon as the fall goods really arrive will also make up well in this model.

No. 1235 is the ever popular Russian blouse. With it are the necessary smartly made collar, cuffs, and sash.

No. 1326 is another gathered blouse. This style blouse is to be modish these coming months and the design is one which is becoming to a large number of women.

All of these blouses are garments which will fit in the wardrobe to be of almost every woman. They are adjustable to many different occasions and to many different types.

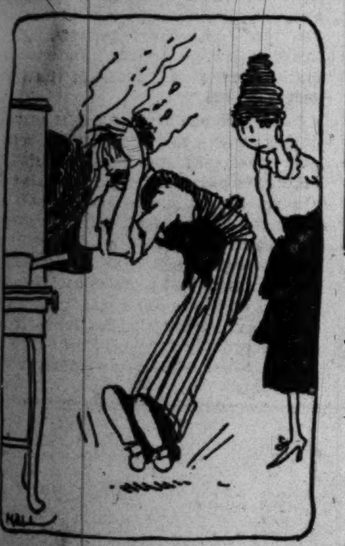
It Was Still Burning.

Lucy was a delightful bride, well educated, unable to cook, and thoroughly happy. She made up her mind right from the start to succeed and to do things in a modern way. So she had a gas range installed in her kitchen for use during the winter.



"Now, tell me, please, where you start the fire," she said to the man who set it up. "I have a cake ready to go in the oven."

The man lit the gas, Lucy put her cake in the oven, and in due time it was cooked to a turn. Three weeks later the gas bill came and it was $42.75, a little more than two weeks' pay for the husband.

Lucy gave a terrible gasp and her husband tore his hair out in handfuls. Then the two of them raced madly for the gas stove.

"Great heavens, it's burning," the husband gasped.

"Of course it is," said Lucy sweetly. "The man lit it for me when he set up the stove."

"And haven't you put it out since?" he gasped.

"No," said Lucy, "he didn't tell me to put it out, and I thought—I thought—why, Albert, what's the matter with you?"

But Albert had fallen backwards against the wall, gasping for breath. Indeed, he looked very much like a man who had been asphyxiated by the gas bill.

It Was No Dishpan.

A friend of mine, a young bride, was furnishing her tiny apartment. Everything was complete in the kitchen with the exception of the dishpan.

So she went down to a department store to purchase one. All the clerks seemed to be busy, so she wandered about the housefurnishing department until she found the article she wanted. The price seemed to be rather high, but the color matched the rest of her utensils, so she ordered it sent out.

The next afternoon her mother and some friends were at her home when the package arrived. They were aghast when she told them the price, $2.50, but imagine her embarrassment and their intense amusement when, upon opening the parcel, the dishpan proved to be a baby's bath tub.

Hubby Never Knew.

I made a dessert called floating island. It looked lovely when served with white of egg on top. No one ate it, as I forgot to cook it. Another time I tried to make crust on a chicken pie, but couldn't get the dough off the rolling pin. Hubby didn't know, as I washed everything before his arrival.

Her Own Process.

I just finished high school when I married and knew nothing about housekeeping, particularly cooking. I had seen my mother cook something in pods—whether it was beans or peas, I could not remember. When my husband sent some peas for dinner I cooked them just as they were sent. I dropped them in boiling salted water—pods and all.

My husband, glancing into the kettle, saw the bursted pods floating on the top of the water and roared with laughter. I took a peep and, seeing the empty pods on top, knew the peas had dropped to the bottom of the kettle.

Tossing my head I loftily remarked: "I suppose your mother didn't know about this 'short cut' in shelling peas, but just watch how easy it is."

Then I skimmed the pods off the surface of the water, drained the peas in a colander, then put them back on the stove to reheat in cream, with seasoning. The peas were delicious, and my husband marveled greatly over my cleverness in "shelling" them. To this day he doesn't know that I discovered the process by accident.

And Yeast Is Yeast.

One day when we were first married my husband asked me to make some buckwheat cakes for breakfast. I had never made any, so my husband told me how he thought his mother had made them.

Never having used a compressed yeast I did not know how it would rise if put in a warm place. So I prepared my batter and put it in a bowl that just held it. I placed it on the hearth of the kitchen stove to keep warm as directed.

Now my husband had placed his shoes under the stove hearth when he took them off to go to bed. So you can imagine my consternation upon going to the kitchen in the morning to prepare breakfast to find that the batter had risen during the night and overflowing bowl and hearth had filled my husband's shoes.

Red Silk Stockings.

I was the only child of wealthy parents and had been brought up without any knowledge of the housewifely arts. I married a fine young man when he was still at the "small salary" stage, and we were forced to be economical.

One day, without the knowledge of my husband, I decided to do the washing myself. I set the boiler of water on the gas stove, put in a large quantity of soap and then put in all the clothes together. Among other things there was a white wool skirt, and, alas, a pair of red silk stockings!

I let them all boil for about an hour, when my husband came home in time to help me take them out. As we looked at the strange concoction the tears rolled down my cheeks, but my husband only laughed and said he would not exchange me for any number of domestic science teachers.

Thought Tips Were Worthless.

One of my mistakes in learning to cook happened many times after my marriage. My husband, being fond of asparagus, I often served it, but always in preparing cut off all tips, throwing them away, keeping only lower, tough part. A kind neighbor showed me my mistake, so I now serve a more palatable dish.

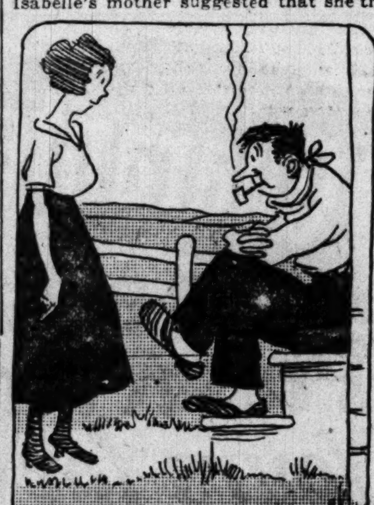
Took Half a Calf.

Isabelle, who lived on a ranch in Montana, had a fine calf she wanted to sell. A young herder had the place adjoining and Isabelle's mother suggested that she try to sell the calf to him. So one evening, after the day's work was done, Isabelle walked across the field to her neighbor's ranch to see if she could make the trade.



She found him sitting on his back steps enjoying his after supper pipe, and sitting down beside him she explained her errand.

"Will you take the calf?" she concluded.

"Well," he drawled, "I'll tell you what we'll do, Isabelle; "let's put it in the pasture and call it ours."

And they did.

Being a Boy Again.

Said my bachelor friend: "I sometimes wish that I were a boy again in my mother's kitchen on the farm. I used to sit behind the stove, watching her make doughnuts, and she's let me roll them in sugar myself. Those were great days."

Said I to myself: "We shall see what we shall see." So I pored over my cook book the following morning, and practiced as though grave matters were at stake.

The next time Friend Bachelor called I laughed and said: "Did you know that I have a magic wand? Trust me, and let me blindfold you; when the handkerchief has been removed from your eyes you will be a boy again."

He was curious, and I led his hesitating footsteps into my blue and white kitchen and told him to sit down in the chair I led him to. I turned up the gas under my hot kettle of lard, and removing the blindfold, invited him to watch me manufacture perfectly fresh doughnuts in the good old fashioned way, asking him to roll them in sugar.

Two hours later we walked into the living room, and whether eating too many doughnuts made him sentimental or not, I can't say, but I know that he proposed and I've agreed to make him a boy again once a week in the little home we are now furnishing.

Admired Her Bravery.

The young man I secretly adored lived in the next village, and on summer evenings would often drive down for me and take me to the band concerts.

One June evening he came for me as usual. I awaited him on our little porch, in a brand new summer frock, and as he drove up with his spirited team I thought he looked very handsome indeed. We started off gayly for the concert. He was driving quite rapidly when a crowd of hilarious boys on bicycles approached and rode by, one of them bumping into one of the horses as he passed. Both horses became badly frightened and ran away.

I sat quietly beside the young man as he struggled to gain control of the animals. I asked him finally if I could help, and we then discussed the situation as if nothing unusual was occurring. The thoroughly maddened horses ended it all by running into a fence, overturning the buggy, and both of us were thrown out.

The young man jumped up quickly, ran to me and helped me up, and asked if I was hurt. I nonchalantly answered: "Not at all. I've just lost a few hairpins and got some dust and grass stains on my new gown."

He asked if I was game to go to the concert in another buggy, and I said, "Of course." Though my mother protested, after I changed my gown we drove to the concert. All went well, though I felt a trifle uncomfortable until we reached home. When I tried to stand I could not. I was finally lifted and carried indoors, and was in bed for some time.

The next day the young man arrived with many roses, and while my mother was busy arranging them he told me that a girl so brave was his ideal and begged me to marry him.

We have now been married ten years, and I wonder if our continued happiness may be partly due to the fact that I've tried to meet the vicissitudes that have come to us later as quietly and with as little fuss as I did the runaway.

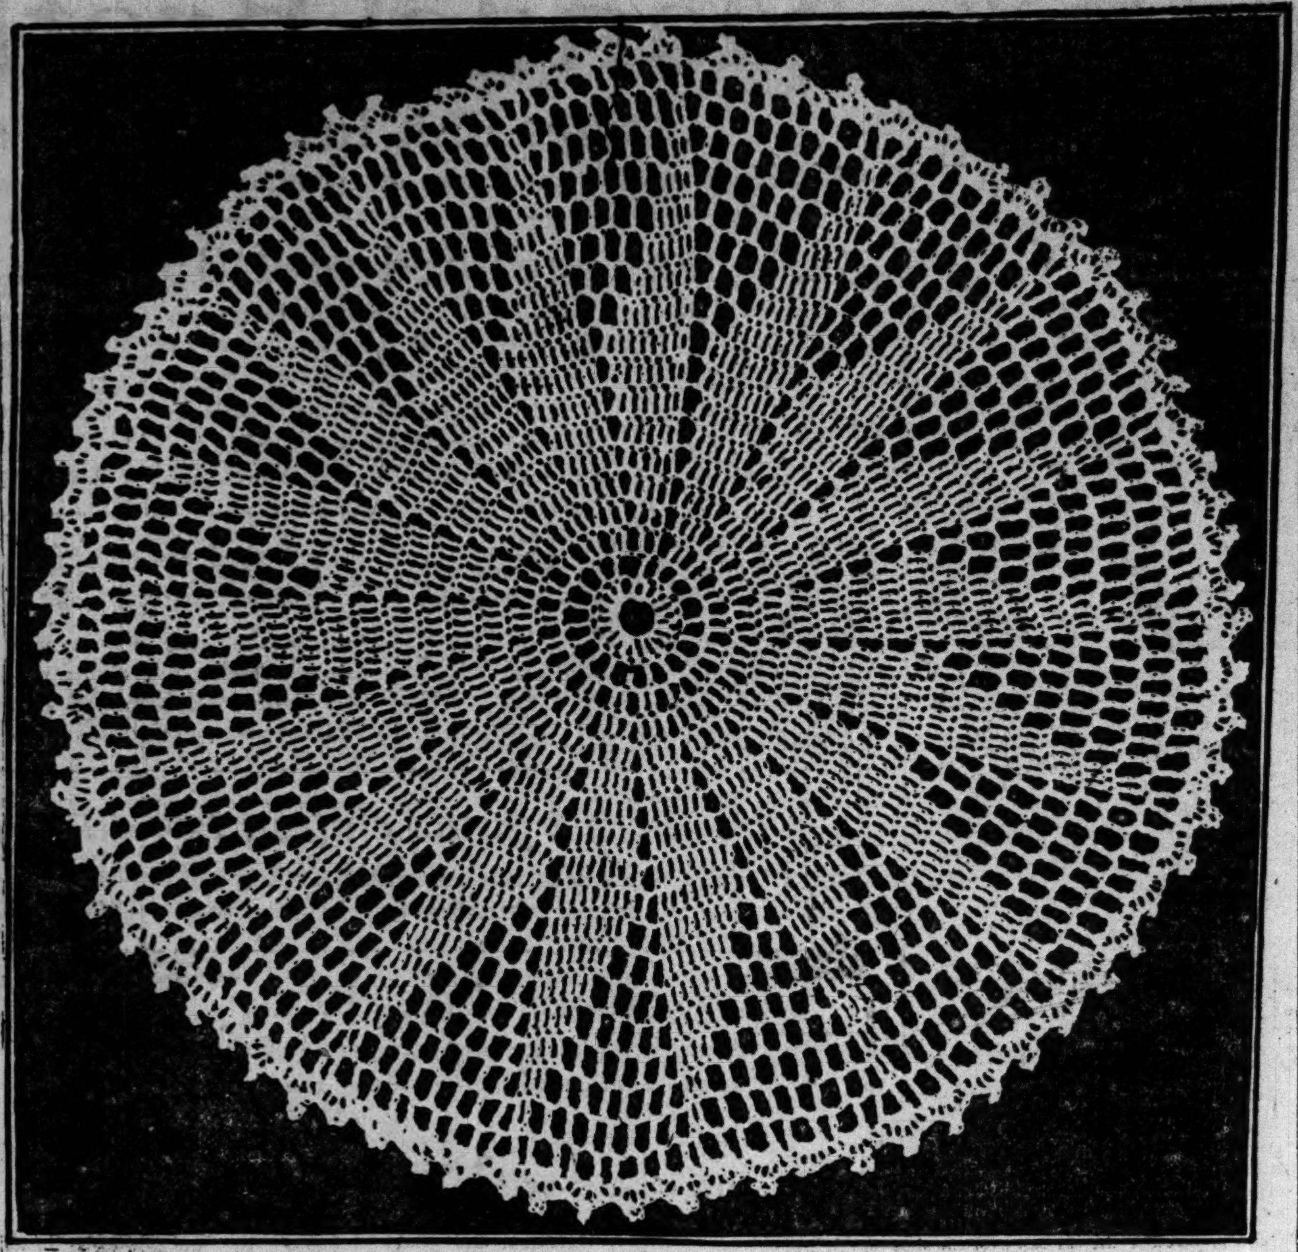
A Crochet Cover for a Table Mat.



As shown, this dainty mat, slipped over an asbestos mat, represents a day's work with the needle. No. 20 thread was used, but the pattern is quite as pretty with No. 5 and can be finished in much less time. Of course, like all crochet work, it can be made in odd minutes, and crocheting in moderation can be recommended as a rest for tired nerves.

For this star design, start carefully with a neat chain of ten, fasten securely in center, and fill with 17 treble, making a nice flat circle. Ch. O, 3 of ch., forming a treble, 1 t., repeat 2 ch. 1 t. all around circle. For the second row 1 t., over 1 t., 1 t., 2 ch., repeating 2 t., 2 ch., around circle. Next repeat 3 t., 2 ch., keeping one side of the point straight and the other widening with 1 extra treble in each following row. When a count of 9 t. is reached, 1 t. is dropped from the side that has been widened, dropping one in each row and increasing the number of open spaces 1 each row until the pattern works out in a circle of open meshes.

Crochet all around circle of open meshes, 2 t., ch. 5, catch 3 stitches of chain with 1 single stitch for a picot, 2 t., 1, s. c., in next mesh, then 4 t.

Underneath the scallop work three rows of open meshes and in the last row, 1 d. c., in each mesh. This will tighten the 3 under rows and the mat is slipped over the asbestos and kept in place by the under rows. The cost of mat is 10 cents; the cost of thread the same

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

The Bossy Helper.

IT is a peculiar fact that some women who have been employed by a firm for a long time, and who have been successful enough to make their work and position fairly important, develop toward the firm a strong feeling of possession, out of which is apt to grow, sometimes unconsciously, a jealousy toward the other women employés who are more recent appendages to the firm.

Such jealousy usually takes the form of resentment toward any progress or success made by the other employés, which sometimes leads the jealous one into committing an injustice toward her associates, as the following letter demonstrates:

"Dear Miss King: I have been in my present position for three months, and although I know my work has been satisfactory, and that a good, permanent position is assured me here, I look back to the first month of this job as one of the most uncomfortable and trying periods since I started to work.

"My previous experience had led me to believe that women workers were fair and reasonably kind toward one another. However, the first four or five weeks in my new position caused me to change my mind.

"There are five girls in the office, and when I was introduced to them the first day my employer signaled out one of them, who, he informed me, had been with the firm eight years and knew everything there was to be known about the office. He asked her to show me what my work would be, and to help me as much as she could. She graciously agreed to assist me, but when we were back in the office with the other girls her manner changed and she gave me several commissions to do without an explanation or a word of direction, simply telling me to return the work to her when I had finished.

"She left me severely alone for the rest of the morning, but one of the other girls promised to help me with my work and gave me many pointers during the day.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

She advised me to pay little attention to Miss N.'s bossy manner, and to submit my work for inspection to the man who hired me, not to Miss N., no matter what her orders were.

"With the help of the other girls in the office I managed to do the work accurately and with a fair degree of speed, but hardly a day passed in which the antagonism of Miss N. did not show itself in some unpleasant way. I stood this about a month, and was on the point of resigning when my employer discovered the situation and told Miss N. that I was to answer only to him for my work, that I was to take orders from no one else, and asked her to cease interfering with me or my work. Although she had never been friendly, her manner toward me has never been openly disagreeable since.

"Miss N. is a wonderfully efficient worker, has a remarkable memory for statistics and detail, and is really an invaluable employé, but it surprises me greatly that such a capable woman could be so petty as to be jealous and resentful of a recruit in the office. D. G."

It is an unfortunate weakness to succumb to jealousy, no matter what the object, and Miss N.'s methods would, in all probability, and in spite of her personal capability, lessen her value to the firm, as antagonism among employés is bound to lessen the efficiency of the entire office, and it is simpler to dispense with the individual responsible for the trouble than to reorganize the office force.

Before and After Marriage.

After the Honeymoon.

My first marriage disillusion came only a month after our marriage. We were sitting down to our first meal together after the honeymoon trip. I had prepared the meal with greatest care but rather poor success, for I never had received much instruction in the fine art of cooking before marriage. However, my fiancé always had assured me that anything I would cook would taste delicious to him simply because my hands had prepared it. But when husband looked at that meal, alas for fond illusions. He shrugged his shoulders and, casting a withering glance at the food, remarked, "Don't ask me too say grace this morning, Daisy. I'm afraid the Lord might feel insulted if I asked him to bless this grub." F. C.

Lost Persuasive Powers.

They live next door. She married him because he was such a splendid talker—that is, debater. She "fell" for him after hearing him hold up a difficult side successfully in the local debating society. Before he was married that fellow could argue a stray bulldog into lending him his tail. I wonder if she still admires him for his argumentative abilities. Honestly, that poor simp is about as hopeless as any one I ever saw. Why, today, after a year of married life, he can't even argue his wife into giving him 10 cents of his pay to ride to work.

Suggesting a Cure.

Just a few months before I got married I had a sore throat, and every evening my dearly beloved would bring me a different remedy; a bag of lemon drops one evening, horehound candy the next, honey another evening, and so on until I was cured. We have been married two years and last month I got a sore throat, so on the second day, seeing that my beloved had not prescribed anything for it, I asked him what I should do for it, and he replied: "Cut it." Well, I was so stunned that I felt like taking his advice.

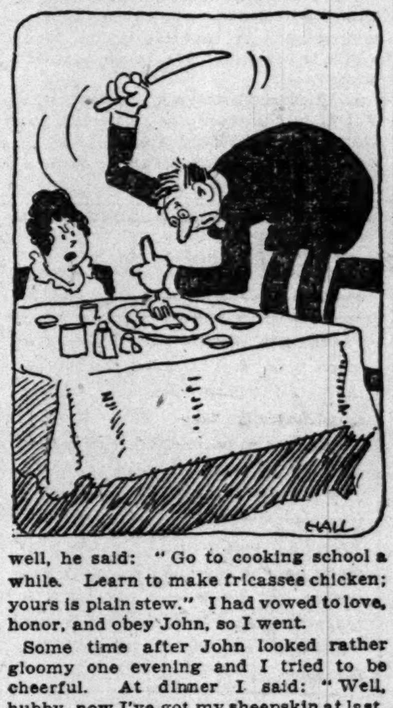
It Must Have Been.

When John and I were married I had an illusion we were to be happy ever after, as he had said before that occasion that I cooked just like his mother. And then—well, he said: "Go to cooking school a while. Learn to make fricassee chicken; yours is plain stew." I had vowed to love, honor, and obey John, so I went.



Some time after John looked rather gloomy one evening and I tried to be cheerful. At dinner I said: "Well, hubby, now I've got my sheepskin at last, tell me what this is I cooked for you tonight."

He was digging into fricassee chicken. "Well," he said, "you've got me—unless it is your diploma."

Wasn't it awful? M. C.

Didn't Expect Him to Wear It.

Before our marriage my wife always seemed much interested in my personal appearance, but after marriage she had a suspicion that any care I took to improve my looks was designed for some other woman. One Christmas she gave me a 50 cent necktie for a present, a perfunctory duty, I guess, and a few days later I was putting it on.

"What you wasting my money on new ties for? Who you dressing up for now?" she snapped with eyes glaring like a wild-cat.

"Why, dearie," I replied, "this is the tie you gave me for a Christmas present."

Wasting Her Time.

I could give no elaborate dinners in my two room apartment before I was married, but I often gave chafing dish suppers. John called my Welsh rarebit "divine," my charlotte russe "something fit for the muses," and my sitting room he called a "pleasant oasis in the desert of life."

Later on, when we occupied a flat together, and I had done my best in preparing refreshments for a card party—an elaborate vegetable salad garnished with spades, hearts, clubs, and diamonds cut from the hearts of pickled beets—I heard my husband say, with a side glance at my ingeniousness with beets: "Really, Angela, that looks like childishness. I'm always afraid to put my spoon into something so immensely decorative. I bet you could have read thirty pages in Shakespeare while you were fussing with the beets."

The Tribune Cook Book

by Jane Eddington

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

WHEN summer is at high tide most of the vegetables are lowest in price and finest in quality. Yet sometimes their very abundance seems to be a burden and deadens our ideas about ways of cooking them. It is at such times that we need to exercise especial ingenuity and to prepare vegetable dishes that stimulate the appetite and satisfy it, too, to a great extent, since of all burdens the overeating of heavy foods in summer imposes about the worst.

In French cookery we find many macedoines or mixtures of vegetables, some of them, called after the gardener's wife, jardiniere. Our fancy outer pot for plants, you see, comes from the same source, the French word "pardin" for garden.

The Spanish make many fried vegetable mixtures, always, perhaps, with the sweet or hot pepper. It is doubtful whether the common Spanish cook could boil a vegetable so that it would be at all palatable, but she can make agreeable fried mixtures. We get these dishes through Mexico or in some cases from the Creoles. Italians have the same sort, or much the same, although one of their ways of making vegetables pleasantly is to fry cold boiled ones in egg.

Many of the recipes from these sources are particularly good for leftovers, with onion and pepper added for seasoning. Our own good old mixture, the calico hash, is all too little known. Perhaps it would not be appreciated now since the New England dinner of which it was a leftover, as served, is so generally a mockery.

Fried Corn, Mexican Fashion.

Slice two good sized new boiling onions and chop one green or red sweet pepper. Put a tablespoon of oil or butter in the frying pan over a gentle fire and fry the onion in it. After a little add the pepper and then a cup of corn cut from the cob. Season to taste. Cook gently until all are well mingled and well done.

Mexican Tomato.

Cut out the stem of a green sweet pepper and remove the seeds, then chop. Prepare and chop one medium sized onion and fry both of these until tender in one or two tablespoons of butter without browning them. One tablespoon is enough if they are constantly stirred. Add a cup of stewed tomato, a half teaspoon of sugar and salt to taste. The Mexican would add some cayenne pepper probably, but if prepared for a number of people it is best to leave this out, and best anyway or anyhow. Cook until ingredients are thoroughly blended, stirring most of the time. Five or ten minutes is usually sufficient. As many cups of corn as tomato may be added to this dish, but then it is neither so wholesome nor piquant.

Fried Cucumber.

Cut an onion in thin slices and slice one tomato for each good sized sliced cucumber used. Fry together over a low fire until the cucumber is tender, adding seasoning to taste.

Cucumber Cutlets.

Cut off the ends and peel short bulky cucumbers, then cut into three equal pieces and drop them into boiling water. Do not cook or blanch them more than five minutes, otherwise the seeds will be loosened and the pieces will break. Drain and cool a little, then dip in slightly beaten egg yolk, then in cracker crumbs. Fry gently in butter, turning once. May be served with a sauce.

Stewed Cucumber.

Peel cucumber carefully, removing but the thinnest shaving. Cut in quarters and remove the seeds, then cut the rest in dice. Put to cook with a tiny bit of water over a minimum fire in a small covered aluminum kettle. You may add an onion or celery or both. Serve with butter. This may be put through a sieve and used as a basis for a cream soup. If cooked in a cup of meat stock in an open kettle, so that the stock is reduced by the time the cucumber is tender, this may be made a delicious dish.

Vegetables in Meat Stock.

Carrots just covered with meat stock, to which a little sugar and butter are added, are in great favor with celebrated cooks. "Celeri au jus," which is just celery in gravy in plain English, is a delicious dish when carefully made. A little piece of salt pork helps out. Even potatoes cooked in meat stock are fine, and an Italian dish of glazed onions is superexcellent. There are a great number of these dishes, therefore the frame of the Sunday roast chicken should never be thrown away, but covered with cold water, gently brought to a boil, and then simmered for from six to ten hours. Stock made from a turkey jack is fine for vegetables, but that from an old hen is almost as good. Plain beef stock is generally used because in every home where people live in a conventional manner such stock is constantly on hand.

* *

Baked Potatoes and Shirred Eggs.

Peel small and solid tomatoes, scoop out the center, and season slightly with a sprinkling of salt and pepper, then break an egg into each. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and other seasonings, with a little butter. Stand in a baking dish and cook for ten or fifteen minutes in an oven which is not too hot.

* *

Patahol.

This East Indian breakfast dish for one may be doubled as a luncheon dish for two. Cut one or two large peeled tomatoes in slices and fry them in a little butter. When they are tender add an egg well beaten, cook while stirring both together until of a smooth consistency. A little minced onion or half a red pepper minced may be added, but they need to be cooked a little before the tomato is added to them.

Answers to Inquiries.

JANE: The basis of meat soup, the liquid, is called soup stock. There are many ways of making this stock, which is also used for making meat sauces and for cooking vegetables. One quart of water to one pound of meat is the common measure, but for a strong stock only a pint of water is used. A shin of beef and a knuckle of veal are considered a combination, but often just the beef is used. If meat without bone, a good boiling piece, is used the stock may be cooked in three hours, but a good soup bone will not yield all its gelatin under twelve hours. Any stock should be started with the water cold. It is brought slowly to a boil, skimmed several times, and then covered and cooked over the simmering burner. If boiled the meat grows too hard. The soup bunch is used to flavor this stock when it is to be used at once, but if it is to be kept it is better to cook it without the flavoring vegetables. A hundred or more different soups may be made with beef stock. Before you begin housekeeping I should advise you to purchase a standard cook book.

L. Q. L.: A good chocolate sirup which may be used hot or cold as a sauce is the following: Put three tablespoons of cut up chocolate into a graniteware saucepan or double boiler and when it has melted over the heat add to it gradually a cup of boiling water, stirring all the time. Stir over the fire until all the chocolate has dissolved. Then add two cups of granulated sugar and stir until the whole begins to boil. Cook three minutes longer, or to sirup stage if you use thermometer, and then strain and cool. When cool add one tablespoon of vanilla extract. Bottle and keep in a cool place. Your question about pickling fruit covers so much ground and involves so many details connected with each sort of fruit that I cannot answer it this time. This question of watermelon alone is a big one, but I pray you never to use alum.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING-HAND

by Marion Harland

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"IN a recent number of the Helping Hand a woman who was deaf asked for information as to where she could learn lip reading. If she gains the information so that she can learn it at home, will she kindly pass it on? I can hear people if they speak loud enough, but depend largely upon reading from the lips, as I have picked it up. I would like to become more perfect in lip reading if I could, so I ask for this help. Mrs. P. F. H."

Lip reading has received a good deal of attention in these columns of late, but there is always room for more help and advice along this line. Can any one give it to this correspondent?

Glasses Are Broken.

May there not be a pair of lenses somewhere in the Corner, discarded, that I might be able to secure? I am 56 years of age and ill. My glasses are broken.

"An Old Cornerite."

I hope some one may be able to fulfill the wish of this Cornerite.

* *

After Blacking the Stove.

"After blacking the stove, soap your hands, use the coffee grounds, and see the effect. W. T. G."

I am obliged for this hint and regret I could not print the others sent, which referred to subjects not in the province of this column.

* *

Copies of Recitations.

"I wish you could, without too much trouble, obtain for me the two recitations which were one time requested: 'The Face Upon the Floor' and 'The Women of Marblehead.' If you can send me either of these I will do any favor in my power. J. K."

Can some of our readers respond to this appeal? Usually there is no trouble in securing such verses.

* *

Seeks Missing Friend.

"I wonder if you could help me find my father's dearest friend. We have not heard from him for five years, when he left for Cuba. His name is George W. Newton, called 'Wally' by all of us. I certainly would be glad to get in touch with him, and I know his sister would be only too glad to hear from him again.

"F. W."

We have been successful on a variety of occasions in tracing friends who had drifted out of sight, and I hope we may have equally good fortune in this instance.

* *

Substitute for Hot Water Bag.

"Here is a little help we have found useful, although it may be stale to you. When our water bag gave way and could not be repaired my aunt suggested using common glass bottles and we have been employing them entirely since in preference to the bag. They can be filled with boiling water if it is poured in gradually and they keep hot longer than the others. A flat bottle is preferable when one is sick. T. A. V. B."

A flannel cover makes the glass bottle even more of a comfort.

* *

Letters for the Lonely.

"I would like the names of a number of shut-ins or lonely people who would enjoy getting letters. I have plenty of time and like to write letters, so if any such would enjoy receiving them, am sure I could make them sufficiently interesting to relieve the monotony of their quiet lives. N. G."

Such requests as these seldom fail to receive prompt replies. I am sure there are shut-ins who would be eager to get the proffered letters. I shall look for applications for the address of N. G. and will ask that with these may come a stamped and self-addressed envelope for reply.

* *

Cushion Cover to Piece.

"I wonder if there is any one of your Cornerites, especially shut-ins, who would like to piece me a hexagon silk sofa cushion cover in exchange for silk or cotton pieces. I would give half the pieces to them, and I could also write letters sometimes to help cheer sick ones. Perhaps you can find some one who would like to do that to pass the time. I could give the size of pillow cover if any one wants to do it. J. C. M."

I hope there may be some one who can avail herself of this offer of exchange as well as of the letters of cheer.

* *

Reading Her Recreation.

"Do you suppose some one can send me some magazines? I live in a country district and my sole recreation is reading in what few idle moments I have. I would be glad to pay express on some odds and ends of carpets, rugs, or linoleum, for my bare white floors require much scrubbing, which I am scarcely able to give them. Please have any one thinking of sending these to me write before dispatching them. You may be interested to know that I have a dear little boy 19 months old. I think the Corner is great. Mrs. R. C. T."

Is there some one who can grant these requests? Write for her address.

Plants to Exchange.

"I am a young married woman with a nice country home and one little son. I have a lovely rose garden and want to exchange rooted rose cuttings and home raised peach and apple trees for some ferns and potted plants and flower seeds. I crochet and embroider nicely and would exchange such work for rugs or good books. I have lots of magazines and reading matter some one may have who wants it. Mrs. K. B. J."

Who wishes to make the exchange requested either of plants or of work? If any one is interested in this matter and desires the address of Mrs. K. B. J. I will be glad to supply it on receipt of a stamped and self-addressed envelope with the request.

* *

Hints and Helps.

"If A. M. H., whose plea is in the Corner and who finds life sad on account of deafness, lives in my city I could help her or others with seeds of plants, cuttings, and old magazines, also with delightful Bible lessons. There is a studio here where one may learn lip reading. To the woman who asked directions for furnishing a small house I would say: Try to have the color scheme harmonize throughout the house, in floor coverings, window and door draperies, which will give an air of spaciousness to the small rooms, providing there are not too many pictures and too much bric-a-brac on the walls or mantel. As it is near canning time, I would like to caution against loosely lined covers of glass cans—covers of zinc with porcelain linings—as fruit spoils in such cans when the linings are loose. L. B."

The address of A. M. H. and the other addresses asked have been sent to this helpful Cornerite. I am sure that she will be of service to many, and I foresee applications for her name and address. I trust each one may be accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

From a Farm Woman.

"I have been a reader of the Corner for some time and I think it is doing a wonderful work. I live away out in the country on a farm. I get lonely at times and I have been almost an invalid for the last three or four years, not able to do any hard work. I have four girls, from the ages of 5 to 14, and one boy, aged 11. I would like some quilt pieces of silk or woolen suitable for patchwork so that I could teach my girls how to sew. I would gladly pay postage on anything sent. We have been trying to prove up on a farm, but have never realized any crops on the farm yet, and with my illness we have found it difficult to make ends meet. I have a number of post cards I would give in exchange or to some shutins. I was always one who loved to read and I enjoy reading the letters sent in by the Cornerites. If some one had some good books or magazines to spare from their libraries I would appreciate them and would be glad to get a good Bible. Here is a recipe for making sweet potato custard pie: Boil four pounds of sweet potatoes until soft; remove the peeling and mash; add enough sweet milk to make a good soft batter; put in three eggs, beaten light; one cup of sugar, lemon, and salt to taste, and two tablespoons of flour. Bake in pie crusts as you would any ordinary pie. I hope some time to be of use to the Corner and I would be glad to have a few correspondents. Mrs. L. C. G."

This Cornerite, I hope, may receive the patchwork pieces and the reading matter she craves. It is hard when circumstances are such that the literature we take as a matter of course cannot be purchased because of other more pressing demands. The recipe for pie sounds attractive.

* *

On a Lonely Homestead.

"I wonder if some of the kind readers of the Corner would care to send old magazines to us. We are hungry for something to read. We live on a homestead twenty-five miles from a railroad or town, with no neighbors or friends near us, and we get terribly lonely at times and would so much enjoy having some good reading matter. We will gladly pay freight, if necessary, for the magazines would have to come by freight.

"H. A. T."

The wants of all homesteaders who are lonely appeal to me, but this letter goes to my heart. Will not some one write to me for the address of this correspondent and get in touch with her as to the magazines? As she says, they probably will have to be sent by freight, and her postoffice differs from the railroad address. If some one felt moved to send a subscription to a good magazine it would be a beautiful gift and one that would bring joy through a whole year.

* *

Magazines to Give Away.

"I have a year's magazines of three different kinds I would like to send to some one who would care for them. Would Mrs. W. Q. R. like to give me a little pleasure by bestowing that little canary bird on me? I am so lonely, and I dearly love pets. I would be glad to pay postage on the canary. I have little white rats to give away to some one who would like to have them. And if Mrs W. Q. R. has little babies perhaps I could crochet something for her baby in exchange for the canary bird. A. S."

The address of the friend who had the canary to give away was sent at once.

ITCHING SCALE ALL OVER HEAD

Would Burn So Could Not Sleep. Hair Came Out In Handfuls. Became Thin and Dry.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"A scale or crust would form all over my head and it felt as if my head had been burned and then scaled over. It would itch and burn and I could not sleep and when I was in company I would be ashamed. My hair came out in handfuls and it became thin and dry and there was no life in it.

"I heard of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I sent for a free sample. The scale began to come off and my head felt better so I bought more and after I used one cake of Cuticura Soap and one tin of Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Mary A. Love, Winthrop, Iowa, Jan. 2, 1916.

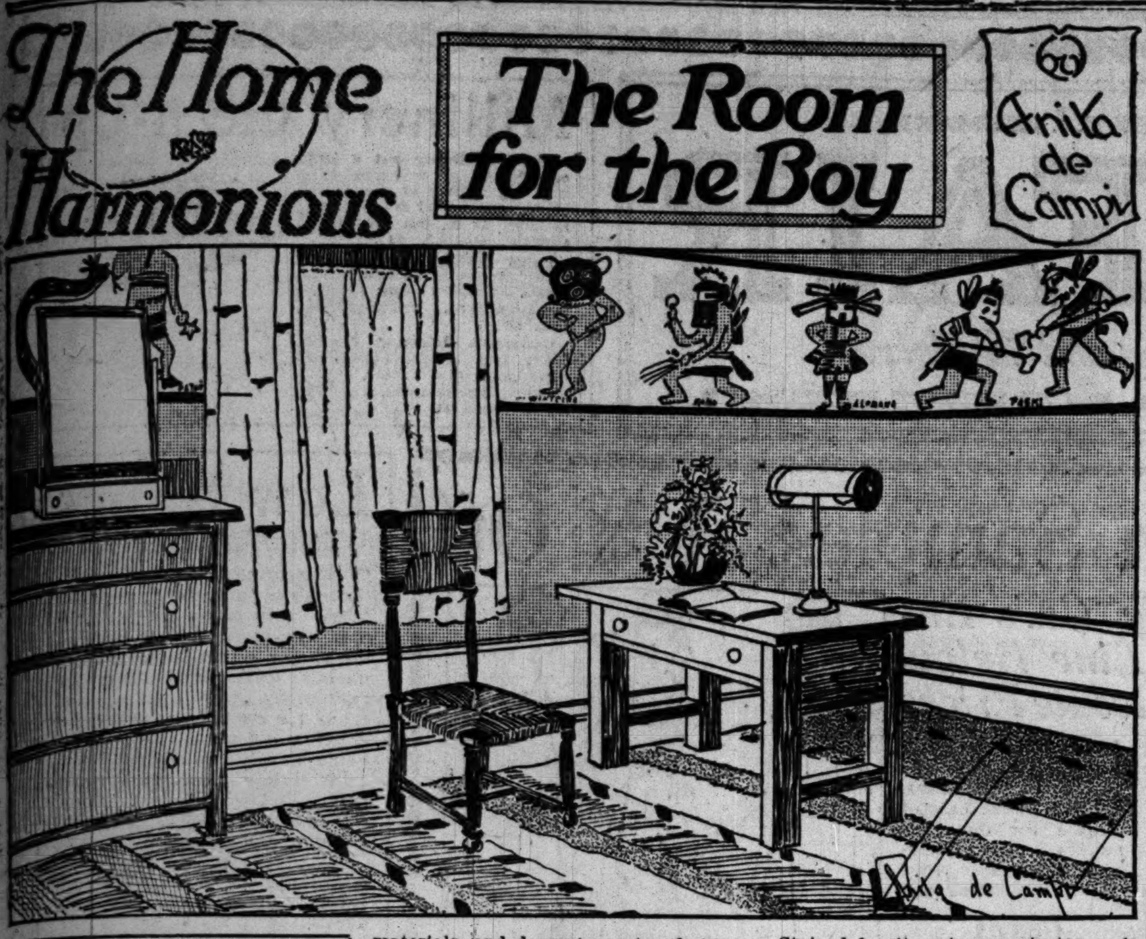
The Home Harmonious

The Room for the Boy

By Anita de Campi



Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

ANY suggestion of femininity should be as carefully avoided in the decoration of a boy's room as it is avoided in the choice of the boy's wearing apparel. No one would ever think of choosing for a boy's shirt material showing a large design of natural flowers in the pattern, or floral trimmings for his hats, and it is just as logical to leave out floral effects in the draperies and wall paper of the boy's room.

The shape of the furniture, the color used throughout, the texture of all stuffs and wood employed, and the designs that are brought into play must be stronger, though perhaps less graceful, than if they were to be put to feminine use. Lace and ruffles are no more appropriate at the windows, for example, than they would be on boys' underwear.

Walls should be either painted, calcimined, or papered with paper in some inconspicuous design and neutral color. Rugs should be of a sturdy quality—velvets are out of place. Old fashioned body Brussels makes good carpets for the boys' rooms. Plain filling is also good. Japanese matting is excellent and Clearflax rugs are ideal. If one can afford real Navajo rugs they can hardly be improved upon. The gray, black, and white ones are particularly desirable and are durable for generations if properly protected from moths.

Where large woolen rugs of any kind are used they should always be protected by having a sheet of moth paper or tar paper laid under them. This point should be given especial consideration when rugs are placed in shady rooms, halls, etc. The odor may be disagreeable for the first few days, but it soon wears off.

So universal is the feeling of sex superiority in the male person that the salesman has only to describe fabrics as "pretty delicate" or any other feminine sounding adjective to set the boy buyer violently against it. For his own use he prefers the descriptions, "strong, unyielding, durable," to apply to his purchases. Boys like stripes and checks and small conventional designs. Soft, clinging stuffs are their abominations. They like linen, heavy plain cretonne, crash, denim, monk's cloth, and burlap, and taboo dimity, charmeuse, silk mull, and all soft, transparent fabrics.

As the draperies are most often the starting point of the room decorations and afford perhaps more inspiration than any other one feature of the room, let us look over a few samples of the most suitable fabrics on the market, select the materials, and decorate up to whatever standard that material may imply.

Suppose the room is just a medium sized room. Whatever the decorative scheme may be the number of necessary articles remains about the same. There must of course be a bed. There should be a chest of drawers. This surmounted by a separate looking glass on a stand such as is shown in the accompanying sketch is preferable to a dressing table, as the latter smacks of the boudoir. The chest should not be as high as a man's chiffonier, in fact, the small mirror should be on about a level with the boy's head. It is for his convenience in adjusting his ties, and his collar buttons, pins, cuff buttons, etc., are to be kept in the usual drawer made to the mirror stand.

At least one large lounging chair should be in the room, and if space permits, two. A combination folding chair bed is nice to have in case your boy has a pal to spend the night with him. Do not have a rocking chair in the boy's room. There must be a desk or table. If this is to be bought new, the best selection is a table top desk. Boys like these best. It must be placed near the window with a chair or bench beside it.

Then there will be the bed with a spread to match the draperies instead of a white spread. There should be a bookcase, and if possible a small ventilated wardrobe or locker to hold sweaters, tennis coats, bathing suits, bath robes, etc.

Straight line furniture in dark wood is the best. Plain oak, fumed oak, and walnut are good woods. Painted furniture is possible in boys' rooms if the color of the paint is deep. So that a miscellaneous assortment of pieces may be brought into keeping by painting all alike, a deep blue, maroon, brown, or even black. The edges of the wood may be trimmed with a thin line of paint in a contrasting color.

But to return to the drapery fabrics which are to inspire the treatment of the room—I have before me some good samples. The first one is a striped coarse linen. The stripes of burnt orange and ecru measure three-quarters of an inch each, and down the center of every second stripe is run a narrow black line. With this, natural oak furniture would be good and black furniture would be splendid. The carpet could be either ecru or olive green, and the pictures framed in narrow black moldings. The bedspread of the linen is made of surplus length, so that the top edge is lapped back, has the pillows placed on it, and then the top edge is drawn over the pillows.

The next sample is identical in pattern, but fine in texture, and blue is used with the ecru and black instead of orange. Antique oak or walnut would be good with it. Walnut would be the better because of the fineness of weave. Black would also go well. The carpet should be gray. There should be a round yellow bowl to hold flowers. Men, I believe, care as much for flowers as women do. It is surprising how many men have standing orders with florists to keep a small vase full of fresh flowers on the office desk.

Stained furniture in some instances is effective. A stout unbleached English linen has a band in several dull colors woven into it at wide intervals. The band has a design in it carried out in dull maroon, blue green, and tan threads. The furniture of this room is stained blue green, the woodwork is golden oak, and the rug wistaria.

In a room with mission furniture the draperies are of linen almost as coarse as burlap. The pattern shows a three inch band of olive green, alternating with a band of the same width that is marked off into inch wide tan and black checks. Casement curtains are made of this stuff, and the sash curtains are made of thin ecru crash. The seats of the chairs have loose cushions upholstered in soft brown leather. The bedspread matches the curtains. On the bed a bolster spread laid over the pillows is made of a single breadth of the goods, so that the lines in this run crosswise of the bed, while the lines in the spread run up and down.

Fresh looking in a buff colored room are the cream and blue checked linen draperies. The checks are nearly an inch wide in medium and dark blue. The furniture in this room is painted a still darker blue. A fourfold screen is covered with the checked linen on one side and the plain blue denim on the other. The bedspread and pillow spread are made of denim bordered with checked bands, as are the chest cover and slip covers for the chairs. The rug is of medium blue, with a large deep square woven into each corner.

Indian trophies and pictures are usually beloved of the boy heart. The accompanying illustration shows a room done in unique Indian style. The furniture is of the mission type, the rug is a Navajo, and the decorative frieze on a light tan ground depicts the Hopi Indians masked and costumed for the sun dance.

Explanations of the symbols carried by the figures are printed below the figures, and the whole frieze is hung low enough to be easily examined.

Pictures and decorations of educational value, even though they may seem a trifle "highbrow," are certainly preferable to the usual cowboy and Indian sort of thing. Indian stories really constitute our national folk lore, and as such are worth studying. The boy will be interested, too, in making a collection of Indian objects to add to his room. He will have a big earthen vase, a scrap basket of Indian weave, a few Indian weapons, pipes, beaded smoking bags, arrow heads, etc.

As to the perquisites of the boy's room, they are few in number and notably essential, quite contrary to the girl's room, which is too often full of "fripperies." He needs a necktie rack, a dumbbell rack, a patent exercising apparatus adjusted to his door, a table lamp, preferably of the student lamp variety, or an orchestra lamp like that shown in the picture, and a good shoe box equipped with polishes, brushes, etc.

Answers to Inquiries.

A. B. B.: I have not been able to find two faced cretonne on the market. Few drapery materials come two faced, and the few I have found are unattractive in design. I am speaking of the printed materials. Sundur and casement curtains are most popular this season. The sundur comes in a variety of weaves, colors, patterns, and prices. In treating your three windows, use one valance for the three, having straight hanging draperies at either end and between the windows. Cretonne with a black ground would be a good choice for the divan. Personally I have a preference for windows without inside draperies for the summer. Why not defer getting your inside draperies until the fall? Use simple muslin or marquisette during the warm weather. Marquisette curtains in a good quality, of tan or white, can be had, hemstitched and all ready to put up, from 75 cents to $1 a pair.

* *

H. S.: It would be better to stain your old furniture black rather than to paint it black, as black paint is invariably coarse looking. Paint the line in orange color.

* *

T. L. H.: With your green rugs and furniture, use pearl gray grass cloth for both dining room and living room.

* *

L. B.: No, I do not think the paper of which you sent me a sample is too light in color. I, too, think that the nap should run the same way on both sides of your portieres. Write to the firm from whom you purchased them, stating the fact simply as you did to me in your letter, and without doubt it will do what is right in the matter. I do not see how your landlord could possibly object to your choice of paper. Any one who comes in the apartment after you should find it pleasing. I hope you will have touches of old rose and olive green in this room. This can be supplied in extra cushions, candle shades, etc.

* *

A. P.: Yes, I think orange and pale yellow would harmonize well for a bed room set. Gray should work well into this scheme, particularly with mahogany furniture. Yellow and gray draperies and cushions would be especially attractive. A delicate shade of wedgwood blue is perhaps the color that you mean for your living room. The walls must be kept neutral. Paneling is good, emphasized by little mouldings with margins at the side of them in a shade deeper than the panels. In hanging your pictures, one to a wall space is the accepted rule. In the living room have several comfortable upholstered pieces and then a few guest chairs light enough to be lifted with one hand and placed at pleasure. A chaise longue is a fashionable article. One or two tables could be added and perhaps a stool and fender bench.

At a Church Wedding.

THIS department receives many requests as to what is the customary and correct procedure for a church wedding. The conventional order for the marriage procession is for the ushers to go first, two by two, up the aisle and the bridesmaids come next, also walking in couples, about ten feet between each pair. If there is a maid or matron of honor she walks alone, immediately following the bridesmaids.

If there are the additional little flower bearers, they walk just ahead of the bride, who should bring up the rear end of the bridal procession, escorted by her father or nearest male relative. She leans on his right arm, but at the altar she stands at the left of the bridegroom.

The latter comes to the altar with his best man and the officiating clergyman and stands there facing the congregation as the bride and her party come up the aisle.

When the clergyman asks who gives the bride away her father should step forward and place her hand in that of the bridegroom. The father then steps back to her mother's side. The best man is supposed to have charge of the ring, which he hands to the bridegroom at the moment in the ceremony when it is used as the symbol of eternal union.

At the end of the ceremony the maid or matron of honor puts back the bride's veil. The newly wed couple turn and face the congregation, the turning bringing the bride on the bridegroom's right. They head the return march, followed by the bridesmaids and ushers, now walking each usher with a bridesmaid. The immediate family and near relatives then leave the church before the general company makes a move towards departure.

In case the wedding has the additional touch of a boy choir, this choir heads the bridal procession on entering and on the return brings up the rear of the line of march.

One of the best man's chief duties is to see that the officiating minister is brought to and from the church on time. The maid of honor, beside putting back the bride's veil, holds her bouquet after the ceremony begins. Some brides, instead of a bridal bouquet, prefer to carry a white or silver prayer book. This is much the vogue in England.

* *

M. C. Y.: The engagement ring should be presented as soon as possible after the young woman has said "Yes." It would be better either to ask her what is her favorite precious stone, or to give her a choice between two or three rings. She is to wear her engagement ring through what you hope will be a long and happy life, so it should be just to her taste. Some rash men, however, prefer to surprise their fiancés with the engagement ring. There is no hard and fast rule in this matter.

WORRIED: It is not pleasant to remind a friend that she has not returned an umbrella she borrowed, but it is perfectly permissable to do so.

* *

J. K.: It is not necessary to send either a written acceptance or regret to an afternoon tea. Merely mail your card, so that it reaches the friend giving the tea on the day of the entertainment.

* *

MR. B. H.: I should wait until your friend introduces you to her acquaintances before speaking to them.

* *

S. L.: Marrying, as you say you are, a widower much older than yourself, have the quietest kind of wedding. Wear a simple traveling dress or a dainty voile. Don't wear a veil. A good looking hat is better style. If you want a wedding party, have it a light luncheon, to which you invite only your family and a few intimate friends. This kind of wedding is much better form than a big affair in a church, with a general reception afterwards—especially as your fiancé's family are opposed to his remarriage.

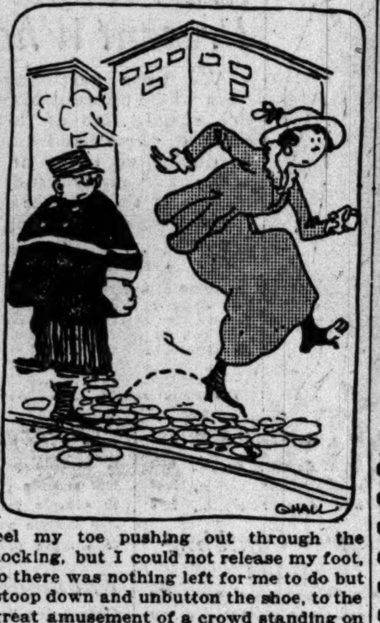
He Called Out Station.

I was working as guard on the elevated road, and one evening while taking my girl to a show, we rode on the "L" train, and as the train neared Congress and Wabash, where we were going to get off, I got up and called off the station, thinking I was working. Everybody in the car was laughing at me. To say I felt cheap is putting it mildly. W. M.

* *

She Stalled the Car.

One day I was crossing a street in a hurry, when my heel stuck in the car track. I wriggled and squirmed until I could feel my toe pushing out through the stocking, but I could not release my foot, so there was nothing left for me to do but stoop down and unbutton the shoe, to the great amusement of a crowd standing on the corner. I hopped over to the curbstone as fast as I could, with my toe sticking out through the stocking, not caring whether the car ran over the shoe or not, but some young man brought me my shoe and to add to my embarrassment he offered to put it on. Well, I can never remember how I got away from that corner, nor did I pass there again for a week. A. J. H.



* *

The Penalty of Deceit.

My girl friend and I were walking home from a show one evening when we noticed two young men following us and trying to flirt with us.

Not wanting them to know where we lived, we decided to stop at a certain house nearby, and pretend we lived there. As we were standing on the steps bidding each other good night, the two young men slowly passed by.

Suddenly the door opened, and I, being highly excited, turning to run, fell full length across the sidewalk. In the meantime the young man who opened the door passed down the steps laughing heartily.

The two young men who tried to flirt with us turned around and, noticing what had happened, said: "Did he kick you down or did you fall down?" I never was so embarrassed in all my life. C. J."

He Had Her Heels.

Some time ago I attended church just about dusk of a winter's afternoon. The lights not having been turned on, the church was dim, the only light in the place being that of the sanctuary lamp. I went to a pew and, glancing down, did not see the kneeling bench, so thought it was turned back, as it frequently is Saturday afternoon, for the janitor to sweep. I reached down to turn it forward, took a firm hold of what I thought was the bench handle, and pulled. That which I was pulling was violently jerked out of my hands and the woman kneeling in front of me jumped up with a sharp cry of alarm. I had pulled her heels. A. G. S.

The 'Orible H'example.

I was visiting friends in England, and, as I was shown such a good time, I could not refuse to act as an escort to two young women who were deeply interested in the "Catch My Pal" temperance movement that was then sweeping the country.

These young women used to speak on street corners to dock workers and sailors. This day they spoke from a box in front of the "Three Legs o'Man," a great rendezvous for seafaring men in Liverpool. It happened that an abraison had come on my nose, and produced as beautiful "rum blossom" as was ever seen.

The meeting was progressing nicely, the women exhorting the men to not only join in the movement for temperance, but to catch a pal and bring him in—when my turn came.

One of the girls had just sat down and another was to take her place, when a town character, known as the "Boy in Blue," stuck his head out of the pub, and, pointing at me, he shouted: "Lidees and gemmun, h'allow me to h'ntroduce to yer faverable nowtice the grite H'amurican 'orrible h'example, speshilly h'imported fer this grita h'occashun. Look h'at 'is blooming beak will yer? H'a look, h'a squint h'at 'is dial will convert the most 'ardened toper. Look h'at the 'eadlight on 'is dial will yer? Lidees and gemmun, the Grite H'amurican 'orrible H'exampul will now h'oblige with the story h'of 'is wicked past life."

I didn't wait for any more heckling, but beat it, nor was I asked to attend any more temperance lectures. J. J. R.

Little Pink Ribbons.

I was young and callow and had mastered the art of dancing; that is, I could manage my feet fairly well. My greatest trouble lay in thinking of things to say when a girl was so near.

This was one of the first real dances I ever attended. The men wore little green ribbons pinned on their coats as dance tickets, but I didn't notice colors carefully then. I do now.

I was dancing with such a pretty girl that I couldn't think of a thing to say to her, when I remembered that I had seen some man's dance ribbons pinned on her light dress. That was a great way to open the conversation, and so I said, "Where did you get your little pink ribbons?"

Just then down her back I could distinctly see the pink ribbons of her corset cover! Now, I hadn't meant them at all, but she knew the others were green, and so we stopped dancing at her request. I lived an eternity in one minute. But I finally "squared myself." F. W.

* *

An Ungallant Cuss.

My brother-in-law was short a waitress in his place and asked me to help in the rush hour, which I did. I got along fine until a man seated at a table with three others asked for a glass of buttermilk. I filled a glass with what I thought was buttermilk and, to make sure, got behind a screen and tasted it. When I brought it to him he said: "I never knew before that an old maid can turn sweet milk into buttermilk by merely tasting it." Right before a lot of men, too! G. H.

* *

In Came Superintendent.

It was my first week of teaching and I got along pretty well with everything except singing. The children simply would not sing. One boy in particular thought that he'd rather entertain the rest of the children by being silly.

I warned him twice that if he didn't open his mouth and sing I would open it for him. He still refused to sing; so, true to my word, I took his nose in one hand and his chin in the other and proceeded to open his mouth.

While I was still holding John by the nose and chin, and while the room was in an uproar, laughing at us, the district superintendent walked in. Three guesses as to how I felt. J. B.

Hair on Face and Under Arms

This method for removing superfluous hair is totally different from pastes and rub-on preparations, which merely remove hair from the surface of the skin. To rob hair of its vitality you must use De Miracle, the original liquid depilatory. It attacks hair under the skin, as well as on the skin. Imitations of De Miracle are as worthless as pastes and rub-on preparations because they lack certain ingredients that De Miracle alone contains which give it the power to devitalize hair. Well groomed women always use De Miracle for removing hair from limbs and under arms as well as from face, neck and arms. Insist on the genuine De Miracle and you will get the best hair remover ever offered the public. Be sure to buy De Miracle by name and you will avoid disappointment. Furthermore, you will get the only depilatory that contains a binding guarantee which entitles you to your money if it fails. In $1.00 and $2.00 bottles. If your dealer does not supply you, buy a bottle at The Public Drug Co., Buck & Rayner's six stores, or direct, postpaid, in plain wrapper. De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. A-7, Park Ave. and 129th St., New York.

ELITE STYLES says "It is worthy of the highest praise." Genuine magazines of the highest character endorse only De Miracle. Beware of so-called endorsements of bogus magazines which are used to exploit the sale of questionable depilatories.

One day at the table, when we had company, my young nephew did something of which I disapproved. Not wishing to call the others' attention to it, I stared at him severely and steadily until I attracted his attention. He stared back defiantly for an instant and then suddenly grinned and said, "We're just like two strange bulldogs, aren't we?"

We were cruising in Florida waters, and two children of about 4 and 5 were standing on a dock where we were about to tie up. While watching us the older child fell from the dock into the water. One of our negroes immediately jumped overboard to the rescue, and when the child came up seized it, and in a short time placed it again on the dock. Our party was quite excited, but the child was perfectly cool and unperturbed. One of us asked the child if it could swim.

"No, sir," said he, "but I kicked all I could, but when I saw those bubbles I sure thought I was gone."

I gave the child a nickel and told him to buy some candy for himself and the other child. He turned the nickel over to the other child, saying, "You keep this, because I might fall into the water again."

The Knack of Bouquet Making.

ANY person who writes a good deal about flowers is sure to get some amusing letters from those who read something he has written. It seems to be expected that he is so crammed with knowledge that it exudes at every pore, and all he has to do to give persons the assistance they are in search of is to set the typewriter going and lo! the thing is done.

I am led to say this because I have just received the following letter:

"I want you to tell me how to make nice looking bouquets. I know you can do it, if you only will, and I feel quite sure you're too kind to refuse to help me. I've always wanted to make bouquets that folks would admire, but somehow I never could do it.

"My bouquets don't look like those some folks make, and when I've asked them the knack of it they just laughed and said there wasn't any knack to it; but I know there is, for I try dreadfully hard to make nice ones, and I simply can't do it. I can't tell you what's wrong with them, but there's something that I've got to find out, and I'm sure you can tell me what it is. Just give me a few pointers."

* *

Now, a person might just as well say: "I want to paint pictures, but I don't know how. Tell me how to go to work to do it, please."

The friends of this correspondent who told her there was no knack to bouquet making were in the right: that is, unless one sees fit to call good taste a knack. The simple fact is that if a person is lacking in good taste it is altogether likely that she cannot educate herself to a degree that will make up for that lack. In other words, I mean that what we call good taste is intuitive and not something that can be acquired. It means the possession of a keen color sense. It means the ability to discriminate carefully between harmony and discord in the selection and blending of colors.

A person who is color blind would put all kinds of colors together and see nothing wrong with the result, but the person who has a keen eye for color would see in it something absolutely painful. From this my correspondent will readily understand that I do not consider it possible for a person who lacks this ability to discriminate as to color to so train herself that she can make up for the lack of it.

One must have a special adaptation for color combination and arrangement in order to make bouquets that will afford pleasure.

* *

What I have said about good taste may offend some reader who does not take the trouble to think over what I have to say seriously and in the sense in which I have said it. Good taste has many ways of making itself felt, and few of us have a monopoly of its various methods of expressing itself. You may have excellent taste along literary lines and none at all as regards gardening and the arrangement of flowers in such a manner as to make a picture of them.

I may be able to do this and wholly unable to so combine words that the result will please my literary friend. It's a matter of special adaptation, you see, and what we are not specially adapted for we cannot hope to attain with any great degree of success.

In making bouquets that will please the persons who has an artistic eye color and habit must be considered. Only such colors as harmonize should be used in combination, and plants of stiff and formal habit should never be combined with those of a more graceful form.

It is a mistake to use a great amount of material, as so many do. A few flowers will give a much more satisfactory result than a large number, because they have an opportunity to display their individuality, while in a collection that is crowded that individuality is wholly lost sight of.

* *

It is another mistake to think that flowers alone are what is required in making a pleasing bouquet. A liberal quantity of foliage should always be made use of. This to form a sort of background for the brighter colors of the flowers and to relieve them by contrast. As a general thing the foliage of the flower should be used, not that of other plants.

Do not lay too great stress on shape. Some bouquets look as if they had been cast in a mold or sheared by a hedge maker until a perfect balance on all sides had been obtained. There is real symmetry in irregularity, as you will see if you study a shrub that has been allowed to train itself.

Half a dozen flowers and as many green leaves will often give much greater pleasure than a large number, provided they are well put together. Quality should always be considered more than quantity.

Comment by Mme. X.

Summer Sultriness Puts a Crimp in Most Activities.

By Mme. X.

WE have sojourned in spicy Zanzibar; we have sweltered in Dar es Salaam, the capital of German East Africa; we have prowled among the blazing byways of Mombasa, the chief port in British East Africa; we have dallied at Entebbe, just where the equator crosses Lake Victoria in Uganda, but never did we experience a more vigorous, emphatic, thoroughly conscientious heat than that which gave the residents of this part of the world a free for all, no trouble to any one, perspiration last midweek.

The most enthusiastic golfers paused in their golfing; even the Lake Forest garden class faltered for a moment in its peripatetic career. The Aldis playhouse, with its bevies of bandage rollers, doubly earned its new title of the Lake Forest sweatshop. The present quarters in the tower on the new Lake Forest square are cooler than the picturesque little playhouse. The French enthusiasts, who met in the same suburb in Mrs. Walter Kirk's charming Italian villa on Wednesday morning, for M. Rolland's dramatic interpretations, murmured: "Quelle chaleur!"

It was the fervid moment of a fervid summer. The promoters of the Lake Forest fair feel that the heat dealt their enterprise a blow below the belt. Instead of taking in twice the money they did a year ago—as was the fond hope of Hobart Chatfield-Taylor, Louis Laflin, Allen Haines, and Frank Johnson, their receipts only exceeded by a few hundred dollars the $16,000 of last August, while the expenses were greater than those of that occasion. The attendance on the first afternoon of this year's fair, a day not too hot, was greater than expected, but on the second day, that scorcher of a Saturday, it failed to come up to anticipations, which shows that old Sol got in his deadly work.

Next year's fair is to be once more an old fashioned horse show with a few encircling side shows.

Square to Be Show Place.

All visitors to the Lake Forest fair who arrived by the railway or electric road, or any other route which took them by that town's civic center, could not fail to be impressed by the delightfully picturesque and captivating village square which is slowly taking form and shape in the chaos of simultaneous pulling down and building up which for months has gone on there under Howard Shaw's direction and inspiration.

When finished—and the end is well in sight—it will be as fetching a bit of architectural achievement as can be found in all the forty-eight so-called United states. Granted that it is exotic, imported, and in no wise an expression of Lake county's past or present, it is a pleasure to the eye and gratifies both the taste and the memory. To the latter it recalls many places in the old world; bits of quaint and ancient England, of the picturesque Tyrol, of northern Europe.

The two towers are especially striking features of this village square, or "piazza," or "place," or "platz," as you may choose to call it. One, a clock tower, looks as if it had been transported bodily from Bavaria. The other one suggests some eastern canton of Switzerland.

The pillared gray structure at the square's western confine might have been the home of some medieval Flemish weaver's guild. Let us hope a carved stone well head, with a wrought iron superstructure, will adorn the middle of the square, to complete the illusion of a medieval town. Or, better still, a stone fountain of antique design, after Girardon or Peter Fischer. A row of plane trees on either side the square would add to the effect. To make still more perfect the picture, market days should be made a regular institution, with white capped market women, under big umbrellas, selling many hued flowers, luscious vegetables, or golden cheeses. Doesn't this come within the scope of the Garden Club of Illinois?

Garden Club Beautifies Park.

Work is now well under way on the little park at the entrance to Lake Forest which this same garden club has planned and promoted. Mrs. Tiffany Blake's design of pool, seats, plath, and planting will be carried out and completed by October. This will be a great feather in the G. C.'s cap. It is planning further work in this line in Lake Forest's other park on the lake front just across the way from Fairlawn, the Chatfield-Taylor place. It is to be hoped that the Garden club will extend its labors to other public pleasure grounds on the north shore.

Lake Forest is, however, a delectable field of labor. That eminent authority, so quoted at every north shore luncheon and dinner table, Prof. R. R. Root, says that nowhere in America, not even of Lenox, Mass., or on Boston's classic north shore, are there so many beautiful gardens as there and thereabouts.

Certain it is also that no other rural settlement is laid out with the exquisite parklike effects that Frederick Law Olmsted, America's greatest landscape architect, gave to that part of Lake Forest which lies east of the tracks, and which he planned and laid out fifty years ago.

Many are the remarkable things in that community. For instance, the T. E. Donnelleys bought the Granger Farwell place a few years ago and, instead of occupying the good looking mansion the Farwells had built a decade or so before, they put up a much bigger one for themselves on another part of the property, leaving the former residence standing. Now the Volney Fosters have bought the Farwell house and propose to move it to a piece of land which they own at some distance from its present site. The query in Lake Forest is: are they going to take it down and build it up again, or are they going to hoist it up on rollers and move it as it stands, trundling it through those curving, well paved roads? It would seem an impossible piece of engineering.

* *

New House for Mrs. McCormick.

Quite a remarkable and interesting piece of Lake Forest domestic architecture is the house being built in a secluded bit of woods for Mme. McCormick and her daughter, Mrs. Emmons Blaine, near one of the entrances to the Cyrus H. McCormick place, Walden. Of golden brown hues, with rich wood carving on the steep gables, and the heaviest slate slabs on roofs and porticos ever seen this side of Wales, it suggests an Elizabethan manor house.

Only they did not know in the days of Queen Bess about building thoroughly fireproof houses, with steel window casings, tile walls, cement floors and roofs, etc. Nor would any householder of that day—and few of today, for that matter—think of placing the laundry above ground in an airy wing, with windows opening out on three sides into a leafy grove, so that, as the workers toil in the big, beautiful tile lined rooms, they will be able to look out into cool, green depths and breathe sweet, fresh, fragrant air. Aren't most home laundries in cellars, with almost no outlook?

A marble lined entrance hall opens into a charming long, low ceilinged library to the right as one enters. Opposite the front door is Mme. McCormick's own sitting room, while to the left is the dining room, with an open air breakfast room at its further end. This, too, seems to be in the depths of a bird haunted, leafy wood, miles away from anywhere.

At no great distance from the house is a good looking building of the same architecture as the main residence. This shelters an elaborate plant for heating the house in winter and cooling it in summer. It has also a complete equipment for cold storage, and is an object of much interest to Lake Forest housekeepers.

In quite another direction, perched on the brink of a lovely bit of ravine, is an enchanting little Japanese tea house, finished inside with the smooth, silky surfaced beams characteristic of Japan, and yet translated into American architecture by plate glass windows and wire fly screens.

Cement surfaced paths lead from the house in various directions through the grounds, one principal path spraying out, like the deltas of the Mississippi, at the corner near the entrance to Walden.

The place already has an atmosphere of repose, of long occupation, of mellow ripeness unusual in modern houses, though it won't be ready for occupancy until the late autumn.

* *

Other Homes Nearing Completion.

The Clyde Carrs are other Lake Foresters who are in the throes of house planning and building. For many years they have occupied Mrs. Ambrose Cramer's house on the bluff overlooking the lake. When they move out of this the Donald Ryersons (Mrs. Ryerson is Mrs. Cramer's daughter) will move in. The little "made to order" house on the grounds of the Cramer place, where the Ryersons lived last summer and the summer before, is now being occupied by the young Ambrose Cramers, who returned a fortnight or so ago from their wedding trip to Hawaii.

They are so young in years and looks that they seem more like children playing at housekeeping in a playhouse than like real grownups. They'll outgrow this, however, though, it is to be hoped, not too soon. Their town abode in Lake View avenue, together with Mrs. Arthur Ryerson's, Abram Poole's, and the Harry Dangler's, is slowly nearing completion.

Mrs. Ryerson expects to come west next month to make arrangements to move in in October. She is enjoying new honors, as her daughter, Mrs. George Clarke of Cooperstown, N. Y., a bride of last October, has just given birth to a daughter.

An interesting and distinguished visitor in Lake Forest these days is the French portrait painter, Gabriel Nicolet, whose present commission is a portrait of Mrs. Ambrose Cramer and her son, Corwith Cramer. M. Nicolet is the guest of the Cramers during his stay in this part of the world. He is an old friend of Mr. Cramer's, who knew him in Paris.

* *

Chicagoans Summering in Town.

Arthur Meeker came on for the Lake Forest fair—and other affairs. Mrs. Meeker is cruising on their yacht, Arcady, with a party of women friends—on account of the acquatic character of the expedition one couldn't call it a hen party, and a duck party doesn't sound quite right.

Mrs. Potter Palmer and her sister, Mrs. Frederick Grant, have been lingering on in town and will stay here until they go to Colorado with the Honoré Palmers on Aug. 1. The George Higginsons are other town dwellers in spite of the fact that they have a house in Lenox. The Charles Hamills, the Prescott Hunts, the Richard Foxes, and the Bertram Winstons also tasting the pleasures of a sojourn in the restful peace, privacy, and comfort of their own homes in summer.

The women who run that excellent undertaking, the Grove Home for Convalescents in North Evanston, gave a tea on Wednesday last to celebrate the opening of a home for convalescent mothers with little babies, the only place of its kind in Chicago. There are homes for ill mothers and homes for ill babies, but no place where they can be together, so Mrs. Robertson, Mrs. James Houghteling, Mrs. Hermon Butler, and others interested in Grove House, bought and furnished the building next door to serve this purpose. Mrs. J. Allen Haines and Mrs. Douglas Stewart selected and installed the equipment. It is a much needed refuge for weary mothers who can't well be separated from their small babies.

* *

Entertain Garden Clubs.

One of the chief events of the week in Lake Forest—and it's hard to keep away from this popular place—was the buffet luncheon given by Mrs. Albert Day and the Garden Club of Illinois to nine other garden clubs of this part of the world. Among these visiting clubs were the garden clubs of Kenilworth, Wheaton, Evanston, Elgin, Palos Park, Lake Geneva [Wis.], and the South Side Garden Club of Chicago. After luncheon the visitors were taken to see some of the famous places in Lake Forest and Lake Bluff.

Miss Mary Root [better known as "Polly" Root] writes home that on landing in France she and six other American girls and twice that number of young men, who all went to help the French, were formed into a procession by Mme. Calvé, who was also a passenger on the Rochambeau, and marched ashore with Calvé at the head of the line, singing "The Marseillaise" with all their might and main. Miss Root has gone to run the motor ambulance sent by the Chicago committee enlisted to help the fund for French emergency hospitals.

This Chicago society, with its headquarters at 60 East Washington street, has since last January sent 1,084 big boxes of supplies to these smaller hospitals. Mrs. Russell Tyson is the animating spirit in the shop itself, while Mrs. Henry Robbins is the president of the association backing the shop. Even summer's sultriness does not seem to lessen the ardor of the workers in this shop.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

JULY

July Evening

WHITE elder blossoms top the darkening green of the thickets where crimson points of light are the candles of the bedding sun. The chewink in the white oak says good-night happily and cherrily, as if the prospect of tomorrow were greater in possible good than the experience of today, thus singing to folk who ask themselves if that can be within reasonable expectation.

Hidden in the thickest green the wood thrush calls back to the chewink in lyric pathos. The candle points sparkling through the casements of the woods light the close of something going beyond redemption or recall.

As the candle points fade something, of which the wood thrush is the voice, has gone beyond return. The sands that have run are lost. The wood thrush is threnetic. The possible total of good has been nibbled at. Expectancy is limited. Life approaches the closed gate, which opens to give entrance but closes to forbid return.

The chewink, to folk who sit watching the candles through the aisles and windows of the woods, sings that the east, in a short turn of the wheel, will be radiant with prospect even as the west is serene with experience. The wood thrush is the widow of the day and her weeds are fresh as every twilight lights its candles.

A moist and odorous night comes to hush all speculation, sweet scented and beneficent, and if one of the voices of the twilight be right we know it was the chewink. A turn of the wheel and nothing has gone that is not renewed. The ordained number of renewals we do not know, but each is complete and good. The future may not terrorize the present.

American Women Help in England's War Hospitals.

By a Member of "The Sunday Tribune" Staff.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—We went to a little party the other night that I shall remember. An American girl was the hostess. Her name is Miss Peck, and she has a wonderful duplex apartment on a high floor of a fashionable building in Mayfair. The furnishings are as magnificent as in a palace. Massive antiques and tapestries are everywhere. From the high windows late at night you can see the searchlights crossing one another in their patrol of the heavens for Zeppelins.

Miss Peck is greatly interested in the Serbians. She has had numbers of wounded ones at her apartment since the war began. This entertainment was for a number of her Serbian friends, whom the English and the American guests were invited to meet.

It was a rare occasion. M. Grovitch, former assistant secretary of state in Serbia, was present. As he has an American wife, who is now in New York, some of my readers may know him. For those who do not, let me mention that he is a fine looking man, under middle age, with a fair mustache, which runs in a strictly horizontal line above his mouth and is slightly waxed at the ends. He is a persistent talker and witty. In spite of all that he and his country have been through he preserves an enormous amount of energy and life. He was the centralizing force of one part of the big drawing room.

◆

The magnet of the other end was Lady Campbell, an Englishwoman. She sat knitting stockings and talking without ever stopping. Her discourse sounded like a speech and covered every subject on earth, ranging geographically from China to the United States. She said that the Chinese were the coming people; that the United States was a young country, and that Americans here ought to be willing to pay a large tax in England for the benefits of living in England.

I inquired what these were, but this is straying from what I had in mind to tell. Anyway, some of you may also know Lady Campbell. She, too, has been to America a number of times, and on the last occasion just missed visiting Mrs. Cyrus McCormick, so she mentioned.

Just as the discourse began to grow a little thin the stocking was completed. As she pulled out the last needles she called to M. Grovitch. It seems that the work of art she had been making—and it was no less than that—was for him. "Come and try on your stocking," she invited.

He left his group and joined ours. Masculine traits manifesting themselves as they do throughout the sex without regard to nationality, he did not wish to try on anything—even as American men do not. They wish perfect fits and effects without dress rehearsals. Picking up the really beautiful golf stocking he began in his own witty way to criticize it.

"There's not enough blue on the border," he protested.

"There's all that England contains," fired back Lady Campbell.

"What do you want me to try it on for?" he complained.

"To see if it fits," said Lady Campbell.

◆

We realized presently, by the fact that the conversation waned and saddened, that M. Grovitch had vanished. Just as it began to regain itself and people talked together in small groups he took part again. From the next room we heard his voice in broken English demanding attention. Then his foot and lower leg thrust out horizontally from behind an inlaid screen. He had put on the stocking and was showing it. Nothing of himself above his lower left leg showed. It made a beautiful appearance, indeed, with it gray ridged and blue topped stocking. Everybody laughed uproariously and expressed admiration.

In a few minutes a wonderful supper of lobster, sandwiches, ices and dear knows what all was served in the dining room, heavy with massive furniture. People talked and laughed gayly. You could almost have thought you were in America. Only that outside the searchlights riding the heavens and crossing and recrossing each other reminded us that we were in a nation that is at war.

There was an amusing, slender little English woman there. She was young and pretty, but dreadfully English. She sat so straight you would have said she had swallowed a ramrod and she talked right along without emphasis, leaving you to ferret out her point and her humor. She had been serving in relief work in Serbia and had come home far from well. The doctor prescribed some baths for her at a health resort. She protested that they were nasty smelling things and that for this and other reasons she did not wish nor would she have them. The doctor insisted—she told it amusingly—and made the grand stroke that really induced her—she was going the next week to have them—when he said: "O, now, you really must, you know; you have obligations beyond yourself. What right have you to neglect your health? Think of your dog!"

I am sure most English women would do more than this out of a sense of loyalty to their nasty little dogs.

Mrs. Whitelaw Reid has returned to this country. Some friends of mine came over with her. I asked them what they thought of her and this is what they said: "We forgot she was on board, although we saw her name on the passenger list. The day before landing one of us said to the ship's doctor, 'Did Mrs. Reid come?' He said, 'O, yes, that is she in the alcove.' We looked over and saw an extremely retiring looking woman, dressed in black, who had white hair and was rather stout." That was everything they could say about her.

Most of their remarks were reserved for another American. She was tall and blondined and marcelled, and she affected tailored costumes. She wore six different hats on the boat and never dressed for dinner. The only dinner toilet she made was to put a fresh coating of rouge on her cheeks. Before they had been long at sea everybody on board had heard that her husband had been killed in the battle of the Marne and she herself drove an ambulance at the front.

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME. Y.

Newport Gay for Brass Buttons; Manhattan Dozes

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Annually, sometimes semiannually, "society honors fleet" at Newport. You read it in the headlines of the newspapers. You see it repeated in magazines. You hear it talked about and talk about it yourself.

And then, shortly after word comes that "fleet entertains society." Some day we may change it about for the sake of novelty, making it appear that "society entertains fleet" and that real honor is conferred when "fleet honors society." But for the present it stands the other way, and it is the sailor men who are honored by being thus made much of.

This week in Newport has been naval week. The Atlantic fleet, or a fair section of it, is at anchor in the harbor and Monday night a grand ball was given aboard the good, and fortunately quite steady, ship New York. This was Capt. Hugh Rodman's effort to repay some of the kindnesses shown himself and other officers of the fleet on their frequent visits to society's summer capital. Nearly a thousand invitations were issued, including those that went to the officers of the fleet, their wives, families, and families' guests, and it was estimated that 700 danced in the three improvised ballrooms, located on the main, gun, and after decks. In odd corners the jackies gave moving picture exhibitions for the entertainment of those who did not care for dancing, and there were boxing exhibitions.

Capt. Rodman and Lieut. Commander Clark H. Woodward were responsible for the arrangements, and as a result they are quite the beaux of the week. The night was muggy every place but around the New York. Here it was turned into a bright, warm evening by the illuminations. From the ventilators and the sides of the ship long waves of confetti streamers were blown outward or upward by hidden electric fans. The gangway was elaborately carpeted and lined with lights, and seemed a beautiful stairway entering a fairy palace. At the top an inflated diver's suit first greeted the arriving guests, awkwardly extending a huge hand and nodding its helmet in greeting. Something of the sensation of bumping into a wax faced guard at the old Eden musee was experienced, and the novelty was a great joy to the younger folks.

Fleet Week at Newport.

Nor was this the only novelty. Far forward a tropical grove was "planted," and in its center a fountain played under the rays of the searchlights. It was not so far from sun-up Tuesday morning when the party was over and the New York settled back into the engulfing darkness of the mist. The guests went home to their beauty sleep, during those invaluable hours just preceding high noon.

The navy continued its entertaining all week. Capt. Carlo P. Brittain of the Michigan gave a dinner Wednesday night, Admiral Frank T. Mayo entertained on Friday, and on Thursday there was a reception at Hilltop inn for the officers of the fleet, their wives, and daughters.

Of course, there were many large dinner parties ashore preceding the dance aboard the New York, and all the tenders of the fleet were kept busy taking guests off shore during the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Wilson had many guests at their home in Narragansett avenue, including two governors and their wives, and many social notables. Govs. Beeckman of Rhode Island and Whitman of New York headed a list which included Mr. and Mrs. August Belmont, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mr. and Mrs. T. Suffern Tailer, Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Charles de L. Oelrichs, Baron Renaud d'Ungern-Sternberg, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence T. Paul, Mrs. John R. Drexel, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice, Mr. and Mrs. William Fitzhugh Whitehouse, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Gordon Douglass.

Horses and Yachting.

The horse show crowd is becoming quite active. Just to call attention to the approach of the event, or as a happy reminder of old times, August Belmont drove his coach and four through town one day this week, with Mrs. Belmont, in an attractive costume of white voile, occupying the box seat. It was a pretty sight and arrested the attention of every one on the thoroughfare. It is announced that the judges for the show will be Alfred B. Maclay of New York for the saddle classes, Reginald C. Vanderbilt for the harness classes, and R. Penn Smith of Stratford, Pa., for the hunters and jumpers. There is already a lively demand for boxes, and a few polite but persistent rumors of favoritism and that sort of thing. The show is to be given Aug. 24, 25, and 26.

There are also numerous signs of a genuine revival of interest in yachting this season at Newport. Of course, it is an unusual season, for one thing, it is liveliest in years. And the crowd being greater than usual it demands more and more of those leaders who fill the dull hours with diversion. Time was when the fleet of "Newport thirties" was a sight to remember, and when such amateur skippers as Payne Whitney, H. O. Havemeyer Jr., Ralph Ellis, and Pembroke Jones would not think of giving up a sail for an auto tour or anything else.

This summer several new thirties are to be in commission, one being put over for James A. Stillman, another for E. D. Morgan, and a third is already in the water for Miss Rose B. Dolan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dolan of Philadelphia. Hermann Oelrichs, George Henry Warren Jr., and Bradford Norman Jr. helped her sail it over to Narragansett bay last week and it has been a pretty lively boat ever since.

Just what Newport society will be by the end of August it is not difficult to predict: It will be completely and utterly fagged. Never before has the calendar been so filled with important functions. The Harry Payne Whitneys have decided to get in as early as possible with their house warming, and have selected the 4th as the date. It will be their first Newport entertainment in several years.

On the 12th Mrs. Herbert M. Harriman will give a debutante dance for her niece, Miss Ethel M. B. Harriman. Miss Harriman's mother, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, being in mourning, will not entertain this season. For Miss Ethel's début the Clambake club will be completetly done over and the guest list will be long.

The Vincent Astors are nere. Mrs. Astor gave a small luncheon at Beechwood Monday. It is anticipated that they, too, will figure prominently in the August schedule of events. Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont has taken her guests and her houseboat, the Seminole, to Marblehead, Miss Dora Stevens and Louis Hosmer of New York joining her for the cruise. She will return to Newport before sailing next month to visit her daughter, the Duchess of Marlborough in London.

There is literally nothing going on in town, nor has there been since the Fourth. The Waldorf-Astoria roof, having the appearance of a gay lawn party, not to mention an equally gay circus, was opened last week and there have been informal parties on the pleasant nights. All the roofs have so arranged their glass topped interiors this season that there still is room for dancing and eating and drinking in bad weather, but when the barometer is down and the humidity is up there is not the incentive to seek the heights there is on hot, dry, sticky nights.

* *

Father Has His Innings.

The popular roof entertainer is the husband and father of a family out of town. He is less formal than his socially better informed mate, but he does the best he can and is never so happy as when playing host to a crowd of from eight to fifteen. These affairs are, naturally, largely masculine, but there is a sprinkling of femininity to give them color. A sprinkling, I am bound to believe, that would become a dignified but definite scattering under certain unanticipated conditions. Fortunately train and boat schedules are fixed and theer are not likely to be any sudden returnings.

Miss Gladys Carter.

The Theta Chi sorority will have a tea at the Edgewater Beach hotel on Saturday at 4 o'clock. The sorority will undertake some special plans for aiding the Red Cross fund. Miss Ethel Diefenbacher, grand president, will preside. On the committee are the Misses Marguerite Hurley, Gladys Carter, Marie Burns, Lois Gresham, Elsa Gleckla, Berenice Parks Eileen Steitz, Gladys Burkhardt, Marie Du Fresne, Marion O'Leary, Helen Gaul, Louise Noyes, and Ruth Johnson.

ART by Louise James Bargelt

SWEDISH EXHIBITION POPULAR

THE spirit of Sweden is being truthfully interpreted in the present Swedish exhibition at the Art institute, and from all signs the Chicago public is interested in this same interpretation. In Brooklyn, where this exhibit from the Panama-Pacific opened its circuit, all previous records of attendance were surpassed during its stay there, and while it is still too early to prophesy concerning its Chicago appeal, indications up to the time of writing point to tremendous popularity.

The exhibit opened on Wednesday, a week later than the time scheduled, with a reception given by the Swedish Society of Chicago. And all day Friday, despite the fact that it was not a free day, crowds of visitors streamed through the galleries.

◆

They lingered before the brilliantly eclectic canvases of Helmer Osslund and the lyric peacefulness of Hedberg's landscape scenes. They commented admiringly on the delicately decorative panels of Oskar Bergman and approved vociferously the homely peasant types of Mas-Olle, so different from the modern and mordant creatures of Strandberg's paintings.

These types of Stockholm's submerged men and women are among the strongest pieces of work in the exhibition. The progressive note which he strikes and which is noticeably different from the conservative tone of most of this offering is seconded by Torneman. These two, joining forces with Aminoff, Carlberg, and Zoir, revel in a display of radical sympathies and effect a decided contrast to the rest of the well modified and sagely restrained artistic work.

Before Zoir's "Potato Picking" the crowds do not linger long. There is too terrible a grimness in the strained figures of the women struggling with nature to wrest a bare existence from the soil. The public prefers the enchanting fairy illustrations of Bauer and Elgstrom. There is one of Bauer, "The Fairy Girl," which is a veritable dream of fairy loveliness. She looks some Lorelei of Sweden, sitting in a waving mass of vague grasses and combing out her pale gold tresses that encircle her in their profusion. Utterly different but no less delightful is the "Bogy is Furious." It awakens memories of Grimm's tales and the hours of fascinated bliss we spent in their perusal.

And the winter scenes of Fjaestad and Schultzberg! With actual power of wizardry they seemed to take one away from the heat of the city into cooler climes and countries. Cold beyond power of words almost are some of these scenes. Human, too, they seem, especially one by Fjaestad in which the whirling masses of snow and ice appear to be choking the lifeblood from the stream they have hurled themselves across. These are paintings of flame and ice if ever these elements commingled. And in the soul of these northern artists there must be something of ice and something of fire or they could not grasp so perfectly the spirt and genius of frozen nature.

The sculpture did not attract the same attention from the crowds as did the paintings. It was less striking, not so appealing, despite the fact that Mills' work was strongly in evidence and Petersson's amusing and vigorous statuettes could not go unnoticed.

The official exhibitions of Swedish painting and sculpture which have appeared in Chicago with the world's fair offering in 1893, in St. Louis in 1904, in Rome in 1911, and in San Francisco in 1915, have all won generous approval.

There also has been much criticism, too, for there are many to whom the cold, modified, conservative work of northern temperaments does not appeal. They are urging that Swedish painting should go continuously forward into the untried future. They fear lest it become clogged in the still waters of the old conservatism and be unable to extricate itself further. But those who love it and believe in it declare that such is not possible. They know it will advance in its own way and time, unearthing new colors and wresting new inspirations from the things human and things divine which it senses all about it.

News of the Religious World

Boys on Hike to Winona Lake for Conference.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

A BOY and religion conference is to be held at Winona Lake, Ind., Aug. 19 to 22. The Chicago Boys' club expects to furnish 200 of the boys. A company of the boys started for Winona Lake last Friday. Others will follow and boys of other organizations and boys belonging to no organization are expected to join in the conference. A boys' camp will be set up in the woods at the edge of the Winona assembly and Bible conference grounds. The boys will hike most if not all of the way.

The Rev. A. Christy Brown, Winona, Lake, Ind., and John H. Witter, superintendent of the Chicago Boys' club, 1725 Orchard street, Chicago, will be in charge of the arrangements.

Among the speakers and subjects will be the following: "The Difficult Boy of the Court," E. R. Colby, Chicago; "The Court Boy and Religion," Municipal Judge Roland W. Baggott, Dayton, O.; "The Sunday School Boy," William A. Peterson, Chicago; "The Boys' Club Boy," O. B. Ransopher, Chicago; "The Boy Scout Boy," R. L. Hazlett, district commissioner, Chicago council Boy Scouts of America; "The Boy in a Small Community," Edward G. Jenkins, Honesdale, Pa.; "Older Boys—How to Build Their Religious Interest," the Rev. M. H. Krause, Gary, Ind.

The feast of St. Anne will be celebrated in Roman Catholic churches next Wednesday. At the Church of the Precious Blood, Western avenue and Congress street, there will be a procession this evening and on Wednesday. Daily masses and veneration of the relic of St. Anne are being held at the church. Pilgrims from all sections of Chicago and many from outside of the city are in attendance.

The Paulist choristers under the Rev. William J. Finn, C. S. P., will give a reception next Wednesday evening at 1126 South Dearborn street for the benefit of the summer villa on Crystal lake, Illinois, which the choristers expect to open soon.

The members of the conferences of the society of St. Vincent de Paul of Chicago will meet today at 3 o'clock in St. Sylvester's church hall, Richmond street and Palmer avenue. The Rev. Michael O'Brien will address the meeting.

As a farewell gift to the Rev. John B. Scanlan the parishioners of St. Charles Borromeo's Roman Catholic church, Twelfth and Cypress streets, presented him with a purse of $1,500. Father Scanlan has been assistant at the church for eighteen years. He becomes pastor of St. Dorothy's, a new south side parish.

The Rev. George H. Richardson, pastor of the Congregational church, Bunker Hill, Ill., has resigned, his resignation to take effect Sept. 1. He will become professor of history in the new college at Winona Lake, Ind.

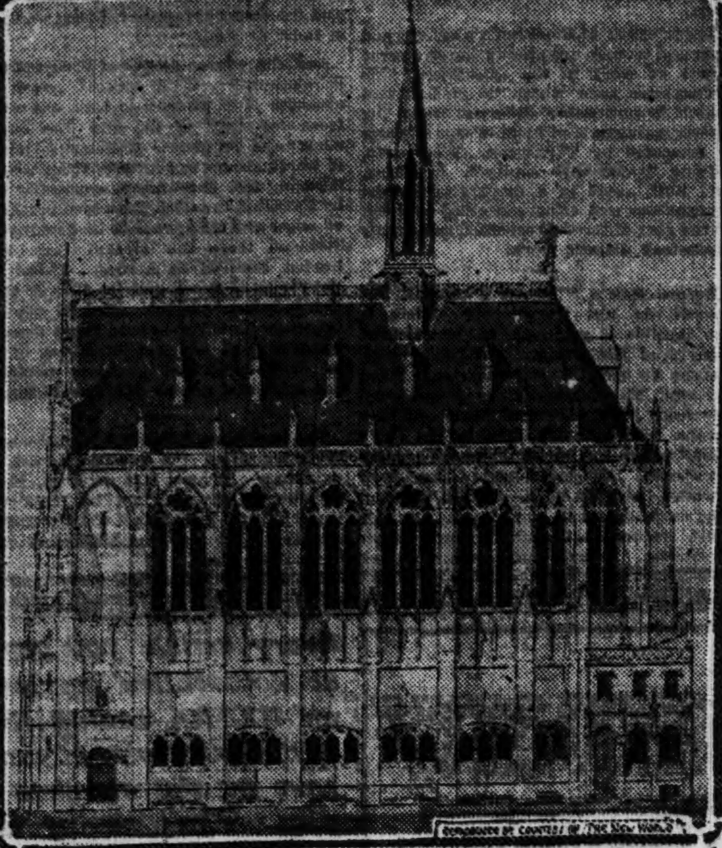
Mrs. Sarah Wheeler has presented to the Wesley Memorial hospital of the Methodist Episcopal church her residence at Lake Bluff for a convalescent's home. It will be known as the Wheeler Convalescent's home. The property is said to be worth more than $20,000.

The Moody church is planning to send 500 children during the summer to the Moody fresh air camp at Cedar Lake, Ind. It is estimated it will require an expenditure of $1,800 for running expenses and $1,500 to complete the payments of the children's building, which includes a rainy day playroom.

Oct. 15 will be observed by Congregational churches throughout the United States in calling special attention to the plans for the observance of the ter-centenary of the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock, Mass. The ter-centenary celebration will be held in 1920. The date of the landing of the Pilgrims was Dec. 21, but the celebration will extend over a considerable period and will be participated in by Protestants generally, although having special significance to the Congregationalists.

The Bethany, Ind., assembly, under the auspices of the Disciples of Christ, will begin next Wednesday, continuing until Aug. 18. This year is designated as home coming year and a special committee is seeking to secure the presence of all former attendants. The home coming committee has the following officers: chairman, E. L. Day, Indianapolis; vice chairman, L. C. Howe, Noblesville; secretary-treasurer, Clay Trusty, Indianapolis. W. E. M. Hackleman is president of the assembly and Garry L. Cook is dean of the training school. Beginning next Thursday there will be a rural life conference. The training school dates are Aug. 8 to 18.

The Rev. E. L. Killam of Grand Rapids, Mich., has been elected field editor of the Standard, the Baptist weekly published in Chicago, and will take up his duties Sept. 1. He is corresponding secretary of the state Baptist convention of Michigan and manager of the Bulletin. Dr. James Spencer Dickerson, secretary of the University of Chicago, who was connected with the Standard for more than forty years, it is announced, has severed all official connection with the weekly. The Rev. Clifton D. Gray is editor of the Standard.



Chapel of St. James, The Apostle, Quigley Memorial.

Archbishop George W. Mundelein of the Roman Catholic church announced last week the purchase of property and the completion of the plans for the erection of the preparatory seminary which is to be a memorial to his predecessor, Archbishop James Edward Quigley. The property fronts Rush street between Pearson and Chestnut streets, to a depth of 200 to 250 feet.

By means of the gifts of the Misses Mary T. and Clara A. Cudahy, in honor of their father, Michael Cudahy, the three buildings, which Archbishop Mundelein at first thought would be built only after funds had been gradually gathered, will be constructed at once.

The chapel of St. James the Apostle, which is the only building in the new group shown in the picture, is expected to be the finest specimen of ecclesiastical architecture in Chicago. It will be of French renaissance design. The chapel is to be especially the children's memorial and contributions of pennies are being gathered.

The support of the young men who will study in the preparatory school will be by scholarships furnished by individuals and parishes. Archbishop Mundelein has asked for 100 of these scholarships, costing $2,500 each, and sixty-four have already been subscribed for.

The seminary is to have a main building and two wings, one of which will be the library and the other is the St. James chapel. Because of the extent of the entire structure and the recent decision to build more quickly than was at first contemplated, it is probable the ground cannot be broken before fall.

The purpose of the seminary is to train young men who will become candidates for the priesthood. By giving the young men this preparatory course, Archbishop Mundelein said, it will be possible for students who do not care to continue their studies to drop out before entering upon their special duties for the priesthood and will make possible the exclusion of young men deemed unfit for further study after ample trial. Archbishop Mundelein says the seminary is to be one of the most complete and magnificent in the country.

A special school of methods will be conducted by the board of Sunday schools of the Methodist Episcopal church in the Garrett Biblical institute, Evanston, tomorrow and Tuesday. Pastors and Sunday school workers will attend.

The Rev. Enzo Stasio, pastor of the Italian Methodist Episcopal Church of the Redeemer, New Orleans, La., will preach today in the First Italian Methodist Episcopal church, Polk and Sholto streets. The Rev. Mr. Stasio formerly lived in Chicago, where he did editorial work in connection with the Italian Methodist church paper.

The Rev. E. N. Hardy, for five years pastor of the Congregational church, La Grange, Ill., has resigned and will soon go to Westboro, Mass. A purse of $600 was given him and his salary was ordered continued for two months. He was also presented with a leather bound copy of appreciative resolutions passed by the congregation.

The Rev. L. Wendell Fifield, who graduated this year from the Chicago Theological seminary (Congregational), has been elected to the chair of biblical literature and public speaking in Yankton college, South Dakota. He is the son of Dr. Fifield, who was for several years pastor of the Warren Avenue Congregational church, Chicago.

Hair on the Underarm Removed with El Rado

El Rado removes hair from the face, lip, neck, or underarms in the same simple way that water removes dirt. The sanitary liquid first dissolves the hair,—then it is washed off. Much more agreeable and "womanly" than shaving. El Rado is absolutely harmless, and does not increase or coarsen later hair growth. Money-back guarantee. At all toilet counters. 50c and $1.00.

If you prefer, we will gladly fill your order by mail direct, in plain wrapper, if you will write, inclosing stamps or coin. Pilgrim Mfg. Co., 14 East 28th Street, New York.

Marlborough-Blenheim,

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

THE LEADING RESORT HOUSE OF THE WORLD

Capacity 1100 American and European Plans

The great essential of a resort hotel, as distinguished from a city hotel, is ample public space devoted to the use of its guests, in the form of bright and airy Exchanges, Lobbies, Parlors, Galleries and Solariums, affording pleasing vistas and beautiful promenades, the whole combining into a harmonious vision of grandeur and beauty, while replete with the cozy group seclusions of home, and yet affording full view of the pleasing panorama of the resort life. In this essential the Marlborough-Blenheim stands without an equal in Atlantic City or elsewhere.

Its "Ownership Management," while accounting for its unique reputation, is a guarantee of the high character of its patronage and the unexcelled quality of its service and cuisine. It employs only white service in both its American and a la carte dining rooms.

It makes a specialty of high-class music every evening throughout the year, with special Sunday night solo features.

Atlantic City, with its only real competitor (Europe) this year impossible, is offering unusual attractions and entertainments. Two flying boats are daily sources of interest. Two golf courses, the Yacht Club, the fishing fleet and the wonderful bathing beach attract their respective devotees, while the pier amusements, numerous theatres, the Boardwalk, the fine motor roads and the splendid hotels and restaurants, afford enjoyment to all. There is only one Atlantic City, and this summer it is particularly gay and attractive. Write for illustrated booklet and rates. JOSIAH WHITE & SONS COMPANY

3 IN 1 DELIGHTFUL VACATION TRIP

30,000 Islands of Georgian Bay

(Penetang to Parry Sound.)

Algonquin Provincial Park

(2½ million acres beyond description.)

Charming Muskoka Lakes

Let the Grand Trunk Railway tell you how well this trip fits in for a two to four weeks' vacation. Those who know say it is the most beautiful, interesting and restful of all the moderately priced circle tours from Chicago. Ticket includes all forms of transportation—rail, steamship, stage coach, yachting fleet, etc. This year, with war in Europe, is the time to use ingenuity in planning your trip. Choose "something different"—a journey of interest; one you will like to talk about.

Your visit to Algonquin Park alone will more than pay you. It is one of the most beautiful resorts in America. Two and one-half million acres of Provincial Government Reserve. Ideal for canoeing and fishing, amid the pines, balsams and cedars. Good hotels and rustic camps. There are a thousand people in Chicago who would start for Algonquin Park next week if they could but know of its beauty, charm, tranquillity and ideal vacation arrangements. Investigate. If the law permitted we would guarantee to refund the fare of anybody who visited Algonquin Park and was not satisfied.

THE RING NEBULA IN LYRA.

FACETIOUS astronomers call it the "celestial doughnut." It is the most conspicuous ring nebula in the heavens and is the third brightest nebula visible in the heavens, surpassed only by the nebulae in the constellations Orion and Andromeda, which are visible to the unaided eye. The ring nebula in Lyra requires a powerful field glass or a small telescope, with the aid of which it will appear as a small green ring.

Mr. Maxwell's drawings above show where it can be found with reference to the star Vega and what it will look like through an instrument strong enough to develop its outlines. Vega will be found by imagining a line drawn from the star at the junction of the bowl and the handle of the Big Dipper to the pole star, and then at right angles, in the direction in which the handle of the Dipper projects, to a distance of forty degrees, or eight times the distance which separates the stars in the outer line of the bowl of the Dipper.

◆

Vega is the chief star of the constellation Lyra, and with it identified and with the aid of the chart above showing the relation of Vega to the ring nebula in the constellation, the possessor of a good field glass who cares to look for the nebula ought to be able to find it.

TELESCOPIC VIEW OF THE RING NEBULA.

If the instrument used be of sufficient power a faint star will show in the center of the ring. It is the great central sun of a system which defies the imagination. It might be compared with the Saturn system if it were not so immeasurably greater. Saturn is a satellite of our own small sun. The ring nebula is like a great universe by itself. Its diameter must be billions of miles.

The nebula of Lyra is the most conspicuous ring in the heavens, but there are others of the same class. A nebula has been supposed to represent suns in the creation. In the case of the Lyra nebula the gases which compose it are green.

◆

Two of the main constituents, hydrogen and helium, are found on the earth and in the sun. The third gas, nebulium, has never been discovered in our solar system, although it exists on many of the stars.

An observer on one side of the ring would see a great expanse of luminous gas all about him. As he advanced inward the mists would grow thinner and thinner, until at length he would be journeying in a vast empty void. In the center would loom up bigger and bigger the great central sun, while on beyond the other side of the ring would be a white line of light across the sky.

What the entire meaning is we do not know. Men have had telescopes for only 400 years. Inorganic evolution on such a scale is the work of ages, not centuries. A human lifetime is but an instant in eternity; were it thousands of years it would still be too short to actually see many of the giant changes of the universe.

Ravinia Park and Its Opera.

By Percy Hammond.

IN the event that you are not familiar with Ravinia park, what say you to a pilgrimage thither on one of these cool July evenings? Ravinia is an institution which, were it on the outskirts of some Continental city, would no doubt be regarded with awe and enthusiasm by many of us who know it now merely by hearsay. "An American Bayreuth" it is said to be in the literature which endeavors to describe it, and it is not in the least like that. It is just (excepting its fine ambition) a cultivated wood, with flowered lawns, terraces, a café, a dancing casino (with saxophones), a moving picture theater, and an airy pavilion wherein eminent songsters discourse favorite operas to the accompaniment of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, without Mr. Stock.

◆

Possessing, as perhaps you do, a frigid aversion to the human voice when raised in song, let us select a program whereupon the dancing of Miss Rosina Galli is. A trifle like "The Secret of Suzanne" will precede Miss Galli; and we need not worry about that because it will be sung and acted by famous artists. We entrain, as Mr. Floyd Gibbons might say, we entrain in one of the finest filled day-coaches which leave the admirable station of the Northwestern at 7:30, and we arrive at Ravinia three-quarters of an hour later as the green velvet curtains part and disclose the domestic troubles of Count Gil and his bride, Suzanne.

Nothing concerns us less than these infantile difficulties, though they are enunciated with great gusto by Mrs. Beriza and the Messrs. Adkins and Dua. The music, we are informed by adepts, does not at all jibe with the action, and it is just a silly prank with no tragic moans nor heavings, not at all like "La Tosca." But Mrs. Beriza is melodious and comely, and Mr. Adkins is melodious and handsome. They are generous to "The Secret of Suzanne." You daresay that you have never seen "The Secret of Suzanne" done with more histrionic animation, in Chicago or elsewhere.

◆

After the opera there is a thirty minute intermission, in the course of which we may dance, stroll, sup, or witness the fillum heroes. Then we return to the auditorium to see Mlle. Galli. We have paid, approximately, if we are unthrifty enough to buy reserved seats, $1.10 to witness this and the preceding exhibition. An essayist once wrote of Mme. Pavlowa that she was not to be compared to the winds and waves, but that they were to be compared to her. That is what you feel like saying about Mlle. Galli. She is dusk, and tropic, and buoyant, and sprightly, a fairy thing, gracious and forceful, stirring as light as any breeze that blows. She is a dancer. You look back on the Ballet Russe, with its heavy, stodgy ballerinos, and you know why it was a failure, despite its color, its drama, its tradition, and its music. It had many mimes, but no dancers, contributing, like Mlle. Galli, the essential conventions of grace and rhythm.

◆

Well, the beneficent Mr. Eckstein and his associates are providing at Ravinia park something to prove that there is nothing too good for us. At this suburban resort you may enjoy, if you care to, the accomplishments of artists who have had, or who soon will have, the dubious accolade of metropolitan favor. It is opera, and the principal difference between it and Auditorium opera is that at Ravinia the odor of clover and begonias prevails, while in the Auditorium one smells the prudent and camphorous moth-ball, recently removed from the neglected dress coat.

"Yaaka Hula Hickey Dula."

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—A bronzed youth was swimming at Atlantic City. At least he had been swimming before a life guard warned him to cease. Now he was parading down the beach.

Back of him two small boys were playing "catch" with a tennis ball. Suddenly there was a scream. It came from one of the ball players, and it was inspired by the fact that the other ball player had thrown the tennis ball into the sea beyond the second line of breakers.

The bronzed youth parading the beach, being an obliging sort in the first place, and seeking an excuse to break into the cooling water in the second, took a hop, skip, and jump toward the disappearing ball, dived through the first line of breakers, swam with long, strong overhand strokes toward the second line, rose to the crest of the incoming swell, grabbed the ball, and started back.

The life guard on duty ran toward the spot. A man who had been sitting by the side of the life guard, pinching a bit of the shade of the life guard's shelter, followed. A young couple leaning over the railing of the boardwalk trotted in the same direction. A group of young men who had been hurling a medicine ball at each other joined in the chase, and within thirty seconds, or by the time the retriever of the tennis ball had rolled ashore and swished back his dripping forelock, a crowd had collected.

◆

"Whadayehmean?" demanded the life guard.

"WhadaImeanwhat?" puffed the rescuer.

"Whadayehmean, goin' in where there ain't no net?"

"Aw, fergit it! I was goin' in fer the ball, wasn't I?"

"Sure, you was; but whadayehmean, breakin' the rules? Wanta be et?"

"Who's goin' to be et?"

"You, an a lot o' fresh guys like yeh, if yeh don't keep away from them sharks. Understand me? You keep outa that water exceptin' where there's nets."

"Aw, there ain't no sharks——"

"There ain't, eh? What's them patrol boats doin' out there? Patrollin' fer skates, I suppose? Listen, now, you keep outa that water, y'understand?"

To which the swimmer did not reply until the lifeguard and the crowd had moved back toward the beach shelter. Then he turned half wa yaround and shouted contemptuously:

"Sharks, me eye! D'yeh think yeh own the ocean?"

Which was more or less involved, but evidently expressed the protest of a liberty loving citizen, first, that there were no sharks, and, second, that, if there were any man had a right to take a chance with them in an ocean that was, and by right should be, for all the people all the time.

The crowd that walked back up the beach with the lifeguard was very chatty and considerably excited. It spoke of many sharks that had been seen, and several that had been caught. There was a story that another small boy had been bitten that very morning, and while he was standing waist high in the water. Another story of a lady who, stubbing her toe on a sharp rock and feeling the pain, thought she had been attacked and proceeded to faint and nearly drown before the guard reached her.

There was much talk of what the scare was doing to the business of the Jersey resorts. The beach was fairly well peopled, but with a crowd that was no more than a third as large as normal for the second Sunday in July. And it was generally agreed that the scare would cost the poor old resort men thousands and thousands of dollars. Even millions, according to the more generous estimators.

The week has been filled with experiences of this sort at Atlantic City and Asbury Park. And, while the rigidity of the first rules adopted is being relaxed a trifle, the lifesavers and the resort men stand in such genuine awe of the sharks that they are making every effort to keep bathers out of the water where there is not a protection of strong wire or steel netting.

Around New York the warning has been respected, but the scare has been minimized, particularly at Coney Island, by the fact that no shark has yet, so far as known, had the temerity to approach that resort. Standing on the Steeplechase pier, or walking the beach, and giving the crowd no more than a hurried glance, one can in a way understand the sharks' refusal to mingle in so mixed an assemblage.

And yet one press agent had an idea that if a few dainty morsels could be segregated from the mass the maneater might be tempted far enough in shore to make his capture easy. He therefore announced in such papers as he could induce to print the item that two of the most beautiful girls of the Ziegfeld chorus had agreed to serve as bait. They would stand in their chorus costumes, within the danger zone at Long Beach, to attract the sharks, while a patrol boat, paid for by another actress, with men stationed at either end armed with repeating rifles, would range up and down near them.

"Any shark that could deny himself an investigation of this bait," declared the agent, "would certainly have no ear for music."

There are, according to the veteran fishermen who are natives of the locality, two good reasons why there is no danger of a visit from sharks at Coney. First, with from 50,000 to 200,000 persons in swimming and lying on the beach, the racket is great enough to keep even a starving fish in a perpetual state of fear, and, second, any shark that arrives within range of the famous resort would also be within scenting distance of the barges that carry New York's garbage out to sea and dump it. Quite reasonably the latter bait would prove the most tempting.

It was estimated that there were more than a quarter of a million people at Coney last Sunday, and at least half of them went in bathing, seemingly without fear. They did keep pretty well in shore, however, and at Manhattan beach, which is a mile upshore from the more popular resorts, the beach proprietors stretched a wire netting at the edge of the safety zone.

Anyway, there are so many more sharks on land at Coney than there possibly could be in the surrounding sea that the chances of being "et," as the life guard warned, are about equalized. And when one is in danger from both sides one grows bold and is reassured.

We have sworn a swear to write no word of the theater or theatricals during July. The season will be upon us soon enough in August, and even that is a month too early to think of stuffy auditoriums and upholstered opera chairs, to say nothing of perspiring comedians and shrieking prima donnas.

But we may tell you as a bit of hot weather news that hotel men are planning to introduce moving pictures into their dining rooms to interest the patrons who are growing tired of cabaret entertainments and orchestras. Just now these are, for the most part, incidental to the roof garden entertainment offered evenings, but it is declared that the roof experiment means dining room movies this winter, if the crowds are pleased.

To follow the hairbreadth escapes of Harassed Helene while toying with a table d' hote may prove a pleasant diversion. It might at least take the mind off the slowness of the waiters when there is no ice in the glass and no bread on the plate and no butter anywhere in sight. It might even slow up an expensive appetite, or make the arrival and size of the check seem trivial.

But it is our own conclusion that it would add another horror to the one hour of the day that should be reserved for the business in hand and pleasant converse. With silent bridge the fad for several years, followed by dancing that kept the attention so fixed on ducks and dips and slides and pivots that conversation was impossible for another two or three years, with noisy orchestras and worse cabaret shows running wild at mealtime in every restaurant, the art of conversation with Americans has been practically killed.

The dining room movie, we should say, would finish it.

50 8/10 Per Cent Will Have No Other Car

Hupmobile Owners who have discarded higher priced cars 24 2/10%
11,000 Owners vote Hupmobile efficiency 99%

THE BUSINESS that endures is the sound, strong business, whose customers keep on coming back. Judged by that high standard, the Hupmobile shows a record that few, if any, can rival.

Figures just compiled from our service station statistics prove that it is unique in the number of those who repeat their orders from year to year.

No Other Car At Any Price

It is part of Hupmobile policy to keep in close contact with owners by our intensive system of service. This gives us invaluable information from a dozen different angles. Our fingers are on the pulse of public opinion. We know what people want, and how they are pleased.

If we have erred even a trifle, a danger signal is flashed to us from all parts of the country.

Incidentally, repeat sales tell us how many of our owners cannot be won away by any other car at any other price.

And the latest, freshest figures prove that high-price and low-price—four cylinders and multi-cylinders—are equally powerless to influence 50 8/10 per cent of our sales.

In other words more than half of all Hupmobile owners keep on buying, year after year.

Stop and think of the powers of resistance—the superiorities — the Hupmobile must possess to hold these owners to their allegiance.

Millions of dollars are expended to tempt them away. The lure of a lower price on the one hand; confusing claims of multi-cylinder performance on the other.

Neither Price Nor Type Tempts Them

But the 50 per cent phalanx stands fast year after year. Convinced, in the one case, that a lower price cannot compensate for the loss of Hupmobile goodness.

Convinced, in the other case, that more cylinders can add nothing to that Hupmobile efficiency which eleven thousand owners have rated at 99 per cent. And convinced, in the last instance, that no other car can yield better performance.

What They Get In Performance

In high gear work, they see their Hupmobiles outdoing cars that have more cylinders, or cost more money.

In pulling power and quick getaway, they see nothing under another name that they do not have.

In flexibility, they find themselves relieved of gear-shifting to an amazing extent.

In smooth, steady motor action—in the effortless development of power, the swift response to the throttle—they believe they have the motor car maximum.

In the Hupmobile service system, they know they are getting more than any other car offers: expert inspection, adjustment and care each month for eight months by trained Hupmobile experts at Hupmobile service stations. A service they pay for with coupons which we supply free of cost.

So they are content, this 50 per cent, to stake their preference on the Hupmobile.

The Mark of Superior Motor Car Service

Standard Hupmobile Performance

GOES to a speed of 25 miles an hour, from a stand, in 10 seconds.

Throttles to a man's walking pace, on high gear, without bucking or jerking.

Picks up, without gear change, instantly and smoothly.

Pulls through sand and mud, on high gear.

Develops great pulling power on high gear.

DODGE WINS AT HAWTHORNE.

Number 59

THE SHARK PERIL.

At Matawan, N. J., searchers have been exploding dynamite charges in the creek, where man-eating sharks recently killed two persons. The charges brought to the surface the body of Lester Stilwell, who was one of the victims.

IN EL PASO.

Our hearts are with the soldier boys who, braving the intense heat of the border, are doing their best to make the American army a country's boast. The film shows the boys of the 31st Michigan doing—what?

ONLY A RUMOR.

THE naughty rumor afloat that Charles and his itte brother, Syd Chaplain, have quarreled is all wrong, according to both brothers. They do depose that, as they always have, they love each other and follow with interest the careers of one another. And they also say with energy, gusto, and apparent truthfulness that should they find themselves again working in the same community they would insist on camping under the same roof. So—?

A. W. Plues, an employé of the V-L-S-E. while en route from Del Rio to Eagle Pass, barely escaped death at the hands of Mexican bandits engaged in the laudable occupation of raiding the village of Quemado. The auto stage had just pulled into the town for the luncheon stop when the raiders entered the village. Galvanized into action by a number of shots fired in his direction, the chauffeur wheeled in a cloud of dust, made a wide detour by way of Paloma, and finally landed his hot and dusty charges in Eagle Pass sixteen hours late.

Louise Murray

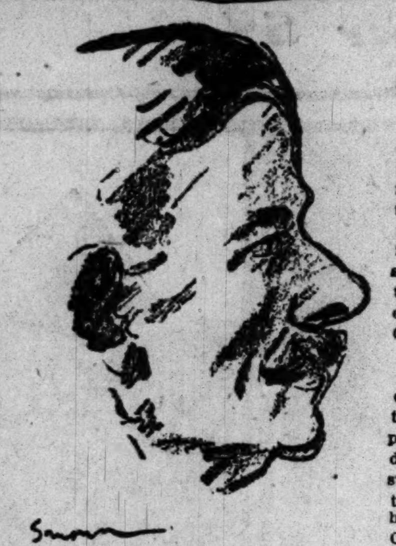
WRITES OF OSCAR WILDE.



FRANK HARRIS

THERE are times when I wish that our little Tabloid chats could be lengthened into long talks. When a book like Frank Harris' "Oscar Wilde, His Life and Confessions," comes to my notice a mere paragraph or two seems quite inadequate. Frank Harris himself cries for space, so varied and powerful has his life been. As editor of the Fortnightly Review he accepted H. G. Wells' first article, and as owner of the Saturday Review he got Bernard Shaw to write about the theater—a debt which Shaw never ceases to acknowledge.

For seven years Frank Harris worked on this life of Oscar Wilde. It is a monumental biography. The keen spiritual beauty of Oscar Wilde's soul just after he had come through the trial by fire of English derision and scourging with hard labor for two years in prison is so poignant as to seem unreal. A personality of the rarest charm of sweetness and light which before had been gross and vain was by the alchemy of suffering made radiant. The fall from that height, the renewing of a life that was degrading to him—what a tragedy of soul it was!

The book is not all praise. The foibles of his nature, his excessive vanity, his sensual grossness are not condoned, but there is a sincere understanding of the eternal Greek in him, which makes the biography a worthy monument to the many years of friendship which existed between Frank Harris and Oscar Wilde.

Because it is published privately, because its title is "Life and Confessions," there will be many who expect a retailing of prurient facts. There will be many who will call it—unread—an immoral book. It is the most highly moral book imaginable. It is unbelievably moral—the attitude of Frank Harris toward his subject is that of a parent, loving and proud of great things accomplished and forgiving, but disapproving when the child does wrong. I suppose that Frank Harris won't like being called that, but it is true. I say that to forfend any one's buying the book for its possible prurient revelations.

The tragedy of this life, pledged to beauty, the high crest of its popularity giving place to the lowest degradations of social obliquy; the rise again from those depths, the renewing of the old degrading ties, and the final disintegration of the spiritual tissues in laziness and poverty, the terrible death—it is truly a great story.

Cosmo Hamilton, whose "The Blindness of Virtue" created such a sensation a few seasons ago, has taken unto himself an American wife and is settled on Long Island for the summer, where he is working on "The Sins of the Children" (Little-Brown), another advocate of teaching the young the fundamental truths of life. The book will be out in the fall.

◆

"Principles of Constitutional Government" (Harpers), by Frank J. Goodenow, is intended not only for a text book but for the reader who, interested in constitutional government, wants to turn his interest into knowledge. Mr. Goodenow is president of the Johns Hopkins university and a man of international reputation. He was invited to China by the government, you remember, to draw up the Chinese constitution.

◆

"The Border Legion" (Harpers), Zane Grey's latest novel, is being dramatized this summer and will be one of the fall productions, it is said. Zane Grey is doing the play himself, "assisted by the stage director who is to stage it," comes the news. Who the stage director is nobody knows. It might be George M. Cohan or it might be David Belasco. I don't know of any other director who goes in for being a co-author.

Nonsense pure and simple, and exactly the sort of nonsense that will make a long and otherwise uneventful trip a memorable journey, is Don Marquis' "The Cruise of the Jasper B." (Appleton).

James Norman Hall, author of "Kitchener's Mob" (Houghton-Mifflin), is a member of the military training camp at Plattsburg, and by a curious coincidence he has for a tentmate Horace Green, the newspaper correspondent who went to Belgium in the early days of the war and who has recorded his experiences in "The Log of a Noncombatant," Mr. Hall served for six months with Kitchener's army, and so, because of his practical knowledge of military operations, he was made a squad leader at Plattsburg.

Rosalind Richards, author of "A Northern Countryside" (Holt), is—in answer to a correspondent—the daughter of Laura E. Richards, who wrote that delightful literary memory of our childhood, "Capain January," and, as you know, Laura E. Richards was the daughter of Julia Ward Howe, so that Rosalind Richards comes by her literary knack quite properly.

The centenary of the birth of John G. Saxe is not making the stir in literary circles which it might have made if war and its ways had not filled our horizon. If you want to pay a tribute to him yourself read again "The Mourner a la Mode," but be sure to realize that it is verse of a half century and more ago.

What Hugh Walpole thinks of Joseph Conrad is doubly worth knowing, for what Hugh Walpole thinks of anything is worth reading and anything about Joseph Conrad is to the Conrad elect among the scriptural things greatly to be wished for. This little book, in which the young English novelist says that the older English-Polish novelist is the greatest influence in the development of the English novel in the last twenty years, is now available in this country from the press of Henry Holt & Co.

Mark Twain's popularity is in no danger of diminishing, to judge by an order just given by his publishers, Harper & Brothers, for 16,000 yards of cloth to be used in binding his books. If Mark Twain were still alive and this cloth were stretched out along the New York pavements [these statistics are not mine; I'd never spend time to figure them out; they're from the Harper publicity department] we might see the familiar white clad figure walking over this green carpet forty inches wide all the way from the city hall northward to One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street.

There have been many locks put on the market, supposedly protecting owners of cars from theft, but the trouble has been that most of them have been made for attachment in some way by which they are easily accessible or else act directly upon some part of the mechanism instead of the seat of the motive power. The Esco Motor Lock company, with offices in suite 1370 Peoples Gas building, 122 South Michigan avenue, has met this contingency by the production of the Esco motor lock, which automatically locks the ignition and gasoline by merely pushing a small lever, and it requires a special key to unlock the same.

The Detroiter Motor Car Co., Detroit, Mich., announces a new roadster body in addition to its six 45 touring model. The Detroiter six 45 roadster, as it is styled, is of striking streamline construction. It is a three passenger body and has a large compartment in the rear, water sealed deck for carrying luggage, etc. The colors in which this model can be furnished are optional with the purchaser. The model is equipped with Stewart speedometer, gasoline gauge, starting and lighting system complete with ammeter, headlight, and dimming attachments, ignition lock and key, dash light and switch, motor driven electric horn, jack, tool and repair kit, one extra rim, wind shield and rubber mat. If wire wheels are desired they are furnished at additional cost.

To test its cross country traveling ability, an important asset in time of war, a new armored automobile has just completed an endurance run from Detroit to Washington, D. C. The trip was made under the observation of government officers. The 652 miles were covered in thirty-six hours. The only mishap occurred near Jenners Town, Pa., in Alleghany mountains, where the car left the road and hewed down a telegraph pole. The occupants crawled out unhurt and the car proceeded after a new front axle was fitted. This armored car is different from those now in use by foreign governments in that it is built on a touring car instead of a motor truck chassis. This gives it lightness, speed, and a mobility in cross country work that has been one of the most serious handicaps of the heavy armored trucks. One of the features of the car's construction which particularly appeals to automobile engineers is its transmission. This is virtually the same contruction as many pleasure cars and is mounted on Hyatt roller bearings.

The James Levy Motors company, Twenty-third street and Michigan avenue, has added another line of popular priced cars to its already large list, the last addition being the Marion-Handley, which is made in two sizes—the six-sixty with Continental motor, 125 inch wheel base, selling at $1,385, and the six-forty with Rutenber motor, 120 inch wheel base, listing at $1,185. Both of these cars are the creation of J. I. Handley, who a year ago moved his factory from Indianapolis to Jackson, Mich., and changed the name of the corporation to the Mutuals Motor company.

It will be interesting for many Chicagoans to learn that C. E. Gambill of the Marmon Chicago company has at last been able to make arrangements for a few extra Marmon 34s on which he can make early deliveries. So great has been the demand for this car, which is 1,100 pounds lighter than cars of equal size and power, that all plans for the season's deliveries in Chicago have for a time been completely upset.

Elgin Race Abandonment Leaves Only Two Events

THE abandonment of the Elgin road races this year not only marks the passing of another automobile speed classic but verifies the prediction made last season that road racing was a cock robin destined to be pierced by the arrow of the speedway sparrow.

With the 1916 Watch city meet in the ditch of oblivion, California alone will stage road races in 1916, the famous Santa Monica course having been awarded the Vanderbilt cup and grand prize for competition in November, when the curtain will have fallen on the speedway events held on tracks east of the Rocky mountains and the drivers will have made their annual exodus to the Pacific coast for winter racing.

The decline of road racing, accentuated by the abandonment of the Elgin speed carnival, has been gradual, and causes other than the activities of the speedway builders last year have been responsible for the waning interest on the part of promoters, participants, and public. The records testify to the truth of such an assertion. There were twenty-seven contests in 1909, twenty-one in 1910, twenty-seven in 1911, twenty in 1912, sixteen in 1913, and only nine in 1914 and 1915.

In fact, the Elgin events were the only road races held east of the Mississippi river last year. California was the road racing center in 1915, five of the nine contests sanctioned and run being staged within the boundaries of the Golden state. Moreover, Elgin can boast of promoting the only two bona fide road races held last season. This is a road racing course in every sense of the heretofore erroneously used phrase, being more than eight miles in length and composed of dirt roads, rolled and oiled. The courses over which the other road races of 1915 were run should be classed as semi-speedways, and are now so designated by the ruling of the contest board of the American Automobile association that macadam and concrete roads do not constitute a road racing course.

Because of the excellence of the Elgin course and the splendid sport that has been provided by the Watch city promoters in the last six years, the abandonment of this year's meet is commonly regretted by the followers of the game, who believe that there is room for road racing as well as speedway events. Elgin merchants would not back their own classic, however; there is little money in the treasury of the Elgin Road Racing association, and the appeal for financial aid from Chicago did not meet with a ready response, local sportsmen being reluctant to act as angels for a race in which Elgin took so little interest.

Whether the Elgin race has passed to the realm of remembered things for all time is a question that will not be answered until next year. It is probable that the Watch city promoters will attempt to revive the classic, and if they are given the support from Elgin merchants that the meet deserves there probably will be automobile competition on the Kane county course in 1917. Elgin must take the initiative, however, and shoulder the burden of the expense.

The next event on the 1916 speed schedule is the Tacoma Montamarathon, which will be run on Aug. 5. This race has been given championship classification by the A. A. A. contest board, and the promoters have hung up $10,000 in prize money. The entries to date include Rawlings' West Duluth Special, three Crawfords, three Duesenbergs, Harry Harkness' two Delages and Peusun, and the two Maxwells owned by the Indianapolis speedway. It is probable that Resta and De Palma also will be on the starting line at Tacoma.

HEAVY FINE FOR SPEEDING.

Automobile Editor of The Tribune: As a warning to motorists who are contemplating a trip to Milwaukee I would suggest that you publish this letter so that they may profit by my recent and unpleasant experience in that territory.

I have been told the roads in Milwaukee county, particularly the Lake Shore road, between Racine and Milwaukee, are infested with motorcycle policemen, who seem to take an unexplainable pleasure in arresting motorists driving Illinois cars and my experience leads me to believe that this report is indeed true.

Approaching South Milwaukee in the open country on a smooth cement road about five miles in length I, with two other men, was driving at the rate of thirty-five miles per hour and although I was fully aware that this was ten miles an hour in excess of the state law, which is twenty-five miles per hour, the road was absolutely unobstructed and that rate of speed under the conditions was in no manner reckless or dangerous.

We entered the town of South Milwaukee and for fully five minutes drove at the speed allowed in cities of fifteen miles per hour, when the motorcycle policeman, who designated himself as a deputy sheriff, came alongside and informed us that we were under arrest, although he would not state any particulars of the violation of the law we had committed.

He took us into the city of Milwaukee, where we were forced to put a $75 cash bond for appearance and for which we were unable to receive a receipt of any kind, being told in a curt manner that if we did not wish to leave the money in that way we could spend the night in jail.

The next morning before the judge of the district court in the city of Milwaukee the officer swore that we were exceeding a speed of sixty-five miles per hour and although this absolutely false testimony was denied by myself and the two men with me at the time, although we did admit the speed as I stated above, thirty-five miles an hour, the judge saw fit to fine me $50 and costs, amounting to $55 in all, which fine was so unusual that every paper in the city of Milwaukee that evening had a full account of it under prominent headlines.

A MOTORIST.

Pslams of Life

by J. P. McEvoy

I am dying, Egypt, dying, and my exit can't be stayed,
And the sexton soon will pat me on the smiler with a spade.

"Ride a horse if you'd be healthy,"
Said the medico to me;
"It will make your gizzard gizzy,
It will make your giblets gee;
It will cure your corns and bunions
And your water on the knees,
Many rides will even rid you
Of your foot and mouth disease.
Ride a horse each night and morning
Through the bosky dells apace,
Or your friends will soon be planting
Pretty flowers on your face."

So I bought a handsome charger,
With the accent on the charge;
He was faster than a Villa,
He was bigger than a barge.
All one day I rode him gayly,
And it filled me full of glee,
And it made my gizzards gizzy
And it made my giblets gee;
But that night I had to sell him,
Sell my charger—just like that!
For the landlord simply wouldn't
Let me keep him in the flat.

So I purchased me a shooter
And a lot of little shoots.
"I will have my health," I muttered,
"Notwithstanding landlord 'Coots.'"
And I hunted in the alleys,
But no game or birds arose;
There was nothing there but children,
So I fin'lly potted those. . . . .
Even that is now denied me—
Gone that exercise selected,
I can't even shoot some children,
For their parents have objected!

There is nothing now to live for—and I long to be at rest,
So my friends can start a-planting pretty flowers on my chest

Velie

"Our Velie Does the Work of Four Two-Horse Teams"

SO writes J. M. Brighthall, lumber, builders' hardware, Hummelstown, Pa. "Since using our Velie we have done away with four two-horse teams, handle more material and do it much easier. The Velie Truck is a profitable investment."

Another of the matchless records made by Velie construction: Worm gear drive, heavy-duty Continental motors, four-speed transmission, steel raybestos clutches, Timken bearings throughout, removable tubular radiators, extra heavy pressed-steel frame, heavy silico-manganese steel springs. Driver's seat and cab included with chassis. Gas headlights and Prest-O-Lite tank besides the regular oil-lighting equipment. Model 25, 1½-2-ton, $2250; Model 26, 3-ton, $3350.

We carry a full stock of parts. Call on us for Velie Service—any time, day or night. Let us figure on your transportation problems. We are prepared to make a liberal time-payment arrangement if you wish.

How are the roads?

Following are the highway bulletins sent in by the road scouts of the touring bureau of the Automobile Blue Book during the last week:

ILLINOIS.

Champaign to Decatur, via Monticello, is a good dirt road, with the exception of a ten mile stretch that is rough in places.

The route from Quincy to Galesburg, via Camp Point, Bushnell, and Macomb, is being repaired between Plymouth and Macomb and is extremely rough north of Plymouth.

The Quincy-Keokuk road, via Ursa and Hamilton, is reported in good condition and by detouring via Carter Hill and Tiago, the motorist gets smoother going.

Hannibal to Quincy, via Shepherd, Marblehead, and Rochester, is rough in places but can be traveled. The road from Quincy to Taylor and Palmyra can be traveled, but the section west of Quincy is extremely rough.

The Egyptian trail, connecting Chicago with Cairo, and passing through Champaign, Mattoon, and Effingham, is reported in good condition.

Recent rains have laid the dust on the Old National trail from St. Louis to Terre Haute and the driving is excellent.

INDIANA.

Chicago to South Bend, via Hobart, Valparaiso, and Laporte. This is now open and new concrete is laid all the way to New Carlisle, except a slight detour between the Bootjack and the cemetery, which makes it necessary to travel by way of Hudson Lake.

South Bend to Toledo, via Goshen, Ligonier, Bryan, and Wauseon. There is a short detour between Elkhart and Goshen that is clearly marked all the way. A mile and a half of the new brick road east of Goshen has been opened and the road is in good shape from Goshen to Bryan.

IOWA.

Iowa City reports all intersecting roads—the Red Ball, Chicago-Kansas City-Gulf, Red X, and River-to-River routes—in good condition with the exception of occasional spongy places and ruts, the results of former rains.

MINNESOTA.

The route from St. Paul to Duluth, via Sandstone and Moose Lake, is reported in good condition.

The route from La Crosse to St. Paul, via Winona and Rochester, is reported in excellent condition the greater part of the way.

The route from Alexandria to Fargo, via Fergus Falls and Barnesville, is reported as good dirt most of the way, although there are some stretches in need of attention.

MISSOURI.

St. Joseph reports roads in that vicinity in good condition. Light rains have settled the dust, the highways in that territory have been newly marked, and many improvements have been made.

The route from Chillicothe to Des Moines, via Trenton, Lineville, and Indianola, is reported in fine condition.

NEBRASKA.

The Omaha-Lincoln-Denver route, passing through Lincoln, Hastings, McCook, and Sterling, is reported in good condition.

The Nebraska section of the Lincoln highway is in excellent shape.

NEW MEXICO.

Motorists following the Ocean to Ocean highway from Magdalena to Trinidad via Socorro, Albuquerque, and Santa Fé are making fast time, as the trails are in good condition.

OHIO.

In traveling from Bryan to Stryker it is necessary to go east on what is known as the old Napoleon-Bryan pike about four or five miles, and then north on the old road just west of Stryker.

The road between Toledo and Cleveland, via Fremont, Bellevue, Norwalk, Oberlin, and Elyria, is now open all the way, and the trip is made over macadam, concrete, and brick highways.

The route from Cincinnati to Chillicothe, via Hillsboro, is closed between Dodsonville and Hillsboro on account of construction work.

WISCONSIN.

Lake Geneva reports all roads in that section of the state in excellent condition.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

Miller, Earle & Miller, the Chicago branch representatives of the Four Wheel Drive Auto company of Clintonville, Wis., have just received a copy of a letter written by the driver of one of the F. W. D. trucks in Mexico. This driver was formerly on the testing staff of the F. W. D. company in Clintonville. The following is a quotation from part of the letter: "It seems mighty funny to be steering an F. W. D. in this God-forsaken country, with an army man by your side, with a rifle, with your own cartridge belt strung around you, and your own rifle within reach. I haven't hit any real trouble myself, but some of the other boys have been sniped at once or twice. We've all been lucky, however, so far. It isn't so much different, except for the terrible heat, from running the cars around Clintonville and over in the sand pits. You'd be surprised to see how F. W. D.'s are standing up to the long pulls through the sand without overheating and without having any trouble. The two wheel drive trucks are doing pretty well, too, but it isn't really fair to stack a two wheel drive up against an F. W. D. in this kind of trucking."

The 1917 Velie "Biltwel" six line of automobiles has been announced. In the light of increased cost of materials and greater values included, the fact that the price continues low—$1,085 for the touring car—is decidedly interesting. Timken axles and bearings are now featured with all models. The touring body is longer and roomier than formerly. Body sides round over into a new and pleasing design. Finish and equipment is fully up to Velie standard. Velie Continental motor, multiple disc clutch, push button starter, and all superior features have been further improved and retained. The line itself has been increased to include seven body styles on the $1,085 chassis, among which is a new and decidedly different four passenger roadster and a sedan with removable plate windows. A larger seven passenger six at $1,550, with forty-five horsepower motor, four speed transmission and unusual luxury completes the 1917 offerings.

Dramatis Personae of the Speed Spectacle.

14—GIL ANDERSON, PREMIER.

IN the Crown Point speed carnival of 1909, when road racing had its inception in the middle west, a mechanician, riding with Adolph Monson in a Marion, lay astride the hood of the car for two laps and attempted to adjust a faulty carbureter. This was Gil Anderson's spectacular introduction to automobile racing fans. In the last six years he has won a place in their hearts, not only by his daring, but by his victories.

Last season the mechanician who rode with Monson at Crown Point and whose courage was not wanting in the crucial test, was awarded the world's speedway championship. Anderson confined his 1915 speedway activities to the four richest events on the card and in four starts took a first at New York, a second at the Twin Cities, a third at Indianapolis, and a sixth at Chicago. Out of a total of $205,000 hung up for these contests the veteran of the Stutz team won $37,000, not a mean average for 1,850 miles of driving by several parasangs.

Moreover, Anderson can boast of having led the field home in the fastest open event of the year—the race for the Vincent Astor cup—his average for the 350 miles being 102.56 miles per hour. He lost the Twin City derby to Earl Cooper, his teammate, by the eyelash margin of one-quarter of a second, a defeat that should bring a blush of pride rather than of shame to his face. Such a consistency record is unequaled in automobile racing history.

In fact, Anderson was a far more consistent performer than Resta, his closest competitor, in 1915. His driving was just as meritorious and, although not the recipient of the publicity or homage that Dario the Great enjoyed, he won only $750 less in speedway competition than the invader.

Anderson, who is a descendant of the Vikings, made his debut as a driver in the 1911 Indianapolis international sweepstakes. Although he was at the wheel of a green car, the Stutz, he completed the 500 miles and finished eleventh. His showing and that of his car was one of the high lights of the first five century event to be run over the brick course of the Hoosiers. That same season he also finished second to Louis Disbrow in the 301-450 inch class event at Fairmount park, Philadelphia.

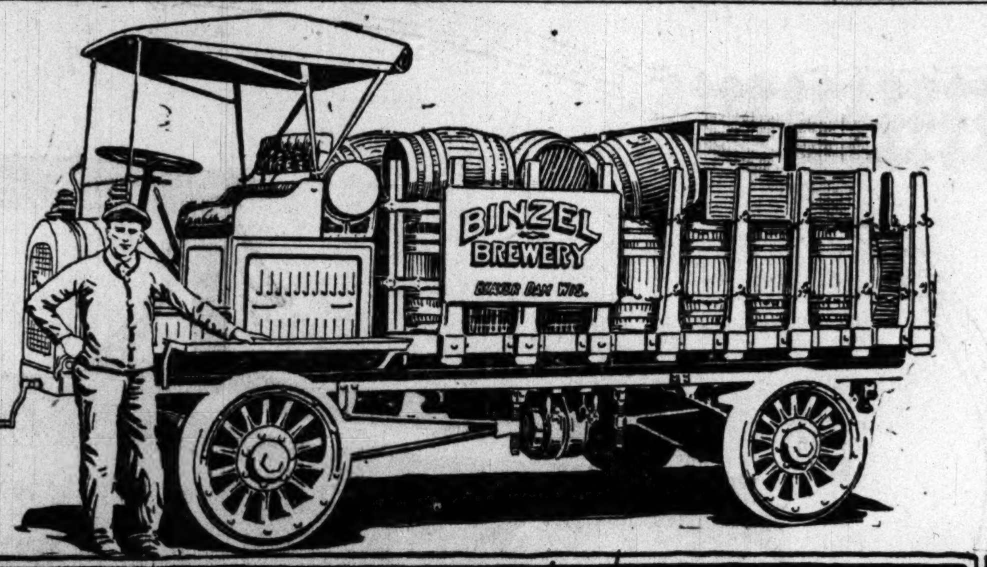
In 1912 Anderson took prize money in three races. He was second in the Illinois trophy race at Elgin, being beaten by his teammate, Charley Merz, and finished third in the grand prize and fourth in the Vanderbilt cup classic, which were run at Santa Monica.

The Norseman participated in only one road race in 1913, but he was first under the wire in that event, winning the Elgin national trophy. The following season he was an also ran in the Elgin national, the Vanderbilt cup, and the grand prize, but he finished second to De Palma in the C. A. C. cup event at Elgin and captured fifth money in the inaugural race on the Sioux City speedway.

In addition to having a most profitable season on the speedways last year, Anderson captured prize money in three road races. He won the Elgin national trophy for a second time in his career, finished second in the C. A. C. cup event, and was fourth to get the checkered flag in the Vanderbilt cup classic.

Until this season Anderson always has cast his fortunes with the Stutz team. The retirement of Harry Stutz from racing at the close of 1915, however, forced Gil to seek another mount and he allied himself with the Premier forces.

The Pathfinder twelve cylinder car which is to travel from San Diego to New York, following the Lincoln highway from San Francisco east, has completed more than half of its journey. The entire trip from coast to coast is to be made with the gear box officially sealed, the car to travel on high gear for the entire distance. L. M. Maynard of the Panama-California exposition is driving a Pathfinding car in advance of the test car. A transcontinental trip under these conditions will prove conclusively the relative ease with which a long journey entirely across the continent on the Lincoln highway can be accomplished.



31,320 Miles on Original Set of Tires

From a Letter Written by an F-W-D Owner

"The truck has run 31,320 miles up to the present time on the original set of tires furnished with the machine, and we have just now bought our first set of new tires."

FOUR WHEEL DRIVE

F W D

Tires Cost Less and Wear Longer

Saving of One-Third on First Cost
Tire Mileage Doubled

You save one-third in first cost of tires. Every wheel is a drive wheel. Dual tires on rear wheels are unnecessary. Single tires are used on all four wheels.

Double Tire Mileage. Tire wear is distributed equally over four wheels. Less wear and tear on each individual tire. You cash in on the results.

These facts may be news to you. Yet the F-W-D has been making good for seven years. The first F-W-D built is in service today.

F-W-D Trucks save gasoline; save oil; accellerate faster in traffic; save time; don't skid; stop quicker, reducing chance of accidents; last longer; cost less for repairs; run successfully on roads that stall the ordinary truck.

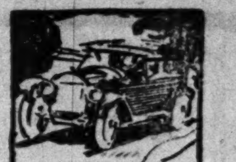
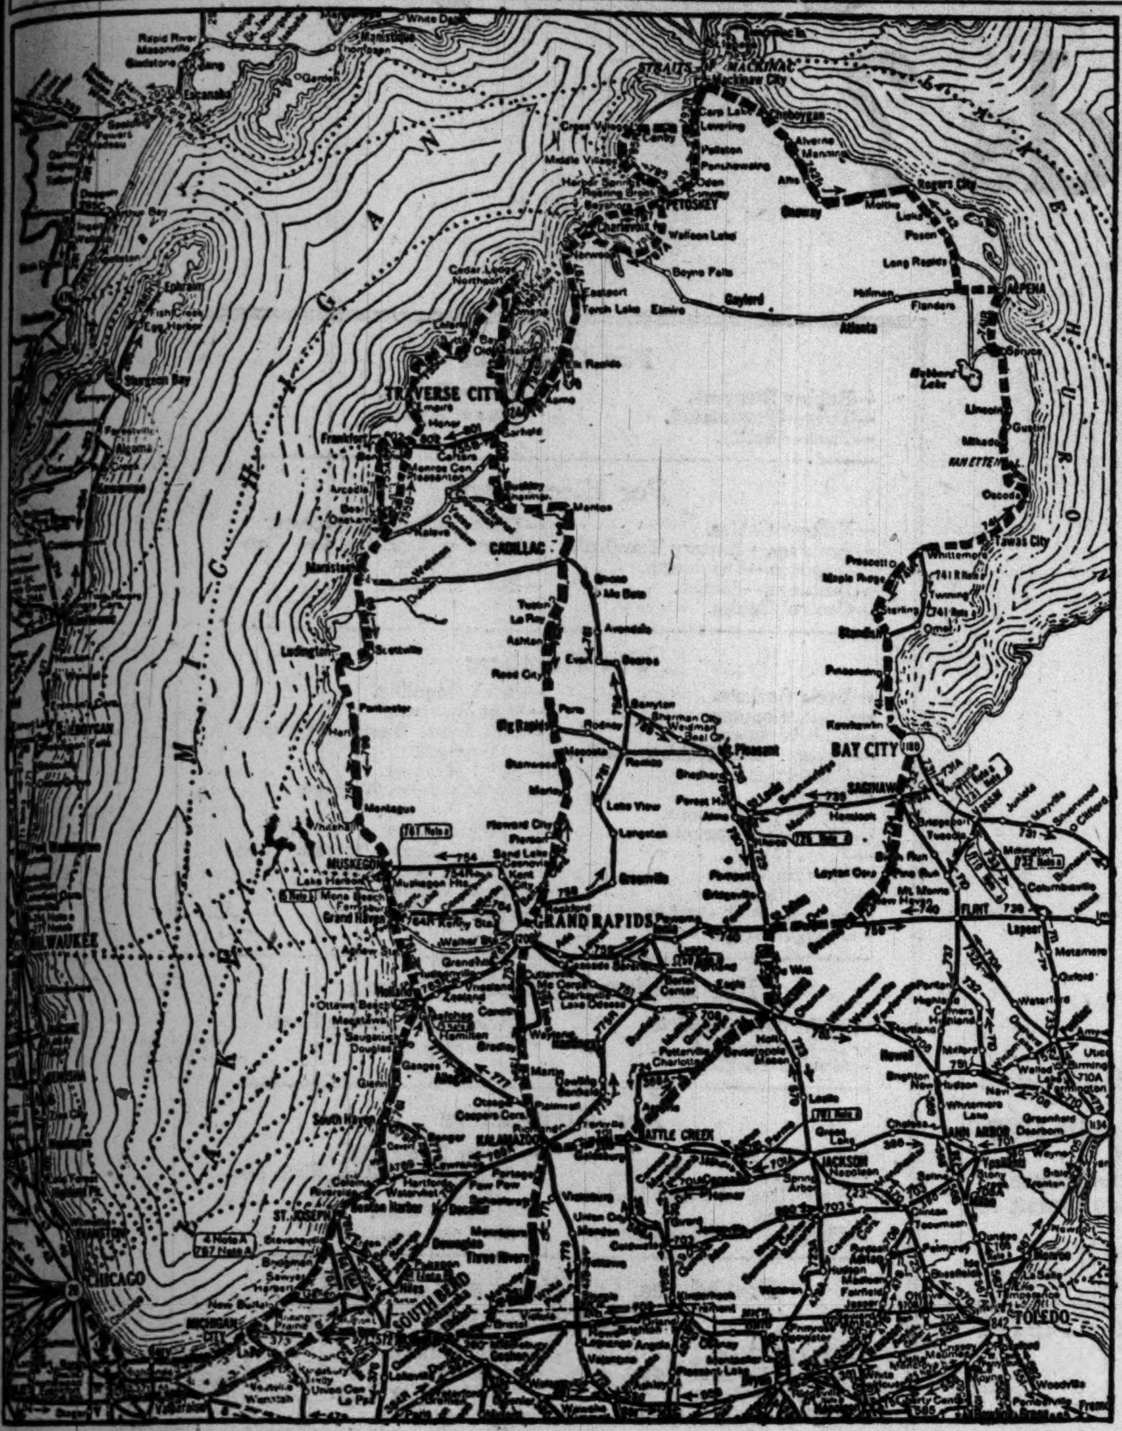
MOTORS AND MOTORCYCLES

Conducted by J. C. Burton



Circle Tour of Michigan a Scenic Outing.



THE state of Michigan offers, as a whole, just as fine scenery for the motorist as many parts of Wisconsin, although of a different nature.

For those who wish to get to the resort places on a large lake, rather than on a small lake, Michigan is really the place to go.

One of the most popular routes to follow is to travel what is known as the West Michigan pike from Chicago to Mackinaw City. Returning, there are two ways for motorized vacationists. One is to come down the East Michigan pike through Alpena to Bay City; the other is to take the inside road from Traverse City down to Grand Rapids and Kalamazoo. The eastern section will probably be less frequented, but the western routing will have a slight advantage in better roads.

For a trip of this kind, tourists should leave Chicago, going through South Chicago to Hammond, then over to Gary and Michigan City, going through the sand dunes section here, and follow the shore up to New Buffalo. Then turn east to Three Oaks, north to Sawyer, coming along the shore again, and following the lake through Bridgman and Stevensville into St. Joseph. From St. Joseph, the West Michigan pike goes north through Riverside, Coloma, around Paw Paw lake, Watervliet, north into South Haven, Glenn, Douglas, Saugatuck, and into Holland. Watervliet and Paw Paw Lake afford very attractive stopping over places, and from Holland you can make a side trip down to Ottawa Beach.

From Holland, continue north through Grand Haven to Muskegon, two more attractive outing places, where several days can be passed to advantage. From Muskegon the road continues north through many popular towns, such as White Hall, Montague, Pentwater, and Ludington; then east to Scottville, north to Manistee, Onekama, Arcadia, and Frankfort. From here the tourist can follow the line of the shore through Honor, Empire, and Leland to Northport, then come south through Omena and Sutton Bay to Traverse City, or you can go straight from Frankfort to Benzonia, then over to Traverse City, but the short road, winding around the various bays and coasts, will be found to be very attractive.

From Traverse City the road continues north through Acme, Elk Rapids, Torch Lake, Eastport, and Norwood into Charlevoix, and then through Bayshore, following the lake into Petoskey, north through Roaring Brook, Harbor Springs, Middle Village, and Cross Village, and then east to Levering and up to Mackinaw City.

Returning the short way would be to cut south to Levering and then take the inside road through Pellston and Oden to Petoskey. Then an option from Petoskey to Charlevoix can be had by going via Walloon Lake. From Charlevoix retrace to Traverse City and follow the inside road through Buckley and Manton to Cadillac, south through Leroy, Reed City, Big Rapids, Morely, Howard City, Sand Lake, and Rockford to Grand Rapids and down through Corinth, Wayland, Martin, and Plainwell into Kalamazoo.

From Kalamazoo, the main road goes through Decatur and Dowagiac into South Bend, but for an outing trip it will be found to be more agreeable to go south through Portage, Schoolcraft, Three Rivers, White Pigeon, Bristol, Elkhart, and Mishawaka into South Bend, as this will take in more of the resort region and less of the travel line. From South Bend follow the Lincoln highway west through New Carlisle, Laporte, and Valparaiso down to Schererville, or turn north through Highlands up to Hammond and back to Chicago.

The other choice in returning from Mackinaw City is to follow the East Michigan pike. Although not quite so good a road, but very picturesque, would be to go through Cheboygan, Onway, Rogers City, Posen, Long Rapids, Alpena, Spruce, Lincoln, Mikado, Van Etten Lake, Tawas City, Whittemore, and Standish into Bay City.

From Bay City there are several ways to return, but probably the best one would be to come down through Saginaw to Layton Corners, Owosso, St. Johns, and Lansing; then over to Battle Creek and Kalamazoo and following the routing as given above through Three Rivers into South Bend and back to Chicago.

Questions and Answers

By High Speed

I often drive from Chicago to Lake Geneva and as I have discovered an excellent route to that resort I thought I would write you about it, thinking the information might be of interest to readers of your valued column. Now that Milwaukee avenue is closed near Niles I take Lincoln avenue to Niles Center and Morton Grove, turning left at that point and coming onto the Milwaukee avenue cement road. I then follow the Blue Book route through Wheeling and Long Grove to Wauconda. Here I leave the Blue Book route and take the river road to McHenry, from which point I drive through Ringwood and Hebron to Lake Geneva. Driving over this route is a real pleasure and I am sure your readers will make no mistake in following my advice.
JACOB SMITH, Chicago.

Will you please outline three routes from Chicago to Detroit, stating principal towns on each route, together with intermediate distances. Which route of the three do you consider the best.
CHARLES SEDWICK, Morton Park, Ill.

The shortest and at the same time one of the best routes to Detroit is via South Bend, 100 miles; Mishawaka, Osceola, Elkhart, Middlebury, Shipshewana, Howe, Orland, Kinderhook, Coldwater, Quincy, Jonesville, Somerset, Clinton, Saline, Ypsilanti, Wayne, Dearborn, Detroit, 189.4 miles. Total distance, 289.4 miles. This route consists of good gravel roads to Ypsilanti, the balance being concrete. Another popular route, though somewhat longer, is through South Bend, Niles, Dowagiac, Kalamazoo, Galesburg, Battle Creek, Marshall, Jackson, Chelsea, Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti, and Wayne, to Detroit, 208.6 miles, making a total distance of 308.6 miles. This route consists of fair to good gravel roads, with some stretches of sand. The third route is the one generally used by tourists driving to Boston and eastern points. It goes through South Bend, Mishawaka, Elkhart, Goshen, Benton, Ligonier, Wawaka, Kendallville, Butler, Edgerton, Bryan, Wauseon, Toledo, Erie, La Salle, Monroe, Rockwood, and Trenton to Detroit, 224.9 miles, or a total distance of 324.9 miles. The last named route consists of macadam, gravel, and stone roads all of the way.

Will you please be so kind as to give me your opinion as to the best way to drive from Elkhart, Ind., to Hannibal, Mo., by automobile?
C. M. K., Elkhart, Ill.

The route to Hannibal, together with the intermediate distances, is divided as follows: South Bend, 16.8 miles; Valparaiso, 49.4 miles; Crown Point, 20; Momence, 30.1; Kankakee, 10; Dwight, 30; Bloomington, 59.8; Lincoln, Springfield, 76.5 miles; Jacksonville, Hannibal, 106.5 miles.

Will you please furnish me with a good motor car route from Chicago to Ottumwa, Ia.?
H. G. B., Chicago.

The best route is over the Lincoln highway, which you would pick up at Geneva. From Geneva go through De Kalb, Rochelle, Dixon, and Sterling. The distance to Clinton is 148.4 miles. Princeton, Pleasant Valley, Davenport, 38.3 miles; Muscatine, 29.8 miles; Wapello, Burlington, 52.1 miles; Middleton, Mt. Pleasant, Fairfield to Ottumwa, 79 miles.

I wish to drive my automobile to Ann Arbor, Mich., and would like to have you lay out the most advisable route for me to follow. J. R. F., Indiana Harbor, Ind.

Go through Gary, Michigan City, South Bend, 97½ miles; Niles, Kalamazoo, Battle Creek, Marshall, Jackson, Chelsea, Ann Arbor, 170.5 miles.

What is the condition of the Dixie highway at the present time? I am familiar with the roads between Chicago and Louisville, but would like to know something of the route from Louisville to Mammoth cave. Please enlighten me through your interesting column?
W. P. K., Lincoln, Ill.

You will find the Dixie highway in fair condition at the present time. However, on account of improvements now being made on the highway between Louisvilel and Mammoth cave, would suggest that you follow what is known as the Jackson highway from Louisville. This route goes through Mount Washington, Bardstown, New Haven, Buffalo, Hardyville, and Cave City to Mammoth cave, 112.7 miles. The roads consist of macadam to Bardstown, then fair to good roads to a point near Cave City. The balance of the road is stone. We would suggest that you verify this information when you reach Louisville.

Would it be advisable for a beginner to attempt a motor car trip to the Dells of the Wisconsin? Will you please tell me near what city they are located and what is the best route to follow? How far is it?
A. H. W., Chicago.

Owing to the large volume of inquiries for automobile routes and the relatively small amount of space in which to answer them, readers wishing immediate replies are advised to inclose a 2 cent stamp with inquiries so they may be answered by mail. Only routes and answers to questions of general interest will b. published.

The trip is an interesting one and you should have no trouble. The Dells are near Kilbourn, Wis. The best route is through Oak Park, Franklin Park, Bensenville, Roselle, Itasca, Elgin, Algonquin, Woodstock, Janesville, Madison, Ashton, Prairie du Sac, Baraboo, Delton, and Kilbourn, a total distance of 209 miles.

Would it be possible for you to publish the most advisable route to follow on an automobile tour from Quincy to Buffalo? From Buffalo we wish to return home by way of Chicago. What would the total distance of the trip be?
C. W. H., Quincy, Ill.

Springfield, 119.9 miles; Bloomington, 76.5 miles; Lafayette, 118.1 miles; Kokomo, Marion, Lima, 164.9 miles; Findlay, Bowling Green, Toledo, 77.7 miles; Fremont, Clyde, Norwalk, Elyria, Cleveland, 120.1 miles; Erie, 102 miles; Buffalo, 89.2 miles. In going from Buffalo to Chicago use the same route to Toledo and then go through South Bend, 165.6 miles, to Chicago, 100 miles.

Please publishe the exact time made by Resta in the 300 mile race at the Chicago speedway. J. A. D., Terre Haute, Ind.

The official time made by Resta in the Chicago 300 mile race of July 11 was 3:02:31.64. This was at an average speed of 98.70 miles an hour for the entire 300 miles.

GOODRICH TRADE-MARK

PURE Gold is too soft, for Wear.

So,—there is no "Pure-Gold" Jewelry,—"Pure-Gold" Plate, or Coin.

Even the best Wares, of Gold, must be "alloyed,"—for Strength and Service.

Hence we have "18 Karat Gold,"—"14 Karat Gold,"—"10 Karat Gold"—all known, when manufactured, as "Solid Gold."

There also are "Gold-filled,"—"Rolled-Gold,"—"Gold-plated,"—and, "Washed-with-Gold" Articles.

—Plus some 57 Varieties of "Near-Gold."

Like unto the Gold Situation is that of RUBBER!

Because, there are practically NO "Pure Rubber" goods manufactured.

* * *

PRACTICALLY all Rubber-Goods must be specially "Alloyed," or Compounded, for Strength, Toughness, or Hardness,—as the purpose demands.

Proper Compounding of Rubber, for each purpose, is therefore of the greatest POSSIBLE importance to Consumers or Users of Rubber-Goods.

Because,—even the best Materials might be so Compounded and Vulcanized (with even the best intention) as to secure only very MEDIOCRE Results.

Beyond this, the inevitable necessity for "Compounding" all Rubber, before manufacturing, opens up enormous possibilities for disguising inferior Quality, under superior Color and Finish.

It sometimes takes the Eye, and Experience, of an Expert to determine, from the outward appearance of a Rubber-Article, the Quality beneath that appearance,—the Service it will render,—the length of time it will retain Vitality, to render that Service.

The Public must therefore buy its RUBBER GOODS largely ON FAITH.

—Faith in the INTEGRITY of the Maker,—in the Experience, Ability, and Equipment of the Maker.

—Faith in the RECORD of that Maker for DEPENDABILITY—in his frank INTENTION to put his Trade-Mark upon NO Rubber Goods BUT those that will stand the TEST of Time and Service.

* * *

THE Goodrich Factory at Akron, O., has been learning,—FOR 47 YEARS,—how to best compound Rubber.

For 47 Years its Owners have KEPT FAITH with Consumers and Dealers, in such manner that its record,—for DEPENDABILITY and Square-Dealing,—has never been questioned.

It is the largest Rubber Factory in the World (chiefly because of this) and, so, has MOST at stake on its Trade-Mark.

These are tangible reasons why the Public (which cannot KNOW the Quality of Rubber Goods, from their outward appearance) may safely pin its faith to ANY article of Rubber which bears the GOODRICH Trade-Mark pictured above.

Even a Child may thus KNOW dependable Rubber Goods!

On this page will be found listed some of the 267 different lines of dependable Rubber Goods made, and trade-marked, by,—

A
RESIDENTIAL DISTRICT.
WITH AN ASSURED FUTURE.

BRYN MAWR HIGHLANDS

This district has now reached the point where future development will proceed rapidly. The newness has worn off and the increase in land values will shortly come.

You can buy here now at prices far below the cost of land in the more highly developed neighborhoods, such as Kenwood and Hyde Park, yet you possess the same advantages and conveniences; the same homelike surroundings and fast transportation.

The maintenance here of a community of great desirability is in our opinion assured. The class of substantial improvements assure it; the lake and the park assure it; there is nothing in sight but continued development along most satisfactory lines.

You will find that an apartment building in BRYN MAWR HIGHLANDS will make an excellent investment and an attractive home.

Opportunity Davidson Saskatchewan, Canada Farms

Last year many farmers in this district produced more than enough grain to pay for the entire farm at present going land values. Crop prospects are again practically perfect this year. You can still buy this land in tracts to suit you at low prices, with a small cash payment and the balance arranged on easy 6% terms.

We can give you a very cheap round trip excursion ticket rate on certain dates this summer to inspect this land. It costs very little to investigate. See it now. This country has no extra war tax of any kind. When peace is declared crowds will be seeking these opportunities. Land producing such results will surely boom later on. Be forehanded, look now.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

Backing the Farmers

THE RURAL CREDITS BILL, now a law, makes the great credit of the country available to farmers. They now have more freedom, with protection, in the matter of getting credit on their land. This bill will be of far-reaching benefit both to farmers and those who have money to loan.

UNCLE SAM is backing the farmers as never before, and it is a great forward step in Preparing for Peace, when munition manufacturing will stop and men by the tens of thousands will go to the land.

INSTEAD of following the crowd like sheep why not take time by the forelock? Decide today. The man who decides and acts promptly and gets ahead of the crowd is the one who reaps the greatest benefits of any big movement of this character. It is only common sense to act now and provide for the day when the factory shuts down or your job is changed or you are too old for the work you are now doing.

FREE AS AIR is your privilege to investigate. Is it not every man's duty to better his condition? Write today for free literature about the opportunities in the Swigart Tract of over 50,000 acres of land in Manistee, Mason, Lake, and Wexford Counties, Michigan. Ten years from now great areas of this land will be transformed from their present unimproved condition into pastures and meadows, fields and gardens, orchards and vineyards. Would you like to join this great movement in a district where the conditions are so well suited to general and specialized farming, fruit growing, cattle, sheep, hogs, and poultry?

THE MARKETS are good, transportation is excellent, climate moderated by closeness to Lake Michigan, rainfall plentiful, purest drinking water by easily driven wells, many rivers and lakes afford excellent fishing, boating, and bathing.

OUR LITERATURE describes the crops and how they thrive and are handled in our district. Potatoes and beans, or clover and vetch for seed, on 10 to 20 acres will quickly pay the original cost of the entire 40 acres at the present prices of $10 to $25 per acre and some of the best lands at $18 to $20 per acre. Terms as low as $10 to $50 down and $5 to $10 per month on 40 acres. Orchards when fully developed and properly cared for produce yields of fruit bringing as high as $200 per acre. No part of Michigan offers better opportunities in fruit and poultry.

IT IS THE SHORTEST TRIP out of Chicago to see such a large area of low priced lands. Come and see our good roads, schools, growing villages, and good stands of crops. There is no better time of year to take the trip to see the crops. Come and judge for yourself of the prosperity of the farms that are already developed, the good class of people who are coming here, and how the district is progressing. You will be interested in the series of power dams that are being installed. Learn about our insurance, privilege of exchange, farm advisers, seed distribution, and other co-operative features. We have been nineteen years in the business in this district and we are here to serve and satisfy the buyers and settlers on the lands. Write for our free literature or call for it and see our little land show and many stereopticon views.

OUR NEXT TWO SPECIAL EXCURSIONS will go July 25th and August 8th. Rate from Chicago to Wellston, our Michigan headquarters, and return $12.50, including railroad fare, meals, and lodging. Railroad fare will be rebated on your land purchase. Good accommodations for both men and women. Automobiles and guides free. You return to Chicago at 7 a. m. the following Fridays. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory, the entire car repainted and refinished like new, all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service value these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

KLONDIKE MINING NOW A MATTER OF THAWING EARTH

Land Where Gold Lies Mass of Ice Frozen for Thousands of Years.

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER.

[Copyright: 1916: By Frank G. Carpenter.]

DAWSON, Yukon Territory.—You have all heard of the Klondike, the treasure cave of Jack Frost in this faraway land of the north, where gold dust and gravel and bowlders are cemented together by perpetual ice.

You know of the thousands who rushed here a few years ago and of the hundreds who went back loaded with gold. You may have heard how the district has produced gold by the ton, and how within ten years after its discovery the output footed up more than $100,000,000.

That was the Klondike of the past. I write of the Klondike of today.

First Gold from Pockets.

The first gold came from large pockets. The icy earth was thawed down to bed rock with wood fires, and the yellow grains dragged forth with pick and shovel and the sweat of man's brow. It took rich dirt to pay for the labor, and when the cream had been skimmed the individual miners left almost in a body. Then the new Klondike began, which continues in the Klondike of today.

Companies with millions of capital brought in the latest of mining machinery. They thawed the ice with steam points, and forced electricity to dredge the gold bearing gravel from the depths of the earth and wash it to get out the gold. They turned the course of rivers and carried them in pipes over the mountains to wash down the hills.

They handled millions of tons of material, but each ton has yielded a few grains of pure gold, and altogether they have produced almost as much wealth as came forth in the first ten years by the work of the individual miners.

Beautiful Valley Desolated.

The mining of the present is more destructive than that of the past. The fires of Sodom and Gomorrah left paths no more marked than the tracks of the dredges and the hydraulic giants. They have walked over some of the most beautiful parts of the world and left them the abomination of desolation.

Twenty years ago there was no more beautiful valley on earth than that of the Klondike. It was bordered by grass covered hills that rolled over one another, rising here and there to far above the height of the Blue Ridge. Both hills and valleys were covered with woods. In the open spaces the grass reached to your knees or your waist, and there were wild flowers everywhere.

As soon as gold was discovered men began to chop down the trees. Lumber was worth $100 and upward a thousand feet, and little pine logs brought $3 each. The miners thawed their way down into the gravel and defaced the landscape with piles of half frozen muck. A little later the dredgers came in and turned the land upside down. They stripped off the surface of grass and stumps, and plowed the beds of the creeks in great furrows thirty feet deep, until they now are as bare and as dreary as any part of the Sahara.

Bare and Dreary as Sahara.

The two corporations which have done most of this work are the Yukon Gold company, commonly known as the Guggenheims, and Joseph W. Boyle, Ltd., or the Mining Company of the Canadian Klondike. Each of these is a great gold manufacturing proposition which is different from any other in the mining camps of the world. In this letter I shall treat of the Yukon Gold only.

But let me give you some pictures of the Klondike of today. I took a ride up the valley with Chester A. Thomas, the resident manager of the Yukon Gold company. We had a high powered automobile and flew up the Klondike valley, winding our way in and out through great piles of débris.

We rode along Bonanza and Eldorado creeks, which have been dredged from one end to the other, and along the sides of mountains where they are now sluicing down the bed of the famous White river channel. The whole way was through a mass of gravel, rock, and earth washings. The beds of the rivers and creeks have been plowed in great furrows many feet high.

100 Pounds to the Inch.

There are places where miles of bowlders, pebbles, and broken rock seem to flow in a mighty stream like that of a glacier down the mountains that rise from the valley. Streams of water as big around as the thigh of a man are shooting out of pipes with such a force that they hit the icy gravel at 100 pounds to the inch, and that notwithstanding it is several hundred feet from the pipe mouth to the hill. In other places the water drops from the top of the mountain, washing down the ice melting earth, the whole giving one the impression that a mighty cloudburst has torn down the hills, and that avalanches of earth slides have filled up the valleys.

They have a dozen hydraulic giants which are melting and gouging the hills to save the 10 or 20 cents of gold in each wagon load of the old White river channel. At Juneau I saw them handling ore worth $1.50 to the ton, and it seemed wonderful that it could be done at a profit. Here they are taking out 20 cents' worth of gold to the ton and the cost is so low that it pays.

Every Pinch of Gold Dust Saved.

The amount of gold dust in each ton is as small as the pinch of snuff which your grandmother drew up her nose, and it is evenly mixed through as much sand as two horses can haul on a wagon. Still they can sluice down the sand so that every atom of that pinch of gold dust is saved.

I despair of making you appreciate the difficulties of mining in this icy land of the north. The winters are so cold that the Yukon Gold company cannot work its machinery for more than seven months of the year. The most of the profits are made in the open season of 170 days, and then the work is shut down until next summer.

In addition to the ice of the present is that of the far distant past. In other placer mining regions the earth and rock are free from frost. The gold is sprinkled through them and you have only to dig and wash to get the gold out.

Mass of Ice and Rock.

Here the whole country, with the exception of a foot or so at the surface, is one mass of ice mixed with bowlders, pebbles, and sand that has been perpetually frozen for thousands of years. Its condition dates back to the ice age of the prehistoric past.

The ice goes down to no one knows where. They have sunk diamond drills in some places to a depth of 300 feet and found the earth frozen solid all the way through. The gravel is bedded in the ice, and the ice, sand, and earth remain as hard as stone, no matter how hot the summer.

The conglomerate or frozen mixture is covered by a thin bed of muck, on the top of which grows a layer of arctic moss, the two forming an insulator that preserves the frozen conditions beneath. It is only when the moss and muck are stripped off that the hot summer makes any impression on the glacial ice cap below.

It is sprinkled through this ice, earth, and rock that the gold values lie. There is a little not far from the surface, but the most of the gold is at bedrock, which may be thirty, forty, or fifty feet down. The frozen earth has to be thawed out, inch by inch, and foot by foot, in such a way that it can be swallowed by the dredges that gulp it down at the rate of twenty-six bites to the minute and about one-third of a ton to the bite.

Must Get Jack Frost Out.

They take up the stuff in great buckets which run on an endless chain and throw it into revolving screens. These screens roll the rocks over and over and sift out the gold-bearing sand. They take away the pebbles and great bowlders and turn the sand out upon plates covered with mercury which catches the gold.

The dredges will handle something like 5,000,000 tons of material this year and the amount of gold saved will be several millions of dollars.

Before any such work can be done Jack Frost must be taken out of the ground to be mined.

The dredges have to have all the earth free from frost. The region they work must be thawed down to forty or fifty feet from the surface, and that in great blocks as big as a house, before the excavation can even begin.

The methods of thawing the earth have been reduced to a science. The first miners used wood fires, which they kept burning until they had thawed a shaft down to the gold. Other fires were then built along the bed rock and the earth taken out until they had made great caverns and tunnels far down under the thirty or forty feet of ice overhead.

They used hot stones to aid in the thawing and took out the melted material in wheelbarrows and carried it in buckets to the surface by windlasses like an old fashioned well sweep.

The thawing of today is done by steam generated in great boilers on the top of the ground. The steam is carried through pipes to where needed, and forced into the earth through steel tubes three-fourths of an inch in diameter, and from ten to thirty feet long.

Tube Left In Two or Three Days.

These tubes are really galvanized iron pipe about as big around as my thumb, and, stood upon end, the longest would reach to the roof of a three or four story house. Each tube has a hard metal cap or steel head on the top, and below this an opening where the connection with the main steam pipe is made. The bottom of the tube is pointed and the steel there is so strong that the tube can be driven down into the earth.

The driving is done with the tube standing upright on the ground. It is usually inside a derrick which is often as tall as that of an oil well. A man stands on the derrick holding a sledgehammer weighing twelve pounds, and with this he drives the steam carrying pipe, inch by inch through the earth.

The steam melts the ice as it goes down, and a second man stands at the bottom and twists the pipe this way and that to aid in the work. After a long time bedrock is reached, and the tube is left there for two or three days, oozing forth steam.

Like Porcupine's Quills.

The tubes are so sunk that each softens the frozen earth for a radius of three or more feet around it, and these circles of melting six feet in diameter come together, making the whole of the ground so that it can be worked by the dredges. Hundreds of such pipes have to be sunk, and all are connected by other pipes with the steam forcing plant.

In places the pipes are so thick that they stand out on the back of old Mother Earth like the quills on a porcupine. They soften the earth so that it is dangerous to walk over it until it has cooled. The ground may seem solid, when all at once a man may drop to his knees or his waist in scalding hot mud. The work of thawing is done by skilled men, some receiving from $7 to $10 a day.

Something like 3,000,000 cubic yards of earth is handled this way by the hydraulic giants each year, and this brings out gold to the amount of over $600,000. The average gold contents of the gravel is in the neighborhood of 20 cents per cubic yard, and of this one-half is said to be profit.

Up to the present more than $185,000,000 worth of gold has been taken out of the Klondike, and of that vast sum more than two-fifths has come from mining the low grade earth with modern machinery.

8,000 LA SALLE DEPOSITORS WILL BE PAID 25 PER CENT

Niblack Announces Settlement Will Be Made Only with Those Whose Claims Have Been Allowed.

Announcement was made yesterday by William C. Niblack, receiver of the defunct La Salle Street Trust and Savings bank, that 8,000 depositors of the institution will be paid 25 per cent of their deposits.

The settlements will be made only with the depositors whose claims have been allowed and does not extend to those whose claims are in litigation. More than $800,000 will be paid the depositors, according to Mr. Niblack, if he is "compelled to go out and borrow the money." It is said that the depositors stand a chance of getting 70 per cent of their money and that claims against the bank amount to around $4,000,000.

In accordance with the recent decision of Judge Smith, John F. Jelke, the oleomargarine manufacturer, has paid his full assessment of stock, amounting to $25,000.

KATE ADAMS LAW ENFORCED

Judge Sentences Waiter to Jail for Soliciting for Women for Immoral Purposes.

The first conviction under the Kate Adams law making it possible for a judge to impose a prison sentence on a man found guilty of soliciting for women for immoral purposes was obtained in the Morals court yesterday before Municipal Judge Edward Wade.

John Miller of 636 North Clark street, a waiter, was sentenced to the house of correction for sixty days and fined $1 and costs.

Detective Sergeant James M. Kearney of the Twenty-second street station testified that Miller solicited him July 17 at Twentieth and South State streets. Miller denied the charge.

FEASTS OF MUSIC ON THREE NIGHTS FOR CITY'S PIER

Community Concerts on Week's Program—"Jitney" Boats Carry Thousands.

The Civic Music Association of Chicago has arranged to dedicate the municipal pier with three community concerts. They are to be given tomorrow evening and Wednesday and Friday evenings. Several prominent choral organizations will participate. Following are the programs:

Monday Evening.

Wednesday Evening.

The Association of Commerce Glee club and associates—William L. Tomlins, director. The Civic Music association choruses—Edward Collins, director. The Haydn Choral society—Hugh W. Owen, director.

Friday Evening.

The American Choral society—Daniel Protheroe, director. The Chicago Singverein—William Boeppler, director. The Lincoln Exposition Folk Songs chorus—E. Azalia Hackley, director.

Monday, Wednesday, and Friday.

The Chicago band—William Weil, conductor; William L. Tomlins, leader of community singing.

There was a band concert at the pier last night, and there will be another this afternoon. The harbor board is seeking to arrange for dances in the near future.

Thousands Try "Jitney" Boats.

Thousands were carried to the pier during the day by the new line of "jitney" boats plying between Chicago avenue and the great recreation structure. Employés of the harbor master's office worked all Friday night constructing a dock at the foot of Chicago avenue.

"These boats," said Harbor Master Weckler, "can handle about 2,500 persons every twenty minutes, and this will aid greatly in solving the problem of transportation. We are making arrangements to have small boats running between Lincoln park and the pier stop at Chicago avenue, and boats from Jackson park stop at Van Buren street, both going and returning."

Street Car Changes.

The street car company has put into effect the new scheme for loading passengers returning from the pier. Each car now stops at specified intervals and a policeman is stationed at the doors opening on the street car platform. By this means the crowd is distributed so as to facilitate loading and prevent jamming.

WISCONSIN LABOR UNIONS TO DISCUSS WOMEN'S WAGE.

Federation Will Take Up Question with State Commission—Plans to Strengthen Branches.

Fond du Lac, Wis., July 22.—The Wisconsin Federation of Labor, in session here today, adopted a resolution pledging itself to take up with the state industrial commission the matter of wages, working hours and conditions of female labor, especially in Appleton and Marinette.

Support was pledged in a resolution to affiliate all local metal workers' unions with the newly organized state district of sheet metal workers; strengthening of the bakers' union at Sheboygan; providing for organizing new unions and strengthening old ones in the painting and iron working industries of Oshkosh, Green Bay, Appleton, Neenah, Menasha, and Fond du Lac; providing for the revision of the constitution so as to recognize the Builders' Trade council as a body, and urging demand for their union label.

The federation unanimously adopted a resolution to assess each member in the state one-half cent a day, to be contributed to the support of the striking machinists in Milwaukee.

PERSONAL PROPERTY LEFT IN SMITH WILL IS $500,000.

Fortune of Late Wisconsin Man Believed to Be $15,000,000—Bulk of Property Goes to Widow.

Oshkosh, Wis., July 22.—The will of the late Charles R. Smith of Menasha and reputed to have been the wealthiest man in Wisconsin, was filed in Probate court here today. The petition presenting the will merely states that the value of personal property left by Mr. Smith exceeds $500,000, but men familiar with the affairs of Mr. Smith conservatively place the value of property left by him at from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000.

The widow, Mrs. Isabel B. Smith, is given the homestead premises in Neenah as well as other real estate and contents of the buildings worth many thousands of dollars. The sum of $12,000 is set aside as an annuity to take care of Mrs. Smith. To Mrs. Smith's son by a former marriage, Ronald Brogers, is left $25,000, and the remainder of the property is placed in trust.

POLICE ASKED TO HUNT TWO MISSING YOUNG WOMEN

Father of Clerk Believes She Was Kidnaped in Taxicab—Other Has Movie Aspirations.

Police have been asked to seek Miss Lydia Wiles, 19 years old, who has not been seen by her relatives since last Thursday. She left her home at 6102 Stewart avenue on Thursday morning to go downtown, where she has been clerking through vacation.

"I believe she was kidnaped," said her father to the central police. "She went to work at the usual hour and I think she must have been spirited away in a taxicab."

The police also have been asked to search for Ray Levy, 1529 South Sawyer avenue, a young woman who left her home on Thursday evening and has not returned. It is said she has ambitions to become a pianist in a movie theater.

De Vry Salary Issue Hangs.

Lack of a quorum caused a postponement until Monday of the special meeting of the Lincoln park board which was to have been held yesterday to consider an increase in salary for Cy De Vry, manager of the park zoo.

THE purchase of a downtown fee for $500,000 by the trustees of the Marshall Field estate comprised the most notable feature of the week's real estate market, which made a most satisfactory showing in every department. The variety of the large transactions closed during the week despite the hot weather and other handicaps indicates the substantial condition of the real estate market at the present time, usually a dull period in former years.

The Field estate purchase comprised the southwest corner of State street and Jackson boulevard, 38x100, which was sold by Mrs. Barbet Bloom, wife of Leopold Bloom. The site is occupied in part by the eight story building of Maurice L. Rothschild, dealer in men's clothing.

Trustees Take Title.

Title to the property was taken by the Merchants' Loan and Trust company, Chauncey Keep, Arthur B. Jones, and Marshall and Henry Field acting as trustees for the Field estate. The land is under lease for 100 years and five months from Dec. 1, 1903, at a yearly rental of $20,000, or at the rate of 4 per cent on the purchase price. Mrs. Bloom leased the ground to John C. Fetzer, who was supposed to be acting for Mr. Rothschild.

The purchase price in the present transaction gives the property a valuation of $13,158 a front foot for State street, $5,000 a front foot for Jackson boulevard, and $131.58 a square foot. The board of review values the holding at $546,324, of which $40,000 is in the building.

Gift to Mrs. Bloom.

Some interesting history is revealed in connection with the sale of the property. Since it was originally sold by the government it has changed hands only four times. On Feb. 6, 1869, it was sold for $57,400; July 20, 1870, it brought $80,000; on Feb. 26, 1881, Mr. Bloom bought it for $87,500. He then conveyed it to his wife as a gift.

The sale by Mrs. Bloom came as a surprise in real estate circles. It was generally believed Mrs. Bloom could not be prevailed upon to dispose of the property because she intended it should pass to her daughters, Mrs. Hulda Morris, widow of Herbert Morris; Mrs. Joseph Mayer, wife of a member of Mayer Brothers, wholesale clothiers, and Mrs. L. E. Block, wife of a vice president of the Inland Steel company.

Another important transaction of the week was the lease by the United Vacuum Sweeper company from A. J. and Mary T. Witherell of the property at 2415-45 West Nineteenth street and 2414-44 West Twentieth street for a term of ten years from Jan. 1, 1917, at an aggregate rental of $100,000. Each tract is 132 feet west of Western avenue and is 336x123 feet. The lessee is given an option to purchase the property at any time during the leasing period for $200,000.

VACANT IN GOOD DEMAND; LARGE BUILDINGS PLANNED.

Big Apartments to Go Up in Many Sections of City—John McInnis Buys Ground.

Marked activity was shown during the week in the demand for vacant property for development purposes, and plans were made public for several large buildings.

Albert and H. Boardman Spalding of New York, heirs of the late Martha J. Boardman, have sold to John McInnis, a builder, the vacant premises at the southeast corner of Yates avenue and Seventy-sixth street, 200x130 feet, extending to Phillips avenue, upon which it has a frontage of 210 feet, for a reported consideration of $18,000. The buyer plans to improve the property with a high grade apartment building to cost about $150,000. J. E. Bistor of W. K. Young & Brothers negotiated the transaction.

George O. Gordon has purchased the vacant at 5154-60 South Park avenue, 110x215, from William E. Boylston and Emil A. Wirsching for a reported price of $27,000. Mr. Gordon intends to erect immediately a structure to contain forty-two apartments of two, three, and four rooms each, at a cost of about $125,000, after plans by Architect Thomas R. Bishop. The sellers are said to have bought this property in 1912 for $22,000. Willis & Frankenstein were the brokers.

Katherine and Jeannette O'Hara have purchased from St. Anderw's church of Brewster, N. Y., five frame residences at 6415-25 Dorchester avenue, with 100x150 feet of ground, for a reported price of $9,750. They plan to erect two six apartment buildings to cost $35,000 each which will rent at from $75 to $85 a flat. The deal was negotiated by T. D. O'Hern and C. F. Parker of C. W. Hoff & Co.

MODERN APARTMENTS GOING UP

An apartment structure containing thirty apartments of two and three rooms each is being erected at 5526-30 Kenmore avenue by Harry Goldstine. It will be completed about Aug. 1. Each apartment will have wall beds, built in buffets, and a vacuum cleaning system. The building will contain a dance hall and showers on the first floor. Ottenheimer, Stein & Reichert are the architects.

In the lower picture is shown a model six story fireproof apartment building to be erected by L. B. Patterson on ground he purchased last week from Edward I. Bloom at south Shore boulevard and Seventieth street, fronting the South Shore Country club. The exterior walls of the building will be faced with enamel terra cotta and pressed brick in Gothic design. Each apartment will consist of twelve rooms, the main rooms consisting of dining room, sun parlor, and living room. The dining room, l'orangerie, and living room occupy the entire boulevard frontage of seventy feet. Mr. Patterson says he plans to make the structure superior to anything on the south side and with few equals on the North side. The apartments will rent for $6,000 a year each. Mr. Patterson acquired the ground at a cost of $50,000. Ernest H. Young of W. K. Young & Bro. represented both parties in the ground transaction.

620 ACRE TRACT BRINGS $100,000

A. T. McIntosh & Co. Get Spalding Land Near Harvey for Subdivision.

The Spalding tract of 620 acres in and west of Harvey, owned for many years by the A. G. Spalding Land association, has been bought by Arthur T. McIntosh & Co., subdivision operators, from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, for an indicated price of $100,000.

The main body of the tract lies between Ashland and Western avenues and One Hundred and Forty-first and One Hundred and Fifty-fifth streets, with a small portion extending west to California avenue.

Improvements, such as sewer, water, gas, and electric light connections, are already in a greater part of the tract, which is composed of about 5,200 residential lots and fifty-five acres of factory property. The holding will be placed upon the market in the near future. The transaction was closed by John B. Ackerman, acting for all persons interested.

Another transaction in acres involves the sale by the Mark Skinner estate to the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, of a tract of forty-six acres in Berwyn, at the northwest corner of Oak Park avenue and Thirty-first street, for a reported price of $46,000, subject to $39,000 incumbrance in the form of a purchase money mortgage. The tract fronts 1,200 feet on Oak Park avenue and 1,400 feet on Thirty-first street, and extends north to the Illinois Central railroad. The deal was closed by Willis & Frankenstein.

J. P. SEEBURG PAYS $40,000 FOR SHERIDAN ROAD HOME.

There were several interesting deals in residence property last week, the principal one being that by which Isaac Ettelson sold to Justus P. Seeburg, president of the J. P. Seeburg Piano company, the residence at 2824 Sheridan road, 166 feet north of Diversey boulevard, 50x202 feet, east front, for a stated price of $40,000, subject to $20,000 incumbrance. An attractive three story brick dwelling containing fifteen rooms, with a garage in the rear, occupies the ground. The deal was closed by O. L. Brockett of Gordon Strong & Co.

Jennie R. Price sold to L. Lochner the vacant property at the southeast corner of Bennett avenue and Sixty-ninth street, 100x134 feet, for a reported price of $11,000. The buyer plans to improve the site with a bungalow to cost about $35,000. George C. Bour Jr. of George C. Bour & Co. represented both parties.

John A. Garcia has bought from Frederick W. Croll the ten room residence at 6029 University avenue, overlooking the University of Chicago, for a reported price of $12,000. C. F. Parker and T. D. O'Hern of C. W. Hoff & Co. closed the deal.

The old frame residence at the northeast corner of Greenwood avenue and Forty-eighth street, west front, 145x298 feet on the north and 208 feet on the south, has been transferred by Annie Hitchcock to the First Trust and Savings bank for an indicated price of $39,000.

Leases and Loans.

A NOTEWORTHY feature of the week's realty market was the recording of leases which showed that the Furniture Exhibition company, of which James A. Pugh is president, pays an aggregate rental of nearly $2,500,000 for the occupancy of three six story buildings at Illinois street and Peshtigo court.

The Furniture Exhibition property is owned by the Chicago Canal and Dock company and embraces a total street frontage of 1,190 feet. The largest of the parcels is on the southeast corner of Illinois street and Peshtigo court. It is 470x158 feet. It is under lease from Sept. 1, 1908, to April 30, 1929, for a term rental of $1,029,200, which is at the rate of $37,350 for the first eight months and $49,800 a year for the rest of the time. It is improved with a building which cost $500,000.

The second parcel involved lies 234 feet west of Peshtigo court, fronting north in Illinois street. It is 450x158 feet and is under lease from Aug. 1, 1905, to April 30, 1926, for a total rental of $878,973, or $31,185 for the first nine months and $42,432 yearly for twenty years.

The third parcel, 270x158 feet, lies at the southwest corner of Illinois street and Peshtigo court. Its lease is from Oct. 1, 1907, to April 30, 1928, for a term rental of $541,588, or $15,351 for the first seven months and $26,312 annually for twenty years. The buildings on this ground cost $270,000.

Joseph Beifeld has just closed a new lease with J. Ogden Armour for the ground occupied as the White City amusement park, containing about thirteen and one-half acres, at the southwest corner of Sixty-third street and South Park avenue. The lease is for a term of ninety-eight and one-half years from July 1, 1916, and provides for a yearly rental of $10,000 for the first eighteen months, $12,000 for the next seventeen years, $15,000 for the following thirty-one years, and 5 per cent on a fair cash value of the ground for the remainder of the term.

The rental for the latter period must not be less than $15,000 a year, the lease provides. The amusement company had a twenty year lease upon the ground, of which Mr. Beifeld has obtained control.

The Harder Fireproof Storage Warehouse and Van company has obtained a loan of $250,000, payable serially with 5½ per cent interest, through the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, property securing the loan comprising the warehouses of the company at the northwest corner of Fortieth street and Calumet avenue, 175x160; 4714 Cottage Grove avenue, and 1117 East Sixty-third street, 50x150 feet.

The loan was made for the purpose of refunding existing incumbrances and for expansion of the company's business. The company intends to improve property at 4710-12 Cottage Grove avenue with an addition to cost about $50,000, and it is now erecting a six story warehouse at Sixty-eighth street and Stony Island avenue, with the first floor leased for ten years to the Stony Island Trust and Savings bank. Albert J. Allen & Co. closed the loan.

The Jones Foundry company has given to the Central Trust company a trust deed to its property lying between North avenue and Noble street and the Chicago and Northwestern railroad tracks, and its new plant at Twelfth street and Forty-sixth avenue, as security for a loan of $225,000 for ten years at 6 per cent.

The Catholic bishop of Chicago has just obtained two loans aggregating $120,000. One loan is for $70,000, five years, at 4½ per cent, secured by the St. Patrick church and school property at the northwest corner of Adams and Desplaines streets, 303x189 feet, the Chicago Title and Trust company being trustee. The other loan is for $50,000. It was obtained from the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company on church property at the northeast corner of Huron street and Racine avenue, 46x130 feet in extent, and other property.

NORTH SIDE REALTY MEN TO GIVE A "STAG" OUTING.

The second annual stag outing of the Edgewater and Rogers Park Real Estate Men's association will be held Thursday, Aug. 3, at the "House that Jack Built," Milwaukee avenue and the Desplaines river. A feature will be an automobile parade through Edgewater and Rogers Park before starting on the trip to the outing point.

Following last year's custom, the offices of members of the organization will be closed for the day. A program of athletic contests, including racing, tennis, and other sports, with numerous prizes for each contest, has been arranged.

The outing committee is composed of Charles H. Walker, chairman; Paul E. Hartung, and E. S. Smith. Presidents of the Cook County and Chicago Real Esate boards and the South and West Side Renting Men's associations have been invited

OUTER BUSINESS PROPERTY ACTIVE IN ALL SECTIONS

Outside of the one downtown deal, the principal feature of the week was the large number of transactions in outlying business property.

The most notable deal comprised the purchase by Robert H. Lanyon, president of the Acme Malting company, by master's deed from the P. H. Rice Malting company of the malting plant and warehouse building at the northwest corner of Bloomingdale and Kilbourn avenues, for an expressed consideration of $114,585. The ground area of the plant is approximately 600x500 feet. The property has been occupied by the Acme company for some time under a lease.

$80,000 Sawyer Avenue Corner.

Israel Cohen has sold to Edwin A. Roser the business property at the northwest corner of Lawrence and Sawyer avenues, south front, 58x125 feet in extent, for an indicated consideration of $80,000, subject to $36,000 incumbrance. The property is improved with a recently completed structure containing stores, offices, and twelve apartments.

The buyer conveyed in part payment the premises at 4650-56 Rockwell street, sixty-six feet south of Leland avenue, east front, 75x100 feet, improved with a building containing four stores, four apartments, and four garages in the rear, for an indicated consideration of $37,000. The deal was negotiated by H. H. Burke of Gage, Kirk & Eaton and H. I. Graves.

Sullivan Buys Corner.

Another deal on the west side was the purchase by Roger Sullivan from J. J. Guinan of the property 125x170 feet at the northwest corner of Washington boulevard and Carpenter street, for $80,000, according to the revenue stamps affixed. The property adjoins the old Second regiment armory, recently acquired by Mr. Sullivan. The armory property has been leased to the United States for a garage for the postoffice department. The new acquisition is to be used for a similar purpose, it is announced.

The store, office, and flat premises at the northeast corner of Twelfth street and Hermitage avenue, 97x100 feet in extent, have been sold by Herman R. Misch to Abraham Bernstein for a reported consideration of $55,000. Mr. Bernstein gave in part payment the property at 207 South Halsted street, 25x91 feet, 65 feet south of Adams street, for a reported price of $20,000. The deal was closed by George S. Lurie & Co. The same brokers also sold to Mr. Misch 50x125 feet at 3312-17 North Marshfield avenue for a reported price of $10,000. This property adjoins the Marshfield theater, which Mr. Misch recently bought.

Albert Riemenschneider has purchased from Morris Perlman the warehouse property on Canal street 75 feet north of Forquer street, with an east frontage of 68 feet and a depth of 121 feet, for an indicated consideration of $60,000, subject to $36,000 incumbrance. Allowing nothing for the improvements, the property is given a front foot value of about $882, which is regarded a good price for that vicinity.

AUGUSTANA HOSPITAL TO ERECT $250,000 BUILDINGS.

Augustana hospital will in the near future have a new group of hospital buildings, which will represent an expenditure of about $250,000, on the southwest side.

The Augustinian Society of Illinois, which represents the hospital, maintained by the Deaconess Institution of the Swedish Evangelical Lutheran church, has taken title from the Chicago Title and Trust company to a tract of forty lots extending from the northeast corner of Sixty-third street and Fairfield avenue, with 266x591 feet of ground, for an indicated price of $30,000.

Plans for the proposed hospital have not yet been definitely decided upon, but it is understood the group will contain a main hospital building, with two or three wings, nurses' home, superintendent's home, and quarters for employés.

THE HERO OF CARRIZAL—Capt. Lewis S. Morey and his wife photographed in El Paso after his return from Mexico. Capt. Morey was second in command of the Tenth cavalry, which was attacked by Mexicans using machine guns while Capt. Boyd and Gen. Gomez were holding a parley. Capt. Morey, wounded during the fight, dragged himself to a hole 2,000 yards from the field, where he wrote his famous report which contained the sentences, "When we were within 300 yards the Mexicans opened fire, and a strong one, before we fired a shot. . . . At about 9 o'clock one platoon of troop K fell back. . . . Capt. Boyd, a man told me, was killed. I am hiding in a hole and have one other wounded man and three men with me." Carried part way across the desert, he commanded his comrades to take his report and desert him. A rescue party found him.

AUSTRALIAN ARTILLERY DRILL—The fact that her colonies were able to supply fresh troops and large contingents made it possible for Great Britain to begin her big offensive in June. The photograph shows recruits of an Australian gun crew practicing and limbering up with a field howitzer.
